New Zealand's Pigs. Pig raising is one of New Zealand's most profitable occupations. The main food of New Zealand pigs is skim milk, supplemented with roots, grain and molasses. The latter is the mainstay of the dairy farmer in finishing off his stock, the proportion of meal increasing until the bacon weight of 140 to 160 pounds is reached.

The Great Ice Age. It has been known during a long time that in western Europe man existed during the glacial epoch. We now know that the great ice age consisted of different glacial times separated by interglacial times. In glacial times the snow line dropped 3,000 feet or 4,000 feet below its present level in the Alps, whereas in interglacial periods it lay about 1,000 feet higher than at present. Thus the temperature seems to have been higher in the interglacial periods than it is now.

HAT FOR MID-SEASON WEAR

The mid-season chapeau offers quite a problem to be solved by the woman who wishes to be neither too far ahead of the season nor to purchase a hat whose life will cover only the space of a few weeks. She must of necessity choose a style whose materials are a compromise between winter and spring. In the fetching hat above this is gracefully arrived at by a combination of satin, lace and plumes. It has a flat, round crown and up-turned rolling brim of black satin with cream lace applied on the underside of the brim. Two graceful white feathers are the sole trimming.

CATTLE MARKET IS STRONG AND STEADY

The Portland Union Stock Yards Company reports as follows: Receipts for the week have been, cattle 1573; calves 82; hogs 1540, sheep 4559; horses 25. The cattle market has been steady to strong at a very high range of prices throughout the week. Sellers have been predicting a higher market, but the larger handlers of cattle in the Northwest as a matter of fact have contracted enough supplies to guarantee them against famine until mid-summer, and in some instances later. When beef reaches a certain altitude consumers take the matter in hand and buying falls off. Paying present prices for cattle on a speculative basis is not considered safe. Leading packers are of the opinion, except in rare instances, that the market will not go higher. The hog market advanced a dime during the week. There was only a medium supply and the offerings were snapped up eagerly at the prevailing strong prices. The sheep market was steady to strong at the previous week's range of prices.

Guides in Japan. Once a person has visited Japan and engaged the services of a Japanese guide he exists forever in the good book and graces of the guide. Always at Christmas and frequently two or three other times during the year he receives some little gift. Japan is the only country in the world where the government takes sufficient interest in tourists to take under its supervision the guide fraternity. So strict is the regulation that it is a rare thing for any guide to receive an unfavorable report.--Chicago Tribune.

Cooked in a Knapsack. Charles XII. of Sweden invented the first portable military fireless cooker. He had a knapsack lined with hay to strap to a soldier's back. When starting on a march a big chicken was split open and the inside dressed clean and then filled with butter. In the chicken was placed a small cannon ball of hot iron. The hot cooking chicken was then placed in the hay knapsack. When the camp was pitched at evening the meat was deliciously cooked and all soaking in butter.
