PRETTY DESIGN FOR A HAT.

A picturesque shape is shown in the sketch above and is made from one of the soft straw plateaus of fine ecru straw. This is folded forward, forming a double brim between which is laid a garland of shaded pink roses. The back of the hat is filled with many loops of wide taffeta ribbon in the shade of the straw. Three long ends of ribbon fall from these loops to below the shoulders at the back. These double-brim hats bid fair to be popular and are especially becoming and appropriate to young girls.

TITANIC GOING FULL SPEED, SAYS STOKER

NEW YORK, May 25.—Sworn testimony that the Titanic was steaming ahead at full speed when it collided with the monster iceberg was given by William Alden Smith, chairman of the Titanic investigating committee here today by Frederick Barrett, a Titanic stoker, who was working in that section of the ship damaged most by the collision. Chairman Smith, who was accompanied by Admiral Richard M. Watts, took Barrett's deposition in the stokehole of the liner Olympic, a sister ship of the Titanic, which is in port here.

Barrett testified that at the time of the crash a white light burned in the stokehole, indicating that the vessel was going ahead at full speed. At least 24 of the Titanic's boilers were going, he said, when the collision came. Replying to questions asked by Senator Smith and Admiral Watts, who accompanied Smith to explain nautical technicalities, Barrett said: "I was on duty in the forward section on the night of the explosion. I was talking to Second Engineer Haskett when an order suddenly came down from the bridge to stop the engines. Simultaneously a red light was flashed in the signal box. I cried to Haskett to shut off the damper. As I did there was a crash and Haskett and I jumped through the doorway from number six section where we stood to section number five. "The door barely missed us as it closed and I know that several other stokers were cut off from escape. I hurried above and when I looked down again there was eight feet of water in section five. Then the lights were extinguished there.

PRICE OF WOOL IS BOOSTED IN PORTLAND

Portland mills, with hurry up orders for supplies, are bidding up the price of wool in the Willamette valley, and as high as 22c a pound is being paid for extra choice.

Movement at Willamette valley points is increasing considerably and the trade is absorbing all offerings. The mills are interested practically entirely in the better grade stock, and are not seeking the coarse fleeces. For that reason, while extra choice is quoted as high as 22c, the lower grade stock is not moving above 18c, with medium to fine at 20c.

Interest in the wool market in eastern Oregon and Idaho is increasing. Little noise is being made by dealers in making purchases in order to secure other supplies before growers become aware of the improved demand.
