"It is only fitting and proper to say a few brief words upon thisoccasion in fond remembrance of our unknown dead. We mean by our unknown dead the boys who left their homes and firesides and answered the call of their country, and in the sharp conflicts that followed both on land and sea the reaper of death halted their march and they laid their burdens down on the line of action, and their patriotic activities were at an end. "We stand here today in honor of our soldier dead, and we decorate the graves of the soldiers as a token of our appreciation of their patriotic devotion in defending this nation's flag and its institutions.

"While we have decorated the graves of those whose last resting place is marked by artificial means, we have been taught to kindly remember the boys who were mowed down on the field of battle, far away from home and loved ones, and hurriedly buried where they fell and whose remains are mouldering into indistinguishriage of Ferdy Roaby to a young lady able dust in the graves unmarked and

"We also cast a flower upon the water in remembrance of the sailor who Mrs. VanWinkle returned home laid down his life in naval conflict, Monday from Jasper, where she has and as the sun was sinking in the evening tide, and the smoke of con-flict had cleared away, the remains of our soldier dead were lowered into the ocean blue to remain until the last roll is called. "We now enjoy our public institu tions which are the product of constitutional authority, and we owe our devotion to all members of the military forces who laid down their lives to stay the tide of rebellion, and to all of those whose graves are unknown, we cast a tear upon the ground and a flower upon the water."

Persons who attended the exercis es at the Shively Theatre said that Mr. Brownell's address was the best he ever delivered. After telling how the Federal armies saved the Union from destruction, he declared that the example set by the heroes should be an inspiration to the people of today. He said the history of the world showed that unless the peple are constantly on guard, performing their full duties at all times, their liberty will be taken from them.

"Our citizenship must live up to its highest ideals," said the speaker, "or the country will be destroyed. All men should work for civic righteous ness, and no man, corporation or in-terest should have or enjoy under the law or by or through the law any special rights or privileges over or above his fellows. The greatest protection that the country can have is through the education of its citizenship and the largest participation of the individual citizen in our public life. The two highest positions are service in the jury box and the exercise of the right of franchise." they telephone and get the facts.

Mr. Brownell was in fine voice and and their friends.
