THE SUMMER FROCK.

Simple Linen Tub Costume Very Popular.

WHITE LINEN FROCK.

Never were linen tub frocks so adorably simple and unpretentious. This graceful model of white linen buttons all the way down the front and is smartened with a broad collar and cuffs hand embroidered in black wash cotton enlivened with touches of pink. White buttoned boots show under the skirt hem in a most attractive fashion.

WHAT VOTES HAVE NOT DONE.

Women Without Ballots Have Been Good at Municipal Housekeeping.

"Men for generations have proved what the ballot cannot do," writes Anna Steese Richardson in McCall's Magazine. "Capable, even brilliant business and professional men, armed with the ballot, have not been able to keep cities clean and beautiful nor to run them economically and honestly.

"The so called experts or officeholders, voted into place by these clever men, have become, like unguided, un-supervised servants in an unguarded kitchen, slovenly, dirty and often dishonest. The woman with the ballot will discover that she must follow municipal servants into the municipal kitchen and see that her orders are obeyed.

"At times she may even have to roll up her sleeves and tackle the work in her own efficient, unwavering, housewifely fashion. Let her refuse to do this and she will find that the ballot in her hand, as in that of her husband, her son or her brother, does nothing for her city, sex or family."

Sashes and Streamers.

A charming novelty is a long sash of liberty satin that fell some distance beyond the gown of the wearer and formed a sort of little train. We shall probably see many of these sashes this summer on the lighter frocks—the spotted net, the marquisette and the like. Sometimes, however, the streamer will take its rise on the hat, and this is quite as picturesque and graceful, though it has the inconvenience of dragging the hat backward and disarranging the hair. For both purposes soft satin is used. On the hat it starts as the trimming of an immense cape-line of fine straw, tuscany or chip, tied in a monstrous two looped bow at the back, and thence one long end descends to the ground. One woman who had adopted this hat had fastened her ribbon en route to her left shoulder with a diamond safety pin, leaving a fairly loose curve to allow of any movements of the head and not disturb the set of the hat.

The Tailor Made Shirt.

Twilled silk shirts are being made the accompaniment of tailored skirts, and the shirts when cut in the corselet manner have an outside belt of soft suede and show above the belt a double frill, scant in front and at the sides and rather closely plaited at the back.

There are numerous forms of collar for the twilled silk shirt, but the favorite is of a turnover shape, with pointed fronts. In some models eyelid holes are punched, and the sides are drawn together by means of narrow silk or cord knotted and left to fall with tasseled ends.

The shirts are made in the simplest possible manner, with three large pearl buttons down the center, or they are given no visible fastening at all, the necessary opening being concealed beneath the box plaited front.

Something New.

The sanitary envelope moistener is something quite new and is really very useful as well as attractive. It is simply a small china box about the size and shape of a lip salve case with a few small holes at the top through which the water comes to moisten the envelope and stamp.

Hats on in Church.

Pepps shows that in the seventeenth century both men and women wore their hats to worship. "To church," he writes, "and heard a simple fellow open the praise of church musique and exclaiming against men wearing their hats on in the church." Later he notes that he saw a minister "preach with his hat off, which I never saw before." The hat was then an integral part of both male and female costume, and Pepps catches "a strange cold in my head by flinging off my hat at dinner."

OREGON CITY WOMEN THANKED FOR ROSES

The Portland Railway, Light & Power Company has asked the Morning Enterprise to thank the residents of Oregon City for their generous donation of roses, which were sent to Seattle for distribution at the convention of the National Electric Light Association. The roses were tendered to the delegates as a compliment from Oregon. W. T. Buchanan, publicity agent of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, writes in part as follows:

"Among the roses that the company gathered up were a large number from Oregon City, and the ladies of your city were very generous in their donations in this respect. It certainly was a fine act, and I might add, the roses were the hit of the convention. Many of the delegates wondered how a city having on its hands a rose festival where millions of roses were used, could find a sufficient number to send to a convention in a neighboring state for the pleasure of the delegates."

How Horace Walpole Dressed.

In the early part of the eighteenth century, says the author of "Social England," a fashionable gentleman ordinarily wore a toupee of curls raised high over his forehead. For daily wear most gentlemen were dressed like George I. dark tie, wig, plain coat, waistcoat and breeches of snuff colored cloth and stockings of the same color; for ceremony, like Horace Walpole, in a lavender suit, the waistcoat embroidered with a little silver or of white silk embroidered in the tambour frame, partridge silk stockings, gold buckles, ruffles, lace frill and powdered wig. The linen for shirts was bought in Holland, costing from 10 to 14 shillings the English ell.
