LAST CAR LEAVES FOR OREGON CITY AT MIDNIGHT

MARGARET ILLINGTON IN "KINDLING" AT HEILIG THEATRE. The charming and favorite actress, Margaret Illington and her splendid supporting Company will be seen in her latest play success, "Kindling," at Heilig Theatre, Seventh and Taylor or street for an engagement of seven nights, beginning today, June 23. Special price matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

MARGARET ILLINGTON

Margaret Illington, classed among the greatest of the American emotional actresses, will commence a week's engagement at the Heilig Theatre, Seventh and Taylor streets, tonight with special priced matinees Wednesday and Saturday. In Charles Kenyon's intensely gripping American play "Kindling,"

Miss Illington's work in this play is said to be remarkable. Her rise from a fair success, such as her portrayal of the role of Marie Vosin in Helmi Bernstein's "The Thief," and later in other society dramas in which she had those accessories dear to female star-gowns, beautiful gowns, to enhance her charm—to the character of Maggie Schultze in "Kindling," in which she has nothing but her own wonderful personality to depend on, is nothing less than a triumph in her art.

"Kindling" is a truly interesting play that has to do with the struggles of a young woman of the elements in the lower East Side, New York. Her husband, a stevedore, is one of those dedicated, but intelligent men, who give much of their time to attendance at Cooper Union, thereby gaining much knowledge that at times unfortunately, works to their disadvantage.

Henie has come to the conclusion that children born to those in their circumstances have no chance in life; they grow up weak and a burden to themselves. He transplants his ideas to Maggie, telling her that he would rather destroy a child born to them than have it grow up amid such surroundings. All this happens during Maggie's expected maternity, but Henie has not been made familiar with his wife's condition. Through fear of what he might do, she keeps him in ignorance, and when a friend tells her of the advantages of the West, she decides to raise money sufficient to take her husband and herself to Wyoming, where children grow healthy. In her desperation she steals, at first baby ribbon and trinkets; then a diamond brooch, which she pawns for enough to take them West. She is, of course, found out, and the climax comes when her husband takes all the blame for the thefts, and tells her he loves her for it.

thoughts, and so great does she influence Sir Oliver that she weans him from his purpose to destroy himself gets him interested in the inhabitants of Apple Blossom Court (the name of the section in which she lives) and soon arouses in him a new idea of life, something new to do and think about. In the end everything comes out right and for the good of everyone. It is a delightful, happy play that makes one better for the seeing of it, though it is one filled with big dramatic moments and climaxes. It will continue at the Baker all this week with matinees Sunday and Saturday and including the popular bargain night Monday.

BRYAN URGED TO AID HARMONY MOVE

The Liebler & Co., play contracted for by Manager Baker for the present season of Baker Stock Company have proved by far the greatest successes both artistically and financially of all. They have included the Fourth Estate Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, Alias Jimmy Valentine, The Deep Purple and now, opening today matinee for the week will come the Dawn of a Tomorrow, a superb and realistic play of London Slum life first produced in New York by Eleanor Robson and afterward on the road and in this city at the Heilig last winter by Gertrude Elliott. This will, of course, be its first Stock production and Alice Fleming will play the title role with Harry Hilliard in that of Oliver Holt and the entire popular company in the different fascinating parts. The story concerns a certain elderly British Lord who has been a great financial power and who upon learning that he is soon expected to break down and lose, his mind, determines upon suicide and to accomplish this fares which is not broad enough to comprehend many who differ widely in their views on minor points. It will have a right wing, a left wing and a center, all coordinate parts of one and the same political body. "The Democratic party stands united on the cardinal points above stated it has chosen a national committee with power to arrange for its national convention. I appeal to you as the great leader for whom I have cast my vote in former presidential campaigns as one agreeing with you on these points, though differing from you as to some others, to use your commanding influence to secure harmony at Baltimore, not by opposing the choice of any particular individual as chairman of the convention but rather in line of emphasizing points of agreement instead of points of difference. I am leaving the national committee to act on the recommendation of the sub-committee as they think most wise. "Let the Republicans enjoy the monopoly of pre-convention personalities."

THIS DOG IS LIKE T. R.—A GYMNAST

"Rowdy," a Shepherd dog, owned by H. S. Bean of Gladstone, is probably one of the most intelligent dogs in the world. His intelligence is almost human, and the tricks he performs are wonderful. While Mr. Bean was visiting at a home in this city Saturday, the animal performed several tricks. It was told to sit on a pile of shingles and although there were several piles of lumber in the yard the dog did as it was told. The dog was then told to go into the yard, where there was a wheelbarrow, and to climb on it. For several minutes the dog looked for the wheelbarrow and then ran to it. The dog was told to sit on a cement wall, the master not telling it where the wall was. The dog soon found it. The dog climbed a step ladder, and upon reaching the top stood on his hind feet. Mr. Bean has no trouble whatever in teaching his pet tricks, and the dog delights in performing them. "Rowdy" is seven years old, and is a pet of the Bean family. He is also a mathematician, and never fails to get the correct answer.
