MONG the foreign representatives at the Mohonk peace conference were Rustom Rustomjee and his wife. They are members of the Parsee sect, descendants of the ancient Persians who were driven to India at the time of the Mohammedan conquest of their own country. The Parsees are the most enlightened and progressive class of East Indians, although there are only about 90,000 of them in the country. They are prominent in educational, mercantile and political activities. Mr. Rustomjee is the owner of the Oriental Review, published at Poona, one of the most powerful organs of public opinion in western India. Mrs. Rustomjee is a thoroughly emancipated woman, interested in public affairs and not disdaining bridge, in which she and the other members of her women's club frequently indulge.

STUNG By College Students

By AGNES L BOYD

Two young men stood on the platform of a railway station waiting for these unfortunates?" a train. At the other end were three young ladies also ready for departure. Now, the two men were college students, and if there is anything else in not yet shown itself. The collegian is power, he kept a straight face unique. He usually tooks like a man, but when sifted down is three out of four parts boy. If he would take as much pains in his studies as in the Anyway, he wouldn't know it to be a invention of pranks he would be learned indeed. Usually his studies don't interest him, while his pranks are his who is blind? The expression on the girls' faces as they looked up changed from irritation at having a stranger thrust among them to pity. One girl moved aside, and the blind man was guided into the vacant seat by his friend.

"This is no intrusion upon your conidences," said the latter, "for the gentleman is not only stone blind, but a deaf mute. He can neither see, hear or talk."

Having said this and thanked the girls for their courtesy, he took a seat were well nigh too much for him. Forin another part of the car, drew a tunately a trainman called his station, newspaper from his pocket and began and this helped him to keep a straight Turtles and Their Eggs.

Turtles which weigh more than 150 pounds are not in demand, as the flesh becomes coarse with age. But these reptiles grow to 800 pounds and meas ure seven feet in length

The eggs of the green turtle, a great delicacy, are generally deposited in the sand to nests of sixty If not found by man or eaten by rats or birds they are hatched out by the heat of the sun in about eight or nine weeks, and the young turtles at once make for the sea, where many of them fall victims to crabs or other fish.

National Headdresses, There is no such thing as a national headdress in America. Even the millions of immigrants and descendants of immigrants from countries possess ing a characteristic headgear promptly discard any such distinguishing mark during their first week in the new world. Perhaps the fact that the English dominated our early history may account for our lack of peculiar headgear, for England is the only country in Europe which has not a distinctive national headdress.

Royal Women Gamblers. Marie Antoinette was a slave to cards. On one occasion she played for thirty-six hours at a sitting with but an intermission of a couple of hours. "The play at the queen's table at Fontainebleau," wrote the Emperor Joseph II., "was like that in a common gambling house-people of all kinds were there and mingled without decorum. Great scandal was caused by the fact that several of the ladles
