WHITE SERGE AND BLACK SILK

After all is said the black and white combination, especially for street wear, is conceded to be the smartest. An attractive little suit of white serge sketched above argues forcibly in defense of this opinion. The straight closely fitting coat has a smart diagonal closing which is accentuated by the band of white lace which follows the coat edge and continues on the skirt. There are broad, round cornered revers and deep collar of black satin trimmed with buttons covered with the white serge. This order is reversed on the skirt and coat portions, the closing being affected by means of black satin buttons on the serge.

HOP MARKET TO CONTINUE DULL

The outlook is for continued dullness in the hop market, with possibly a further decline in values, both in the case of spots and futures. In all quarters now growers and dealers alike are mainly concerned with the coming crop, the prospect for which was never better at this time of the year, and the market as a consequence is undergoing a process.

For the time quotations on 1912s range from 18 to 23 cents, but at these figures there is no great demand, and it is the belief of some members of the trade that the new crop when ready for the market will sell at even lower figures. Taking this view of the situation, these traders naturally are not anxious to take on anything like liberal supplies at going quotations.

For 1911s the demand is limited in the extreme and the market nominal, with 27 to 27 1/2 cents the general quotations. Small deals in last year's growth are reported from time to time, but at the best the interest in 1911s is slack and the indications are that last year's hops from this time on will be an unimportant factor in the market.
