TWO BOXES BORN AGAIN.
A handsome piece of furniture can be made out of a few boxes, a sash curtain and a little stain and varnish. Julia V. M. Smith describes in Farm and Home how her father made her a combination writing desk and bookcase.
First, he took one of the boxes and smoothed it off on all sides. Then he fitted shelves into it. A smaller box was smoothed off in the same manner as the first, and its sides were cut off at an angle, so as to form the slanting sides of the desk. This box was nailed on top of the first. It was divided into compartments by the putting in of little shelves.
The desk cover was a whole board and was fastened to the lower part of the desk with hinges, so that it might be closed when not in use. When the cover is open, it rests on two sticks which slide in and out of two cases made for them, placed at the joining of the two boxes.
Fasteners such as are used for ordinary sash curtains were used to hold up the brass rod upon which the curtain was hung. The whole desk was given a coat of walnut stain and a pretty curtain was provided. The result was a very attractive and convenient piece of furniture, at a minimum cost and with a little labor.

Famous Old Colonial Church.
St. Michael's, in Charleston, S. C., at the time of its completion in 1761 was the finest church edifice in the United States and one of the very few entirely of masonry construction, including the tower as far as the belfry. It now stands apparently as firm as the day it was dedicated. Work on it was begun in 1732. Like almost all the colonial churches, this one suffered vicissitudes during the Revolutionary war. Its rector was a Tory and was compelled to resign, leaving the church affairs in a somewhat chaotic condition. Materially it suffered through the loss of its leaden roof, which was removed to furnish bullets for the colonial riles.—Argonaut.

Self Denial.
The key to success in any department of life is self denial. Idleness, laziness, wastefulness come from lack of it. While industry, frugality, economy, thrift and a saving habit are the result of it.

Very Intimate.
Louise—Do you know Clara well?
Julia—No. She lets me see her comb her hair.—Life.

Get an Accident Coupon

SHANTUNG COAT SUIT

A distinctive little coat suit of natural color shantung is sketched above. The cutaway coat closes with a single button and the edges of the deep point thus acquired are finished with narrow pleated ruffles of tobacco brown satin. This satin is also applied in the form of odd shaped revers which are trimmed with crystal buttons. The skirt closes slightly to the left of the front, the over-lapping edge finished by an applied piece of the satin similar to that which simulates revers. The satin is also used for the wide turn-back cuffs. With this is worn a hat whose crown is of silk in the shade of the shantung and rolling brim is covered with tobacco brown satin. A feather ornament of brown and tan trims the sides.

WOOL MARKET STRONG BUT TRADE IS LIGHT

The wool market continues strong in tone, but trade in this state now is on a small scale as compared with that of a few weeks ago. In both Eastern and Western Oregon the bulk of the 1912 clip has passed out of first hands, and with buyers offering good prices and sellers disposed to let go, the chances are that the unsold holdings will be cleaned up within a short time. For the time Eastern Oregon wool is quoted at an extreme range of 14 to 19 cents, and Valley products at 20 to 22. Little if any more than 2,000,000 pounds of the state's clip now remains unsold, according to local dealers, and the most of this wool is east of the mountains. The buyers are still in the field, picking up offerings wherever they are to be found, but the season of active buying is virtually ended. On the whole the prices paid to date are said to have been satisfactory to the shepherds.

Prevailing Oregon City prices are as follows:
DRIED FRUITS—(Buying)—Prunes on basis of 6 to 8 cents.
Fruits, Vegetables.
HIDES—(Buying)—Green hides, 7c to 8c; salted 7c; dry hides 12 cents to 14c; sheep pelts, 25c to 75c each.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

PEG LEGGED OPTIMISM.

A friend sends us the story of John Goodwin, cripple.
In 1910 Goodwin moved on to a farm near West Point, Ga. It was a small brush farm and required much clearing to prepare it for crops. One day his brother, who was helping him, accidentally shot Goodwin in the leg.
Amputation became necessary, the limb being cut off just below the knee.
Goodwin was without money and had a family to support, but he did not give up hope.
In a few weeks he was hobbling about on crutches directing things. The neighbors kindly helped him out, and, crippled as he was, he succeeded in raising fourteen bales of cotton and some corn.
Then he got a peg leg.
He moved the next winter to a larger place, which was also a brush farm. He went vigorously to work clearing the land. In speaking of his work this indomitable cripple says:
"I did as much plowing as ever I did in one season—on my peg leg."
There's a picture for you—plowing on a peg leg!
Moreover, he says:
"I made sixteen bales of cotton and some corn, besides raising some fine shot for my meat and lard. I may come out in debt some, but I am not lonesome."
Now
One might suppose Goodwin would be satisfied with having cleared two farms in as many years, but in a recent letter he says:
"I have got now ground this year and am preparing it while it is too wet for anything else. I am going to raise more corn this year. I forgot to tell you about my hay. I cut and housed twenty big loads."
How is that for a cripple?
One cannot but wonder what Goodwin might be able to do with two good legs. And the optimism of the man is good to think about.
Some there are who besides being maimed in limb are lamed in mind, but not John Goodwin.
When he was shot in the leg he was not wounded in spirit.
You can cripple a man's body, but you can't make his mind go on crutches.
John Goodwin's leg lies moldering in the tomb, but his soul goes marching on.
