STRIPED FOULARD
A design for a striped foulard gown is given here. The ground color of the material is white with stripes in a light shade of navy blue. The bodice closes in simple fashion and the shoulders are well covered by a large collar of fine lace. This falls from beneath a wide sailor collar of plain white satin. The sleeves are cut with stripes running around the arm and are slashed to the shoulder showing an under sleeve of lace. The tunic crosses in the front in such a way that the stripes become apparently a continuation of those on the bodice. The underskirt is of the untrimmed foulard.

English singers no longer turn a honest shilling by admitting spectators to see royalty at church. But some years ago one in a certain country church thought of something even better. King Edward had been occupying one of the pews, and after seeing his majesty depart the clergyman returned to find a brisk business going on. The verger had seen a way to assist the church restoration fund by charging loyal parishioners a few pence each for the privilege of sitting for a moment in the place still warmed with the royal presence, and he was astonished when the vicar summarily stopped the traffic.

DARROW IS FREED ON FIRST BALLOT

in the second count of the indictment, the only one upon which a verdict of guilty could be found, is a penitentiary sentence of from one to five years or a fine of $5000.

A direct outcome of the abrupt ending last November of the trial of J. B. McNamara for the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building, the trial of Clarence S. Darrow chief counsel for the McNamara brothers, was the result of an indictment by the county grand jury for the alleged bribery of George N. Lockwood, a prospective juror in the McNamara case.

On November 28, 1911, Bert H. Franklin, chief detective of the McNamara defense, was arrested for the bribery of Lockwood. On December 1 the McNamara brothers pleaded guilty, J. B. McNamara to murder in destroying the Times building and J. J. McNamara to dynamiting the Llewellyn Iron Works.

On January 15 Franklin made a confession to Assistant District Attorney Ford that he had bribed Robert F. Bain, the first juror sworn to try the McNamara case, and that he had sought to bribe five other prospective jurors, including Lockwood. The latter had reported early in November to the District Attorney that Franklin had approached him, and from that time he acted under the instructions of the prosecution.

On January 29 two indictments were reported by the county grand jury against Darrow for the alleged bribery of Bain and Lockwood, and upon arraignment the lawyer entered pleas of not guilty.

The trial on the Lockwood indictment was begun on May 15, and just 13 weeks and two days elapsed until the case went to the jury, making it the longest criminal trial ever held in Los Angeles County. During that time approximately 2,000,000 words were transcribed by the court reporters, for which the cost to the county was something like $6000. The entire cost of the trial was close to $30,000.

WEATHER CHECKS TRADING IN HOPS

The week closes with trade in the hop market practically at a standstill and with values, so far as can be ascertained in the absence of business, about the same as at the opening. At 18 to 20 cents, which is believed to fairly represent current 1912 crop values, the market appears to be steady to strong, but since the weather turned wet there has been little disposition to trade either on the buying or on the selling side.

Latest reports from England have indicated rather unfavorable crop developments there, and as a result of these reports and the present weather conditions in the Pacific Northwest buyers for the time are inclined to hold off on business here, preferring to wait until they can be better informed regarding the outlook for the English crop and the quality of the Oregon output as well. At the same time the weather in this state the past few days has induced a measure of caution on the part of the growers. For the time they are more or less out of the market.

On the whole the Valley hop crop is still counted safe, the belief being that the damage done by the rains last week has been rather over-estimated. In all cases the vines that have gone down will be put up again as quickly as possible, and in the event of clear weather, which is expected soon, it will probably be found that no great harm has been done. Continued wet weather at this time of the year would of course develop mold and thus work serious damage of the crop.

3 DAYS' DEMONSTRATION

Of the Famous

Copeman Automatic Electric Range

This will be something to make you sit up and take notice. Many great things have been invented in the last decade, but very little attention has been given to lightening women's work. This famous range does away with all dirt, soot, grease, ashes and the use of oils. It reduces the heat in the room to a trifle. It can be turned on as easily as an electric light and is not only a labor saver but is more economical than any other way of cooking. An expert lady demonstrator will be at our office for three days, Thursday, 15, Friday 16, and Saturday 17. She will make practical demonstrations of this famous range.
