TAFT OUTLINES THE ISSUES

In accepting the candidacy for a second term the president touched on a few of the things which the Republican party did during the decade and a half which has passed since it re-entered power in the National Government in 1897, and dwelt particularly on the questions which came up since the beginning of the present administration in 1909.

Of especial interest to Americans of all parties is that part of his address which is also the larger part which deals with the conditions of today. Touching on the popular unrest, which is diffused to a degree seldom surpassed in any age, the president points out that there is much exaggeration in the statement of the would-be reformers, that many of the accusations hurled against the administration and against Congress are untrue, and declares that some of the remedies which are proposed would, if adopted, make the situation worse instead of better.

and that the level of personal independence and comfort are higher than they were in any previous age.

While the president says, without naming any names, that the Democratic nominee and the man who is to lead the National Progressive party are not "consciously embracing socialism," he declares that if their promises of reform mean anything they mean the handing over of things to one man which belong to another.

Laughing a Wrinkle Cure. Laughing is one of the very best remedies for wrinkles. The old saying, "Laugh and grow fat," is certainly a good rule to observe, for laughing is usually accompanied by a happy, care free mind, and there is no better wrinkle eradicator than a contented disposition.

I have till recently been a disbeliever in what we call the supernatural—that is, communication between the living and the dead. I was willing to admit that strange things may point to such communication, but supposed those strange things to be manifestations of natural laws of which we have not thus far taken cognizance.

A Tea Party In the Ocean, the Latest Thing In Summer Fads

Photos by American Press Association

MISS CHARLOTTE VAN CORTLAND NICOLL, a New York society girl and a niece of DeLancey Nicol, a well known lawyer, is the originator of a novel method of entertaining guests at her family's summer home at Long Beach, N. Y.

The idea has attracted wide attention and promises to be widely copied. Hygienically the fad will win praise from all quarters. It is safe and sane. Miss Nicol devised a tea tray, a seaworthy craft with a high poop deck, to hold the teacups and commodious deck space forward and amidships for plates of sand wiches and cakes.

lion of St. Mark's or the campanile? They seemed stretched along a huge dark surface. Then suddenly I heard a boom. It seemed to me the doves' palace, that had stood for centuries reflecting the grandeur of a people who had long ago passed away, had been blown up and the explosion was followed by a wall I shall never forget—a wall unlike any I had ever heard before, a wall of horrible despair.

There were other craft, too, with wild looking persons in them, pulling at huge oars, trying to keep free of the ice or to go somewhere. And I saw persons struggling in the water, all with agonized expressions on their faces. Some of them tried to cling to our frail craft, but our gondolier pushed them off.

Several months must pass before she would join me, but in the meanwhile I would be interested in preparing our future home. As soon as I reached America I commenced these preparations, but even they could not take away a loneliness that I had never experienced before.

WAMBLADS HAVE BEAUTIFUL HOME

One of the prettiest homes that has been erected in Clackamas county during the past year is that of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Wamblad at Meldrum Station, to correspond. The house was planned by Mr. and Mrs. Wamblad, and they have displayed excellent taste in the arrangements of the rooms, which are attractive as well as convenient.

There was out on the ocean, and as I thought over the vision in which I had taken part I felt sure that some marine disaster had happened to the ship in which she had sailed. There was more sleep for me that night, and when morning came I was unable to arise from my bed.

When in the afternoon I took up an evening paper and saw that the ocean liner on which Margaret was coming to me had struck an iceberg, but was being towed to land, all of her passengers and crew having been saved.

Club Life of Women Is Entirely Different From That of Men. By Mrs. CHARLOTTE WILBOUR, English Clubwoman. Advertisement with decorative border.

RATHER fancy that women's clubs are the outcome of the greater activity which women in the last generation have attained.

IT IS CERTAINLY TRUE THAT WOMEN, AS REGARDS CLUBS, HAVE A DIFFERENT IDEAL FROM MEN. MEN GO TO CLUBS TO GET AWAY FROM PEOPLE, WHILE WOMEN GO TO GET IN TOUCH WITH ONE ANOTHER.

The club life of a woman makes her active, but it is because she has become active that she needs a club.

There is no doubt that if women would leave their homes more often and COME OUT INTO THE WORLD they would be all the better for it and the world would be all the better for it too.

Club life stimulates every faculty, and that means health. If more women joined clubs they would learn to take greater interest in life and in themselves. Why do women look old sooner than men? Because they WORRY TOO MUCH.
