AN OLD SAILOR'S VIEW

Admiral Dewey, the most of whose life has been spent at sea, and for many years with the responsibilities of command, says in speaking of the Titanic catastrophe, and of trans-Atlantic service: "I think every passenger who crosses the North Atlantic Ocean takes his life in his hands every time. For myself, I would rather go round the world in a well-equipped man-of-war than make a trip across the North Atlantic in a trans-Atlantic vessel."

The admiral leaves something unsaid when he remarks that "the greed for money making is so great that human lives are never taken into consideration." The point he omits is the public demand for the quickest voyages in the biggest ships along the shortest possible routes regardless of the hazards. A desire to make money is common to all forms of commercial activity. The business of transportation needs intelligent regulation by law in its various branches. It is entitled to reasonable profits, and is no more subject to greed than other sorts of public service. All kinds are rightly held subject to careful legislative supervision.

Passengers flock to the biggest and fastest ships. The stanchest of small size would have had no chance to compete with the Titanic on her maiden run, or on subsequent passages if she had made a brilliant first passage instead of meeting with an awful end. It does not follow that ships 1000 feet long, or that are swift, cannot be safe. But where the highest speed, the greatest size, and marvels of luxury attract passengers willing to spend large sums for passage, and who will not consider a smaller ship, no matter what her sea-going merits, it is unfair to say that the whole blame for the risks of the situation is to be laid upon steamship companies. They have been giving the public what the public most demanded. The lessons of the calamity are not for ship builders and owners alone.

The Democrats in Congress have at last succeeded in doing something that the Republicans have never been able to do—they have divided the solid South, so far as the sugar interest is concerned.

President Madero's hands are filled to the point of overflowing, but he will probably find time to head the request from the republic on the north that some attention be paid to the protection of American citizens and American property.

FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

MORTGAGES AND SINGLE TAX MORNING ENTERPRISE, (To the Editor.)—All mortgagees are interested in keeping up the value of the lands mortgaged.

Values of their securities cannot be maintained if other lands are reduced. Lack of demand always lowers prices.

The avowed object of the Single Taxers is to cheapen land and their scheme is very well calculated to lower the price of all lands.

When land is falling in price the demand for it becomes less and less, and it is very difficult to sell it at any price.

There are many thousands of mortgages in Oregon, hundreds becoming due every day.

So far foreclosures have been few because capital has been willing to either renew loans or make new ones to pay the old.

But capitalists regard the Single Tax scheme as an attack on them. The ingenious and misleading figuring and unfounded assertions of Single Taxers that the Single Tax as they advocate it, works well in other countries, will not prevail with them.

They take the short cut that if all taxes are taken off of all personal property, the taxes on the land mortgaged to them, must be largely increased, and that this long step toward socialism will very materially reduce values.

There would be great haste to realize and the courts would be choked with suits to foreclose.

There would be sheriff's sales galore.

Equities would be pushed on the market in great numbers. All of which would go a long way further to reduce values.

Under the most favorable view, there is scarcely a farmer in Clackamas County, no matter how free from debt, whose lands would not fall in value many times what he would save in taxes on his improvements and personal property.

JUVENILE FAIR HELD HERE TODAY

of the same school was admired by many. Rufus Kraxberger's exhibit, though not as large as others was considered by all who examined it to be wonderful. The vegetables he had grown were as large and of as good quality as that of any farmer in that county. The entire exhibit of Canby will be taken to the State Fair, and a corps of workers will begin to pack it Thursday. The children of this section are very enthusiastic and declare that next year they will have a larger and finer exhibit.

The delegation from Oregon City, owing to the heavy rains, encountered bad roads and was held for an hour at the excellent driving of Mr. John Loder and J. A. Melton that the trip was made. Dr. Guy Mount also encountered difficulty in making the trip in his car, and although breaking one of the springs of his machine, repaired the car and continued on his trip, so as not to disappoint the babies who were waiting to be judged at Canby.

The delegation will visit the fairs at Oswego, Milwaukie and Wilsonville as well as the fair which will be held at the Commercial Club in Oregon City today. Mr. Gary is well satisfied in the interest manifested in the fairs by the parents as well as the children and feels that the fairs next year will be a grander success than those of this year as the children will have more time to prepare for them.

A Good Reason.

"Yes, he married her because her first husband left her."

"That's hardly a good reason for marrying a woman."

"It was in this case. He left her $400,000."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Auto Used In Murder of Gambler In New York—Figures In the Case

Photos of Rose and the automobile by the American Press Association.

THE murder of Herman Rosenthal, a New York gambler, stirred the big city perhaps more than any other crime of recent years; not that the obliteration of one member of the underworld made any difference, but because of the sensational revelations that promise to develop from the manner of his taking off. Rosenthal had been prevented from doing business because of what he termed "oppression." He finally "squealed." He told the district attorney that Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, head of the squad detailed to raid gambling houses, was his partner. A few hours before he was scheduled to tell his story to the grand jury Rosenthal was killed by a party of four or five men who escaped in an automobile. Jack Rose, named by Rosenthal as Becker's man to see that the police officer got a square "cut" of the proceeds, admitted upon being arrested that he had hired the "murder car" on the night of the tragedy. The investigation is expected to result in an expose of the "system" under which New York gambling has existed in connivance with the police. The full length picture is of Rose; the other is of Lieutenant Becker.

REDMOND MAYOR TO FIGHT FOR PLACE

METOLIUS, Or., Aug. 28.—Affairs have been assuming quite a lively attitude in Redmond the past two days. On Sunday evening ex-Mayor Jones returned from Portland and demanded to be reinstated as Mayor, declaring his resignation to have been irregular. On being refused he entered a contest on Monday in a straw vote, to decide whom the council should appoint to fill out his time. The people who have been working for a clean town refused to have anything to do with the election, saying that it was up to the council to give them a mayor, and if the councilmen gave them a bad one they could get rid of him in the same manner as that used in eliminating Jones.

Jones and J. F. Hosch were the only candidates before the people at the straw vote, and by much hustling got out about half the voting population to the election, most of the ballots being cast for Hosch. A lively scrap is expected, as Jones is still contending that he is mayor and the council is most likely to appoint Hosch. The clean town faction, like the monkey that divided the cheese for the two cats, is sitting by, looking on and waiting for the time to come when it shall have to step in and settle the fuss.

EXPORTER CORNERS BARLEY MARKET

weather and European buyers are bidding keenly for supplies here. It now looks as if they will have to come to Mr. Houser for what they want. The Europeans are only seeking the best brewing grade.

With this quality now nearly all out of first hands, the excitement subsided today in the interior barley markets. A considerable quantity of weather-damaged grain remains unsold, but there is little demand, as yet, for this. The inferior grade barley will be used for feed purposes in the domestic markets.

A Cask's Capacity.

Should you wish to get the capacity of a cask you can do so in the following manner: Take the measurements from the bung hole to the bottom of each end of the cask in inches. Average the two measurements. Multiply this figure by itself twice. Then multiply the product by .002236, and the remainder is the number of gallons. Example: 31 inches, 29 inches (average 30 inches). 30 x 30 x 30 = 27,000. This multiplied by .002236 = 60.372. The contents, therefore, are sixty one gallons and a fraction.
