BULL MOOSE HORNS AND HOOPS

The name of the late Cornelius N. Bliss is, it appears, as serviceable to one side of the Penrose-Archbold-Roosevelt imbroglio as to the other. A few days ago it seemed that the onus of relying upon a dead man for corroboration was falling a little too much on the side of the colonel's opponents. The colonel was quick to see the force of a sentimental appeal to the public sense of justice which demands that the memory of the dead shall not be assailed. Neither Penrose nor Archbold had done violence to the memory of Bliss. They had only placed him, in their narratives of events in 1904, where, as treasurer of the committee at that time, it was indispensable that he should be placed in telling of the handling of funds donated by the Standard Oil Corporation. The colonel, however, could not resist the temptation to fire the tender heart of a generous people with wrath against all who call the dead to witness the truth of what they declare.

If this be sin, then its mark is also upon the colonel's door. William Loeb whom the colonel appointed as his private secretary after he had put George B. Cortelyou out of that office into the chair of the National Committee, was at Sagamore Hill, conferring with Cortelyou and the colonel. Then he issued a statement in which he declares that he remembers writing and sending, at the colonel's dictation, the letters and telegrams which the colonel lately produced as having passed from him to Cortelyou between the 26th and 29th of October. Loeb says the first intimation the colonel had of the Standard Oil contribution was from the newspapers. Cortelyou, according to Loeb, was strangely remiss in answering either letters or telegrams. Finally, at Mr. Roosevelt's order, Loeb called up Cortelyou by phone message and told him the colonel wanted to know what had been done about it. "Cortelyou's reply," says Loeb, "was that he had just finished consulting with Cornelius N. Bliss, and that Bliss had assured him that no Standard Oil money had been contributed."

This citation of the dead is no worse and no better than that made by Penrose and Archbold. But Mr. Loeb goes distinctly farther than either Archbold or Penrose in the advantage he takes of dead men. Speaking of the Harriman contribution of that same year, and justifying the colonel's position at every point, Loeb, who continually insists that he has a most distinct recollection of all of the events in dispute, says: "I was present at the time Harriman made his visit to the White House. I made it a point always to be present when Mr. Harriman was received by the president." The meaning of this is clear and unmistakable. A dead man is being charged with the falsehood about a man in a defenseless position with whom he is in conference, making it necessary to have a third party present as a witness. No matter what may be the final outcome of this struggle between gentlemen, it can be said with confidence that, in the use and abuse of dead men as weapons, the colonel's party is now far ahead.

Insectary or "Bug House" of the Oregon Agricultural College

THE Oregon Agricultural college at Corvallis, Ore., has a new insectary in which problems in the control and extermination of insects are studied. The students call the building the "bug house." Experiments are now being conducted with the cherry slug, wood boring beetles and the canker worm. Tests of insecticides and different sprays are being made on apple trees close to the insectary, and the results will be recorded. The spraying tanks and small trees upon which the insect experiments are being conducted are shown in the upper picture.

SOCIALISM GRADUAL GROWTH, SAYS HUGHES

H. L. Hughes, editor of the Labor World, of Spokane, Wash., and an authority on socialism, spoke to about fifty persons at Willamette Hall Tuesday evening. W. W. Myers, Socialist candidate for county commissioner, introduced the speaker. Mr. Hughes declared that Socialism is gradually being adopted, and that although its growth was not rapid it was certain. He called attention to the public schools, the postal service, direct primary, initiative and referendum in proof of his assertion that more power was gradually being placed in the hands of the people, which he said was the essence of socialism. The speaker made a pleasing appearance, and won the confidence of his audience, many members of which were not socialists, by his courteous reference to members of other political parties.

T. R. PARTY DOES WELL IN VERMONT

"most marvelous fight."
Democrats feel somewhat elated, too, for they show an increased vote, though not enough to elect their candidate.
The result will not be definitely known until well into the morning, for returns are being received very slowly.
The day was rainy and anything but conducive to a full vote. However, the rock-ribbed party voters went to the polls in all manner of conveyances.
The Prohibition and Socialist vote did not vary materially from former years.
Many Republican leaders asserted that the threatening weather contributed to the falling off in the party vote. These men stated that the recorded vote of Vermont was close to 20,000, and that had weather conditions been fair the party would have rolled up more than 40,000 for Fletcher.
The members of Congress elected were: First District, Frank L. Greene, of St. Albans (Rep.); Second District, Frank Plumley, of Northfield (Rep.)

Belated Justice.
In due time the women came into authority and power in the courts, and the first culprit baled before them for punishment was a man who had spent his life advocating dress reform for the fair sex.
"Watch that you are," decreed the stern lady who presided on the bench. "The decision of the court is that for the term of your natural life you shall be permitted to wear none but blouses that button on the back and that you be compelled to button them yourself."

2 ASK DECREES; 2 AWARDED THEM

Alleging that her husband failed to support her and spent $750 of her savings, Cora A. Pieren filed suit Tuesday for a divorce against Frank W. Pieren. They were married May 9, 1911. Ellen Wauffe asks a divorce from Ralph Wauffe, alleging that he deserted her while they were living in Wisconsin May 30, 1909. She asks that her maiden name, Ellen Greenwood, be restored. Circuit Judge Campbell granted Carrie French a decree from Ray C. French, and restored the plaintiff's maiden name, Carrie Stanton. Mayme Adkins was awarded a decree from Earl R. Adkins, here maiden name, Mayme Curran being restored.

OFFICERS OUSTED; MEN ARE REINSTATED

SALEM, Or., Sept. 3.—The officers of the Second battalion of the Third Infantry of the Oregon National Guard, who failed promptly to obey orders at the annual maneuvers near Gates, Wash., are permanently dismissed from the service, but the men of the battalion are to be reinstated. This is the order of Governor West, as commander-in-chief, issued today.
In a statement the governor says: "Believing that the officers of the Second battalion were the ones directly responsible for its failure promptly to obey certain orders of the regimental commander during the recent maneuvers near Gates, Wash., it is recommended that the order of the general staff discharging from the service certain officers and enlisted men be modified so as to apply only to such officers."
The dismissed officers are Major Ryland Scott, First Lieutenant Richard Delch, First Lieutenant Harry C. Brumbaugh, Captain Walter L. Toose and Captain Harry Williams.
After turning the wheels of law enforcement in the direction of the breweries, and receiving assurance from District Attorney Brown of Douglas county that action would be commenced immediately to revoke the charter of the Roseburg Brewery and Ice Company and sending a request to County Judge Bushey to revoke the license of a saloon being run just across the river from Newberg, in Yamhill county, on the ground that it is a public nuisance, Governor West left this morning on the 11:20 car for Portland, to resume his fight against vice in the metropolis.
He made no announcement of what his next move in Portland would be, but he spent nearly all yesterday looking over material he has secured and studying various law points that bear on his efforts to clean up Oregon. That this week's activities will have center around the breweries that have been shipping beer into dry territories, seems certain. In this way the governor is endeavoring to get at the source of the "blind pig" evil.

PRISON FIRED BY RIOTING CONVICTS

On seeing the fire department enter the prison yard, many mutineers fled back into the prison, while others hid in the various factory buildings, hoping to step over the walls when an opportunity presented itself.
It is said that three convicts scaled the walls and are now at large. Members of the two National Guard companies rushed to the prison in automobiles.
They were ordered to shoot the first prisoner who attempted to scale the walls.
When the prisoners reached the yard they began burning everything within reach. The officials, fearing they would set the factories on fire, summoned the firemen, who aided in the attempt to subdue the rioters.
Hundreds of shopmen and others were on the streets surrounding the prison, and the special police, hastily summoned, had trouble in keeping the crowds orderly.
