MCKINLEY AND ROOSEVELT

Colonel Roosevelt attacked the late President McKinley as he now assails President Taft when Mr. McKinley would not do what Roosevelt wanted. The fact is made plain in a statement made by James Boyle, formerly consul general to Liverpool and for many years private secretary and confidential friend of President McKinley. He asserts that Mark Hanna's dislike of Roosevelt was due to the fact that the latter was guilty of "insolent and brutal criticism of President McKinley" because the latter would not allow himself to be dominated by Roosevelt. Mr. Boyle says: "I also feel free to say—and it is my duty to say, in view of certain things now going on—that it was well understood by intimates of the late Senator Hanna that the chief reason why he opposed Roosevelt's nomination for vice-president was because of Roosevelt's insolent and brutal criticism of President McKinley in reference to incidents immediately preceding the Spanish-American war. Mark Hanna fiercely resented these criticisms, and wanted the president to summarily remove Roosevelt as assistant secretary of the navy; but the president, with his wonderful patience and amiability, passed the matter over in silence, and never mentioned it to others; but Mark Hanna felt under no such restraint. Mark Hanna was one of the few men who thoroughly appreciated at that early day what kind of a man Roosevelt has proven himself to be."

Origin of a Familiar Saying. When Aurelius Paulus, the Roman consul, desired a divorce from his wife some friends consoling with him asked: "Is she not beautiful and virtuous and of noble family and great wealth? What fault, then, can you find with her?" And the consul stooped down, unfastened his shoe and, showing it to them, answered: "Is it not of fine material? Is it not well made? Does it not appear to fit excellently? Yet none of you knows where it pinches me."

Money and Marbles.

Once there was a man who thought Russell Sage ought to stop work. He spoke to him about it. "Why get together any more money, Mr. Sage? You can't eat it; you can't drink it. What good will it do you?" "Ever play marbles?" Uncle Russell asked. "Yes, when I was a boy." "Couldn't eat 'em, could you? Couldn't drink 'em, could you? No use to you, were they? What did you play marbles for?"—Harper's.

Unnecessary Question.

"Poor man," said the sympathetic lady to the brakeman with his forefinger missing. "Have you lost your finger?" "Oh, no, madam," replied the brakeman. "I've just left it at the man's cure's to be polished up. I didn't have time this morning to wait until it was finished."—Harper's Weekly.

WORLD SERIES SEATS NOT TO BE RESERVED

BOSTON, Sept. 18.—About 100 men are at work here today at Fenway park arranging accommodations for 35,000 persons who are expected to attend each of the series of games to be played here between the New York Giants and the Red Sox for the world's baseball championship. All available space is to be used for temporary stands, and at least 10,000 seats in addition to the normal capacity of 22,000 will be added. To protect the fans from speculators the Boston management has decided not to distribute reserved seats by mail thus making it necessary to call in person for the tickets. This system is expected to minimize the operation of the scalpers. The results Wednesday follow: Pacific Coast League. At Portland—Los Angeles 3, Portland 1. At Los Angeles—Vernon 1, Oakland 0. At San Francisco—San Francisco 5, Sacramento 2.

DR. MILLIKEN CALLS WILSON ONLY "BAIT"

OREGON CITY, Sept. 18.—(Editor of the Enterprise)—I have a sincere regard and respect for Woodrow Wilson as a christian man and a gentleman. But I am not going to vote for the Democrats for the following reasons: 1st. Mr. Wilson is all right, but he is only one side of the ticket. The other side is Thomas F. Marshall, who was nominated by the liquor interests of his state for Governor in 1908, and who fought his whole campaign on the liquor issue, attacking the local option law so bitterly that he lined up the liquor vote of the state against it. 2nd. Mr. Wilson is a local option man, but Mr. Marshall used all his influence after election to get the local option law repealed, and succeeded with the result that forty-five counties, previously dry, have gone back into the old license system. 3rd. Mr. Wilson is a temperance man, but Mr. Marshall said through the columns of the Indianapolis Sun in August of 1908, "The Democrat who believes that the liquor business should be abolished entirely should not vote for me. He should vote the Prohibition ticket." I thoroughly agree with him. 4th. Mr. Wilson says he believes in repealing the liquor laws, but Mr. Marshall, the great Booz-boss of Fort Wayne said in the Indianapolis Star of January 9, 1911, "I have known him (Marshall) for a long time, and he has visited me frequently during the last few months. He is interested in strengthening the liquor laws, and I believe we are in accord as to what should be done on that question." If Mr. Marshall is in accord with Mr. Fleming I cannot be. 5th. That stalwart clean gentleman, Mr. Bryan, was back of Mr. Wilson's nomination. But T. M. Gilmore, President of the National Model License League (a booze organization) and ex-mayor Dave Rose or Milwaukee, were back of Mr. Marshall's nomination. And the fact that Mr. Bryan and Mr. Wilson were not strong enough to keep one of the strongest anti prohibition, anti local option, license advocates in the land off the other half of the ticket shows that they will be unable to do anything against the wishes of their strange bedfellows for the advancement of temperance legislation. If they could not keep them off the ticket, they could not help temperance legislation with them there. 6th. I believe the refined Mr. Wilson is the bait, and Mr. Marshall is the hook that the Democratic Tammany-Murphy ring have out this year of our Lord nineteen-twelve, to catch Christian temperance suckers, and I have no desire to be caught by so obvious a piece of political chicanery. 7th. Should I vote for Mr. Wilson I shall lose my running mate as well, and as the Good Book says "A house divided against itself cannot stand." I am going to avoid indigestion by taking Mr. Marshall's advice and voting the Prohibition ticket. W. T. Milliken.

DISPOSITION.

The love of moral beauty and that retention of the spirit of youth which is implied by the indulgence of a poetical taste are evidences of good disposition in any man and argue well for the largeness of his mind in other respects.—Leigh Hunt.

What He Would Do.

They were motoring idolently through the Bronx. Twilight had set down upon the land. The sudden roaring of wild beasts from the distant zoo caused the pair to start. "Oh, Jack," she cried, nestling closer and closer, "where would you go if you saw a dozen lions bounding along after us?" "If I saw a dozen lions bounding along after me," grinned the heartless wretch, "I'd go to a sanitarium."—Judge.

Too Sensitive.

"There is absolutely no use to talk to me about woman suffrage." "Really, old man, I cannot understand why you oppose it so strongly." "Well, I'll tell you. I was in a clothing store last week looking at some neckties when a woman came in and told one of the clerks she wanted to buy a collar for her dog."—Judge.

Motorboat Detroit, Which Crossed the Atlantic Ocean

In a thirty-five foot motorboat, the Detroit, Captain Thomas F. Day of New York city and his crew recently crossed the Atlantic from New York to Queenstown in twenty-four and a half days. Captain Day, who is the editor of the Rudder, says that he has proved the feasibility of a motorboat race across the ocean. The Detroit encountered terrific gales and shipped a good deal of water, but her captain says she was never in danger from the weather. Other perils which the crew experienced were the taking fire of the gasoline in the engine room and the spotting of the fresh water. The little craft pursued its way by water to St. Petersburg. The route taken was the English channel and the North and Baltic seas. The boat's run on the transatlantic voyage was 156 miles, the poorest twenty-two miles. The illustrations show the boat as she floats and in drydock.

The Death Flower.

One of the early English explorers, Hugh Arkwright, who sailed the Pacific in 1581, warned travelers against visiting El Rancho, the home of the death flower. This flower, he says, is so large that a man can stand upright inside one of its blossoms. But if he does so he will surely fall asleep, lulled by the strange fragrance it distills. Then the flower folds its petals and suffocates him. "And so he passes into death through splendid dreams and gives his body to the death flower for food."

The History of Tacitus.

The entire history of Tacitus, as we have the work, was regained from a single copy found in the fifteenth century in a monastery of Westphalia. That we should owe the works of this author to one copy is a remarkable circumstance, for the Emperor Tacitus, who claimed to be a descendant of the historian, had copies of the history placed in every library of the empire and each year had ten copies transcribed for presentation to scholars. All, it seems, perished, save the Westphalian copy.

Smart Calling Costume.

Now that the early fall days are here one is obliged to take up certain social duties, and among them is the afternoon call of a more or less formal nature. For this visit one wears a costume just a trifle more elaborate than the ordinary trotting suit. The illustration shows a delightful confection of the tailored type suitable for afternoon calling. The suit is of dark brown serge, and by the way, brown is to be one of the leading colors this fall, with trimmings of black braid and buttons. The brown felt hat is trimmed with brown and white feathers and a velvet bow.

His Income.

First Wife—What is your husband's average income, Mrs. Smith? Second Wife—Oh, about midnight.—Judge.

Putting Out a Fire.

When trying to put out a fire remember that one gallon of water at the bottom of the blaze will do more to put it out than ten gallons at the top. "Play low" is the motto to follow while fighting fire. A few gallons at the bottom of the flames will rise in clouds of steam when the fire is rising and quench it. A big blaze on the leeward side looks fearful, but play low with the water on the bottom of the fire on the windward side and you have the speediest way to quench the flames and will not require a river.

Vocational Education Greatest Need In Present American School System

By EDWIN G. COOLEY, Former Superintendent of Chicago Public Schools

THE FUNDAMENTAL DEFECT IN OUR PRESENT SCHOOL SYSTEM IS THE RESULT OF OUR CUSTOM OF TERMINATING COMPULSORY SCHOOL EDUCATION AT FOURTEEN YEARS OF AGE.

Every one admits that this is too early. We contribute to the support of the public schools on the ground that they are necessary to the PERPETUATION of our FREE INSTITUTIONS. We urge that a certain MINIMUM OF INSTRUCTION and TRAINING is INDISPENSABLE as a preparation for CITIZENSHIP and that the training of CHARACTER connected with the minimum is of great importance for this preparation.

To be fair to all, MODERN conditions require another type of school which, like the other schools, presupposes the general training given in the elementary school, but which has as its SPECIAL PROBLEM the training for VOCATIONAL LIFE of the youth who must leave the ordinary school at fourteen years. The training on the immediately PRACTICAL, TECHNICAL side may fall to the VOCATIONS themselves, but a school must be provided to SUPPLEMENT this training, supplying the KNOWLEDGE and SKILL demanded by MODERN BUSINESS or INDUSTRIAL LIFE as well as training for the FUTURE CITIZEN. Much of this school work must be done in the school now known as the continuation or part time school.

In addition to the CONTINUATION school which will give VOCATIONAL TRAINING to the large majority of our youth above fourteen, there is need for SUPPLEMENTARY VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS for both COUNTRY AND CITY.

OUR ABSURD APPRENTICESHIP, LAWS AND OUR INADEQUATE LEGISLATION WITH REFERENCE TO THE EMPLOYMENT OF BOYS AND GIRLS BETWEEN FOURTEEN AND SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE HAVE CREATED A SPECIAL SITUATION WHICH MUST BE DEALT WITH.
