BENEFITS EVERYBODY.

Prof. Wilson and other free trade Democrats continue to assert that the protective tariff system benefits only a few manufacturers.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. Manufacturers, far from being the only class benefitted by the tariff, receive no more benefit than other classes of the community. The class that receives the greatest direct benefit is the laboring class, whose wages are higher under protection than they could possibly be maintained without it.

The tariff, as such, does not give profit or wages. It gives OPPORTUNITY for carrying on industries in this country, which, without it, could not exist under the present high cost of labor. If lowering the tariff should stop these industries not only would the manufacturer lose in the value of his plant, but the whole community would suffer with him.

Protection insures prosperity and prosperity makes business. If everybody is employed, the farmer has customers to whom his produce can be sold at good prices. The factory near the farm means more people to feed. More people busy in the city means larger markets. And if labor is employed and the farmer sells his crops, then money is in circulation and everybody in every kind of business, is prosperous.

This protection benefits everybody. That everybody suffers under Democratic free trade laws has been demonstrated whenever such laws have been in force.

Wise Man. "I'll take that," said the man, indicating a silver mounted hand glass. "And I want you to engrave on it 'From J. J. B. to Phyllis.'" "Very well," replied the salesman. "We'll put it on the back here"—"Oh, no! Put it around the edge on the front. I want her to see it!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

SORGHUM AND JOHNSON GRASS

Mr. H. H. Humphrey, Arlington, Arizona, writes: "What property does sorghum take from the ground that other grains need? I notice that wheat and barley grown this spring on a plot of ground that had sorghum on it last summer was very poor, while on an adjoining plot of exactly the same kind of soil the crop was very good, making nearly twice as much grain to the acre. Can you advise me what is the best method of killing Johnson grass?"

We have been unable to find an analysis of sorghum which shows the amount of the different plant food elements that this crop takes from the soil. Sorghum fodder is rather low in protein and high in crude fiber as compared with corn fodder. This would lead us to believe that sorghum is not as heavy a nitrogen feeder as the common corn. The amount of sugar which sorghum contains varies from two to twenty per cent of the juice, or from one and one-half to twelve per cent of the cane. We note what you say regarding the growth of oats and wheat on a plot that produced sorghum last year. The decrease in yield may not have been due to any particular drain on the plant food elements caused by the sorghum, but might have been the result of a lack of moisture. Sorghum is a heavy feeding plant and requires considerable moisture, hence it may have taken so much moisture from the soil that there was not a sufficient amount as compared with other fields to produce a good crop of wheat or oats.

We do not believe that you will have any trouble in cutting your corn with the ordinary corn binder, even though there are pea vines in the corn. The corn binder may be used very satisfactorily for cutting sorghum, also milo maize. Where these crops grow unusually high and heavy some of the machines may not handle them as easily as they do corn because they are built for corn and not for heavy sorghum crops. The height of grain that can be cut with the ordinary grain binder varies some with the binder. This machine will handle grain considerably higher than the ordinary run of grains.

The most successful method of killing Johnson grass is to plow early in the fall and to harrow the land thoroughly, using a spring tooth harrow if possible, or a peg tooth if the spring tooth is not available. This will tear out a large number of the root stalks, which should be removed from the field. A heavy seeding of small grain or millet should now be sown which will keep down the Johnson grass during the late fall and early spring. This crop should be cut for hay, and the land should next be plowed and harrowed as before. It is well to keep this land under thorough cultivation during the summer months, not permitting any of the Johnson grass to grow to any extent. By fall the field will be free from the Johnson grass. The main objection to this is the loss of one year's crop, but it has been found to be the most satisfactory way of killing out this grass. Close pasturing and considerable tramping is very injurious to Johnson grass, and will practically kill it out in time. A thorough drainage of the land, combined with the above, will be of material assistance in eradicating Johnson grass.

SALT AS A FERTILIZER

R. H. Munday, London, Ontario, writes as follows: "Can you please tell me if dirty salt from a tannery spread thinly on clay loam would be of any benefit as a fertilizer? What is a good fertilizer for onions?" You will find that salt is not much good as a fertilizer. We have known of experiments—in fact, it has been experimented with considerably—in which it did not affect the yield to any material extent. It may have a little effect on the physical condition in time. A thorough drainage of the land, combined with the above, will be of material assistance in eradicating Johnson grass.

The four principal plant food elements are nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and calcium. The first three named are the most important. Salt does not supply any of these plant food elements. Salt is made up of hydrogen and chlorine. The best fertilizer for onions depends upon the conditions of the soil, and as we are not familiar with your soil, we cannot give you this definitely. Generally speaking, onions require very fertile land in order to give best returns. This crop seems to demand an unusual amount of available potassium, and for this reason it is sometimes advisable to apply a potassium fertilizer. Sulphate of potash has been found to give better returns than potash in other forms. Stable manure is very good for onions, but should be applied in the fall. One objection to using stable manure is that it carries a great many weed seeds, and thus may increase the labor of caring for the onions. The presence of lime is also very conducive to growing good onion crops.

Sons of King George V. on Their Holiday in Scotland

Photos copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.

BALMORAL castle, for many years the Scottish summer home of Queen Victoria, is still used for holiday purposes by the English royal family. This summer the four older sons of King George have been spending some time among his highland subjects and, as is customary, have adopted the highland costume, in which they are seen in the upper of the two photographs. Prince George, ten years old, is at the left; Prince Albert, seventeen, next; then Prince Henry, twelve, and last Edward, Prince of Wales, who is eighteen. The last is shown in the lower photograph wearing in the butts for the grouse to be driven up and shot at the British fashion. He has returned from his stay in France, where he was the guest of the Marquis and Marquise de Breteuil. His hostess was formerly Miss Garner of New York.

When rough, high-proof, strong whiskey begins to tell on you—when your nerves and stomach commence "calling for help"—try a little Cyrus Noble.

It is mild in character—aged in wood in charred barrels—blended and re-aged in steam-heated warehouses.

This gives it that palatable, enjoyable flavor peculiar to it—its mellowness—its richness.

Another Way Out.

Walter Damrosch, the musical conductor, played in his youth in a noted orchestra. He wore, as is the way with musicians, long hair, but his was unusually long and unusually bushy besides. A thin haired violinist seated behind Mr. Damrosch in the orchestra used to take exception to the young man's immense coiffure. He said one day: "Look here, Damrosch, why don't you get your hair cut? Then, maybe, I could see the conductor." Mr. Damrosch answered calmly over his shoulder: "Why don't you learn to play better? Then you'd sit in front of me."

Prisons Are a Costly and Wrong Method of Punishment

Society Finds This Way Too Easy. No Effort Made to Change It. By DRAMWELL BOOTH, Successor to the Late General William Booth of the Salvation Army. Image of a man's face.

It is my great hope to make men REALIZE THE VALUE OF CITIZENSHIP and their relation and responsibility to the community, getting away from the pauper idea. The difficulty of unemployment both in England and America is the most complicated problem of the communities. We have strongly urged for years the establishing of DETENTION COLONIES FOR VAGRANTS. We see in them safety for society and also the one hope of restoration for many vagrants who now are hopeless and whose habits menace society. But God forbid we should propose more PRISONS. The prisons also must be dominated by the spirit of human sympathy and religious influence. HOW EASY SOCIETY FINDS IT TO LOCK UP ALL SORTS OF UNSIRABLE, AFFLICTED PEOPLE! SOCIETY HAS TO PAY, BUT LET US MAKE SURE THE OFFICIALS UNDERSTAND THAT THE COUNTRY IS TIRED OF THE OLD COSTLY METHODS AND WANTS NO NEW COURSES OF PENAL MEDICINE TO ADD TO THE UNIVERSAL SUFFERING, BUT IS DETERMINED TO HAVE AN ENTIRELY NEW TREATMENT OF EVERY NEEDY INDIVIDUAL ACCORDING TO HIS REQUIREMENTS.
