WHEN TO RETIRE.

The man who has lived an active life quits it at his peril

To retire is to die Besides, a purposeless life is of all states the most miserable. To go to bed with nothing to look forward to and wake up in the morning with nothing to do is to live a pitiful ex

It is not the years that make a man old. It is the death of the spirit of the man.

In his eighty-fourth year Judge Roger A. Pryor of New York said to a reporter:

"The passage of time has in itself no effect on man or other material things. What a man does counts."

Moreover a man should, if possible, continue when old to do the things he has been doing in the past. And, count the claims of Jesus simply be- if his work be not that of physical labor, he should be able to do better work when he is old. He gathers cumulative strength.

Darwin wrote books for many years. but his greatest work, "The Descent of Man," was written when he was seventy years old.

Beethoven composed music up to the day of his death Gladstone's greatest forensic tri umphs were won at a time when most men are in their dotage. And Victor Hugo-what a ripe old man he became! By many persons receiveth him that sent me. Matt. x 40 "The Man Who Laughs" is considered his greatest book. He was near sev enty when he wrote it. Activity is the law of life
