THE DEFICIENCY BILL.

The deficiency appropriation bill annually passed by Congress is one of peculiar interest to students of government. Its sum marks the difference between what Congress guessed the government needed for the ensuing fiscal year, when appropriating in the general appropriation bills, and what the end of the year disclosed was actually needed. In a way, also, it is an index to the economy or extravagance with which the Executive Departments have been conducted.

The Democratic Congress which recently adjourned was called upon to provide six million dollars which is the smallest sum the measure has carried since 1886. It breaks a twenty-six years' record.

The smallest of the sums indicated that the last Republican Congress, the one which appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, drafted its general appropriation bills on sound and scientific lines. It also indicates that the Executive Departments have administered their affairs with singular efficiency and economy. The bill testifies to the excellent business management of government.

In contrast with this record it has now become apparent at Washington that Congress next winter will be called upon to provide at least $30,000,000 in the deficiency appropriation bill, or five times as much as at the recent session.

This is because the Democratic Congress, after having indulged too lavishly in "pork barrel" appropriating, cut down regular appropriations to an impossible point in order to make a false showing of economy.

WILSON ON DEFENSIVE

We are told by Mr. Wilson and his managers that before the campaign is over he will try and explain why all his life he has been an aristocrat and against the so-called common people. He is going to try and explain why he has condemned the millions of good honest worthy citizens who have come to us from foreign shores; he is going to try and explain why he has condemned organized labor; he is going to try and explain why he said under late of February 26, 1905:

"Labor unions reward the shiftless and incompetent at the expense of the able and industrious."

He is going to try and explain why he said on June 13th, 1909:

"The labor of America is rapidly becoming unprofitable under its present regulations by those who have determined to reduce it to a minimum. Our economic supremacy may be lost because the country grows more and more full of unprofitable servants."

He is going to try to explain why he has always had contempt for the so-called middle and humble classes in fact, for the millions of people whose votes he must get if he is to be elected. He is going to try and explain why for years in his claim, deliberate and passionate moments he wrote and preached against the initiative, referendum and recall and against the hundred and one fads of the present day and now has suddenly changed his mind and says he was wrong then but does confess that for political expediency or for the sake of winning votes, he is willing to change his coat and accept the political nostrums of the day.

Mr. Wilson may well promise many explanations, but he will need to make them very lucid to gain or regain the confidence of the intelligent voters of the country. The American citizen does not like a turncoat nor a traitor whether it be in war or in peace, whether it be a bloody conflict or in a literary discussion, and they will compare with Mr. Wilson's the honest, upright, consistent course of President Taft and Vice-President Sherman and cast their votes accordingly.

DEMOCRATS AID TRUSTS.

A carefully designed scheme to prevent effective prosecution of all the trusts, and especially the Steel Trust, from effective prosecution by the Taft administration, was recently passed by the Democratic house of representatives. It was only the vigilance and activity of the Republican leaders in the house and senate that killed the bill.

Representative Beall of Texas, a Democratic member of the Democratic house, offered an amendment to the Sundry Civil appropriation bill dismissing from government service every attorney engaged in behalf of the government in any suit brought under the anti-trust law, the interstate commerce act, the customs laws, and other laws for the detection and prosecution of crimes and for the protection of the United States against claims, if such attorney held any office under the government at the time the amendment became effective, or within two years next preceding the date of his employment as special counsel.

This amendment was aimed particularly at former Secretary of War Dickinson, retained since his retirement from President Taft's cabinet as special counsel to assist Attorney General Wickersham in the prosecution of the Steel Trust.

Attorney General Wickersham protested against the adoption of the Beall amendment and was joined by Gen. Dickinson, Representative Mann, the Republican minority leader and other prominent Republicans in opposition to the palpable effort to thwart the prosecution of the Steel Trust and other defendants in suits for the enforcement of the anti-trust law.

If the Beall amendment had carried in its original form, the services of Gen. Dickinson and three others assigned by the department of justice to work on the Steel Trust case would every attorney engaged in behalf of have gone for naught.

At this critical juncture in the case the outcome depended entirely upon the familiarity of those who had done the work with the law and the facts and to have cut off their services at this time would have most seriously jeopardized the government's prospects of success.

The Beall amendment would also have dispensed with the services of a large number of employees trained in the department of justice and promoted to do special work in anti-trust cases on account of their experience and fitness for such work. No better characterization of the Beall amendment could have been applied to it than that suggested by Attorney General Wickersham: "An act to destroy the efficiency of the department of justice—a measure in aid of defendants now under prosecution by the federal government." Of course thus assailed, and by Republican statesmen who appreciated what government in all its branches means, the Beall amendment failed to pass the Republican senate and in a form modified more to the satisfaction of the attorney general, it was finally adopted by the house.

As was said at the time, the steel trust could have asked nothing better than the adoption of the Beall amendment as originally passed by the Democratic house. Aside from the steel trust case, the attorney general pointed out that the adoption of the Beall amendment would have had the effect of removing counsel for the government in the suit to set aside the Oregon and California land grant, who for many years have been engaged in that arduous task. It was further shown that the enactment of the Beall amendment into law would interfere with the successful prosecution of almost every important case the government has pending.

The Republican administration, under President Taft, appreciates the fact that the gigantic corporations employ the best legal talent obtainable and expend enormous funds for attorneys' fees. By fighting fire with fire, the Republican party has been enabled to secure important victories for the people in the courts. More than half a million dollars was recovered for the government in the case of the contractors for the Savannah river improvement, while over $3,000,000 were collected as the result of the prosecution of persons implicated in the great sugar frauds.

The prosecution of the trusts, so vigorously begun by the Taft administration with the best legal talent obtainable, will be continued, despite the effort of the Democratic house to tie the government's hands.

Submarine F-1 Has Made a Remarkable Diving Record

Photos by American Press Association.

ALMOST as wonderful as the developments in aviation are the achievements of the inventors and operators of the naval submarines. The F-1 of the United States navy during recent maneuvers in the Pacific made a world's record for diving, reaching a depth of 233 feet. More remarkable than this is the fact that the little craft was under perfect control at this depth, cruising for ten minutes at a speed of six knots an hour and finally rising to, within nineteen feet of the surface. The test lasted for six hours, for the whole of which time the vessel was submerged, rising or sinking in response to the manipulation of her raising or lowering planes. The F-1 (photographs of which floating at the surface and nearly submerged are seen above) is under the command of Lieutenant James B. Howell and carries a crew of twenty-six men.

Suggestive Questions in Sunday School Lessons

In two weeks our Bible contest starts. This revival in Bible study is being welcomed by all the churches.

We are glad to have the co-operation of the churches, the pastors and Sunday School workers, in this important undertaking.

The prizes that are offered are intrinsically valuable and the Diplomas given to all who complete the course will confer a great honor upon them; but the greatest prize of all is the study itself; no words can overstate its value. All teachers of boys and girls, say of fifteen years and over, should urge them to take up this and

TRAINING OF YOUTH

By PAUL P. RHODE, Roman Catholic Bishop of Chicago

FUTURE happiness of the child depends upon the early training it receives, for, as a rule, what it is in its youth that it is in its old age. The work of teachers is most important to religion, to the church, to the state and to humanity when they give the children in their schools the proper training.

JUST AS OUT OF A PIECE OF SOFT WAX ONE MAY MODEL AN ANGEL OR A DEVIL, SO IT IS WITH THE CHARACTER OF A YOUNG CHILD.

The FIRST IMPRESSIONS ARE ALWAYS THE MOST LASTING. They are never wholly effaced from the soul any more than marks made in the bark of a young tree ever disappear. They only widen with its growth.

In later years the character cannot be molded afresh. As the sapling is bent the tree is inclined. The land if it is to yield a harvest in autumn must be TILLED IN EARLY SPRING, not left uncultivated until summer.
