Queen Bess' Giant. Queen Elizabeth had a Flemish porter who was over eight feet high and of great strength, and he was an extremely good natured man. Whenever he met any one who was abnormally tall he used to patronize him in a friendly sort of way, and on one occasion when he met at an inn two soldiers who were over six feet in height he said, "Come under my arms, my little fellows." And taking them up, he walked down the room with them under his arms as if they had been children, much to their disgust.

MILK MAN SERIOUSLY HURT IN RUNAWAY

Chauncey G. Smith, while driving a milk wagon for Ludwig Hartke, the dairyman of Mount Pleasant, was severely injured in a runaway Saturday morning while coming to this city, and near the plank road at the head of Fifth street. Smith was in company with Louise Hartke, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Hartke, but had jumped from the wagon and was uninjured. Smith did not escape so luckily. He was thrown from the wagon, and two wheels of the vehicle passed over his body. Although no bones were broken he suffered other injuries. The horse became frightened when the singletree of the wagon broke. After running some distance one of the horses fell. Smith was taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hartke and his injuries were given attention.

Among the amusements of the evening was a progressive conversation, burlesque on different meets, and musical selections by the High School orchestra composed of Harley Ely, Violin; Miss Louise Huntley, piano; Allice Levitt, violin; Loraine Oldham, trombone and Joe Sheahan, traps. The attendance was large.

Where Chatterton Died. Brooke street bears the name of that Lord Brooke who was murdered by an ungrateful dependent. It is connected with a still more pathetic tragedy. On Aug. 24, 1770, the boy poet, Chatterton, poisoned himself at the house of Mrs. Angell in this street after tearing up all his manuscripts. The house in which Chatterton died was the second from Holborn on the west side. It was pulled down about twenty years ago, having previously been altered almost beyond recognition.—London Spectator.

Preventing a Collision.

When whistles are steaming in fleet formation through fog it becomes necessary to provide some marking by means of which the vessels may maintain their places in line and at the desired distance from each other. The usual method adopted by British fleets when caught in a fog is the trailing of a buoy in the water behind each vessel. This buoy makes a flapping noise, which is easily heard by the lookout on the ship following as well as leaving a wake discernible to the eye.—Popular Mechanics.

LAST CAR LEAVES FOR OREGON CITY AT MIDNIGHT

David Belasco will present the great American drama success, "The Woman," at the Heilig Theatre, 7 & Taylor streets, beginning Sunday, October 6. Special price matinee Wednesday and Saturday.

"THE WOMAN." David Belasco's great presentation of William C. de Mille's play "The Woman", will be the attraction at the Heilig Theatre for the week beginning October 6. The cast has been specially chosen by Mr. Belasco for their individual peculiar adaptability to the characters interpreted and includes such well known players as Marion Barney, Marjorie Wood, James Seeley, Howell Hansel, Austin Webb, Hugh Dillman, Hallett Thompson, Peter Raymond, Homer Granville, Kalman Matus, Frank Austin and others. The scenic production is elaborate and both it and the characterizations of the players bear the indelible mark of the genius of David Belasco, the wizard of the stage. The play tells a story of life in the national capital, the background being a phase of political life in that city. While classed as a serious play, "The Woman" is filled with bright and clever lines and contains many a hearty laugh. The play possesses unusual interest and is filled with surprising climaxes. "The Woman" has been classed by newspaper and magazine critics in New York and Chicago as one of the strongest and most interesting that has ever come from the Belasco studio.
