WHERE ARE YOU, PROFESSOR WILSON?

Are you for free trade, as you were for years and years when professor in Princeton College; or do you now actually believe in the hazy sort of gradual change to "tariff for revenue only" which you now advocate?

Are you opposed to labor unions as you were when you were a college professor; or is your suddenly advertised conversion to their benefits of late a real one or only for purposes of being president?

Are you still at heart as much opposed to the initiative and referendum as when you lectured at Princeton to your college students; or have you really changed your mind since the presidential bee began to buzz in your bonnet?

Are you against exclusion of the Chinese from the Pacific Coast, or do you still believe in their "superior skill and intelligence," as you did when you wrote your History of the American People.

WHERE DO YOU STAND, PROFESSOR, on these vital questions? If you were president would you carry out your brand new opinions or your former lifelong opinions?

CAMP IN FAVOR OF SHIFTS.

Tells Yale to Keep Opponents in Guessing Mood Throughout.

Walter Camp, the noted football expert, recently gave a brief outline of the new football rules as affecting Yale and expressed his opinion that the quick running game with many shifts to draw out the defense will enable a light, experienced team to overcome a heavy team which resorts to old-fashioned football.

"The best attack," he said, "will be the one that combines shift plays, which will necessarily put the defense in motion with regular plays. In this way not only will plunges through the line be effective, but also greater effect will be given to the end run or the run outside tackle. If a team allows its opponent to realize that the attack is concentrated and that the plays all must start from a comparatively small radius behind the line, those opponents will close up and render such a form of attack extremely onerous and exhausting.

Brazil Nut Seeds. All the seeds—varying from fifteen to twenty-four—of the Brazil nut germinate at one time. The most vigorous one gets first through a small hole at the top to the open air and then feeds upon the rest.

If you saw it in the Enterprise it's so.

BAPTISTS DISCUSS SUNDAY SCHOOLS

The young peoples' session began devily together. As he was I am doomed to be, this I have learned from Jesus." My Lord, you were dead then, but alive now. If you had a beautiful Jesus, but a dead Jesus, would you preach him? I would not.

The minister then quoted Arnold's pathetic quotation, describing life, love, etc., as delusions, and showed that this was the best that could be done by a world without Christ. He said he knew three things:

"First, all the dead receive a welcome from the heart of God immediately, as they enter into glory. Second: Until that day, Christ is getting ready a place for me. Third: He's praying for me. Why then should I fear?"

He ended by saying that Christ, last of all, saves by his imparted life, wherein the people become partakers of his nature.

The early part of the afternoon was taken up by the reports of committees. Among the reports was that of the committee on Resolutions, thanking the Morning Enterprise for the reports of its sessions.

At 4:00 in the afternoon and in the evening a sermon preached by Dr. Hinson was followed by the adjournment of the convention.

The attendance registered was more than 200, with about 300 visitors and delegates in all were present. Friday morning was devoted to the work of the Bible school. After a devotional meeting, led by Rev. J. D. Springston the district superintendent of the Baptist Sunday school work upon the Northwestern coast, U. K. Hall presented the report of the Sunday schools, after which a number led in fifteen minute discussions on Sunday school work. Rev. A. C. Sax to speaking upon "Training a local Sunday school leadership." Rev. R. R. Perkins upon "Our obligation to the untaught." Jeff. H. Irish, upon "A graded school curriculum," and Rev. M. L. Thomas upon "The evangelistic opportunity." This was followed by an interesting Round Table upon general Bible school work, led by Rev. Springston.

General Orozco's Grandchildren Writing Plea to President Taft

"DEAR MR. PRESIDENT TAFT—My papa is not a murderer. He is a brave soldier fighting for his country. Please don't let the American soldiers give my grandpapa to Mr. Madero, for Mr. Madero would shoot him, and that would kill poor granddaddy." So wrote little seven-year-old Elena Orozco, granddaughter of General Pascual Orozco, leader of the Mexican rebels. And she meant every word of it straight from an anxious though childish heart. She is living with her mother, brother and sisters in Los Angeles. Her "granddaddy" as she lovingly calls him, would fall into the hands of the United States through the fortunes of war and then be turned over to President Madero of Mexico, she sat down on the porch of her mother's home, with her brother beside her, as you see them above, and penned the pathetic letter to President Taft. She signed her name just as reproduced in the cut. Mrs. Orozco left Mexico when the federates threatened to put the Orozco family between the firing lines during battle if ever they could lay hands on them.

GIRL ENDS LIFE AFTER AUTO RIDE

The stories of the girl and the men are virtually the same. They said they left here in a car at 8 o'clock Thursday evening for Portland. The car was obtained from Elliott's garage. Peter Marrs, who has been employed at the garage for several months, was the driver. They said the machine broke down at Gray's Crossing on the way to Portland, and after temporary repairs were made the car was taken to a garage in Portland. None of them could tell the location of the garage. They said it took several hours to make the repairs, which accounted for their not returning home earlier. All deny that anything happened on the trip which would cause Miss Proffitt to commit suicide. The party drove through Main street, Oregon City about 7 o'clock Friday morning and had something to eat in a restaurant. Witnesses say as the car went through Main street one of the girls was sitting in a man's lap. The prisoners admitted they had a small bottle of port wine, but declared that this was all they had had to drink on the trip. None of them showed effects of having been drinking. Deputy District Attorney Stipp and Sheriff Mass, after making an investigation, decided that it would be best to hold the girl and the two men until after the inquest and the completion of the post mortem examination. The girl was placed in the custody of Jail Matron Parker. Flincaene was taken home to change his clothing, and Timmons was locked up. Flincaene was later placed in jail. Dr. Guy Mount, who is conducting the autopsy said late Friday night: "So far I have found nothing to indicate that Miss Proffitt was attacked. She had been a patient of mine, but I did not think she was seriously ill. It might have been that she brooded over her illness until she decided to end her life." "I am still at a loss to find a motive for the suicide," said Sheriff Mass. "The other members of the party say Miss Proffitt was in good spirits when she left them, and that nothing happened on the trip that might have caused her to end her life. The mother-daughter had stayed away from home at night, and it is possible the girl feared to face her parents." Deputy District Attorney Stipp, after hearing the report of Dr. Mount, said the only theory he could advance for the girl's act was that she feared facing her parents after having been out all night. Miss Johnson is an orphan, and has been employed at the home of Peter Haas, Fourteenth and Center streets. She was detained in the sheriff's office most of the day, but it was not until late in the afternoon that she was informed that her friend had committed suicide. The girl collapsed and was in an almost hysterical condition when taken by Deputy Sheriff Miles to the home of the jail matron. She begged piteously to be allowed to go to the Haas home, but Mrs. Haas sent word that she would not have her back. J. N. Elliott, who lives near the Proffitt home, which is on Molalla avenue at the city limits, was attracted by the cries of the mother when he passed the house on the way to work. The girl was dead when he entered the house, the body being on a chair. Miss Proffitt was fully dressed except her shoes, which had been removed shortly after she entered the house. Marrs the chauffeur, virtually corroborated the stories of Timmons, Flincaene and Miss Johnson. He said that the machine was hired at 8 o'clock Thursday night and the party was supposed to return to this city before 1 o'clock Friday morning. "We had a serious breakdown," said Marrs, "and went to two garages, staying at one about two hours and the other about three. While we were at one of the garages the young men and women said they would go to a restaurant nearby and eat. They were gone only a few minutes. They did not go into any saloons or leave the car except when they went to the restaurant. When the machine was engaged I was informed that the party simply wished to take a pleasure trip to Portland. Marrs is one of the best known young men in the city and his story is implicitly believed by the authorities. He was simply employed to drive the machine, as he is by other persons daily. He said the party returned to this city at 7 o'clock Friday morning and left him at the restaurant.
