THE MIDDLEWOMAN.

In these most spacious and resounding days of sex equality, we have sought to give woman a proper share of responsibility in the solution of vexing problems. We should like to put the middlewoman against the middleman in reducing the high cost

It Takes a Large Brain to Acquire and Make Use of Knowledge

By Dr. F. ANTHONY SPITZKA, Brain Specialist

VIGOROUS MINDS DEPEND NOT ONLY UPON THE ACQUISITION OF KNOWLEDGE, BUT ALSO UPON THE INITIATIVE POWER OF UTILIZING KNOWLEDGE TO THE BEST ADVANTAGE. TO DO THIS THE INDIVIDUAL MUST POSSESS A BRAIN OF SUPERIOR ORGANIZATION.

Not only must it be large enough; its elements must consist of the BEST MATERIAL, and the plan of construction must be one of the most elaborate and efficient kind possible.

A Swiss watch of fine construction is a MORE RELIABLE timepiece than a cheap and hastily manufactured alarm clock. In like manner the expert anatomist discerns the differences between the simply constructed brains of lower forms and the complex thought apparatus of man, and even within our own species demonstrable differences in the elaboration of cerebral architecture have been determined.

The brain of a first class genius like Frederick Gauss is as FAR REMOVED FROM THAT OF THE SAVAGE BUSHMAN as that of the latter is removed from the brain of the nearest related ape. The range of brain weight within the human species is a very wide one, from a Tourgenoff's brain weighing 2,012 grams or a Cuvier's weighing 1,830 grams to that of a Zulu weighing only 1,050 grams.

There is a distinct gap between the lowest brain weight of a normal human being and the highest figure recorded for an anthropoid, 425 grams in a gorilla.

of living, and we have mourned the passing of the old-time public market houses in cities, once thronged by middlewomen with market baskets as an evidence that the middlewoman is abandoning us to our fate.

But this has been a premature fear. The dreadful middleman is now finding himself faced by the middlewoman with a market basket on her arm.

There are already 700,000 housewives organized into what is called The Housewives' League. At present the greatest strength of the body is to be found in the city of New York, where the pinch of high prices in foodstuffs added to the enormous rentals and other abnormal charges incident to a highly artificialized life, is the hardest. In other Eastern cities, however, and in Chicago, the organization is now formed, and it has reached a point of expansion and a concert of action, making themselves visible in reports of gratifying results. These results are indicated in their buying results are indicated not only in prices in some lines, but in initiative toward perfecting pure food laws, and the correction of false labeling. "Some of the dealers who handle canned goods in large quantities," says Mrs. Julian Heath, president of The Housewives' League, "buy them unlabeled and select a name of their own—say X Y X brand. They may take corn, for example, from several different canneries, and it may be of different grades, but it all labeled X Y Z. What we housewives want to know is where that corn was canned and under what conditions."

This is scripture, which repeatedly forbids putting into the mouth what will defile the flesh. The middlewoman will become our tower of strength against such middlemen as seek to defile us, at high rates and under false labels. And she will tower even higher as our bulwark against extortion. It is not the purpose of the Housewives' League to eliminate all middlemen, but to co-operate with the fittest of them who survive, in serving the ends of economy and purity in securing food supplies. Woman's reputation for finding bargains in wearing apparel encourages us to hope that her ability in getting the most of her money, when turned to the solution of the food problem, will soon make her our pillar of cloud by day and a fire by night. Against the lordly and relentless middleman we put the middlewoman with her market basket. And we trust her more than we do statesmen, economists and publicists who almost always miss solving human problems, because they feel under an intellectual obligation to hunt for them in the midst of complexities, while, almost always, they are natural in origins and simple in forms of expression.

THE U'REN AMBITION.

The Enterprise today prints in its news columns the announcement that W. S. U'ren, of Oregon City, will become a candidate for Governor to succeed Oswald West. We regret to be compelled to chronicle this happening, but news is news.

"We are mightily encouraged over the result of the election," says Mr. U'ren. Why?

On the face of the returns we see nothing for U'ren to be encouraged over. Everyone of his pet measures his everlasting hobbies, went down to decisive defeat, and the persistent U'ren will have them on the ballot again in 1914, so he says.

"The reactionaries and standpatters made an attack on the initiative and referendum and failed," says U'ren, who, along with Jonathan Bourne and a small, but select company, made an attack on the direct primary law, and also failed.

"We gained equal suffrage, which is a great victory," continues U'ren. He is right, it is a great victory. The Enterprise is glad to have been able to contribute towards it, but we do not remember that U'ren made a single speech for it during the campaign preceding Tuesday's election. It is like U'ren to crow over the suffrage victory, for he can see, as well as any other man, that women will vote in Oregon in 1914, when he runs for Governor.

Time was when we believed in Mr. U'ren's sincerity, but no more.

He voted for Roosevelt for president, and Wilson was chosen, which is another reason why the Clackamas law-giver should be "mightily encouraged" over the result of the election.

"The people of Oregon don't want U'ren for Governor, and will say so in 1914, if given the opportunity."

COUNTRY ALL RIGHT.

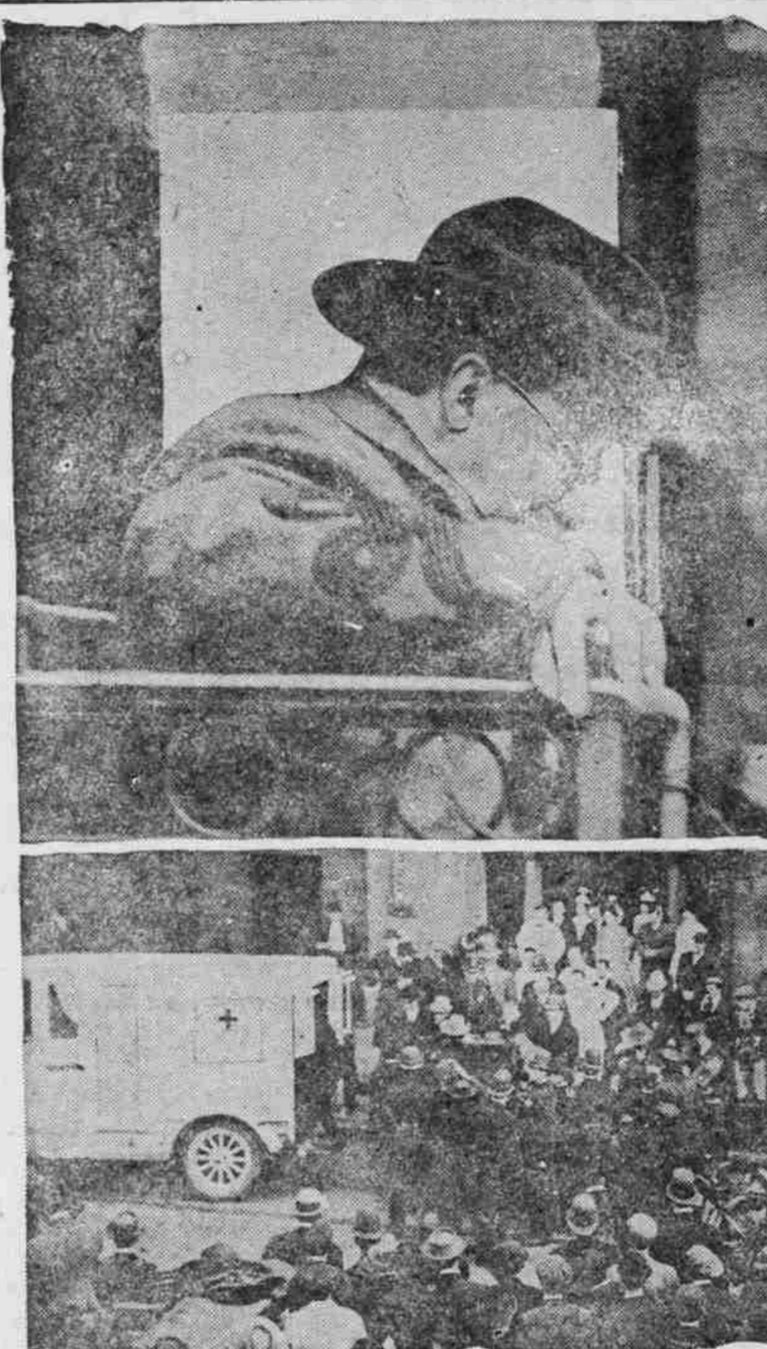

The Enterprise doesn't believe business is going to smash just because Woodrow Wilson has been elected. This paper, like all good Americans should always be optimistic. We believe the success of the country is largely dependent upon the popular view. If Wilson's administration is successful, if the country is prosperous under Democratic rule, Mr. Wilson or any other Democrat may be elected president in 1916. If the administration is not a successful one, the American people may be depended upon to make a change for the better. Mr. Taft was the victim of an appeal for which he was not responsible. And, although he is overwhelmingly defeated, his need of praise will be bestowed by his countrymen in years to come. He was perhaps wrong in heeding the advice of certain friends, but there is not a single American, so far as we know, who will accuse him of doing anything but what he thought was right.

We are drifting. The nation is drifting. Evolution is as immutable a law as it was in the Paleozoic or Cambrian divisions. Wilson is an evolution. Parties do not mean as much as they did immediately before or after the civil war. The independent voter carries the balance of power. Today he elects Taft and tomorrow Wilson. And the Enterprise is big enough to believe that he knows what he is doing. Wilson's election is largely an experiment. We believe the men who elected him thought so when they cast their ballots. "Hope springs eternal in the human breast" and the electors thought the placing of the Democratic candidate in the White House might be an aid to business. If it proves the contrary one may depend upon these same men putting the party out with the same decisive majority or plurality.

Voting in its final analysis is a selfish proposition. That's what makes it a successful proposition. We vote for a certain man because we think the election of that man will benefit us. If we find that we are mistaken—and are honest with ourselves and our countrymen—we and we mean by we now, the independent voters, rectify the wrong as soon as possible, self preservation being the first law of nature.

The Enterprise does not believe as some of the other commentators on the results of Tuesday's election that the Republican party nationally is destroyed. On the contrary we believe that it will rise phoenix like from its so-called ruins and be a power for good in future years. To admit anything else is to give the Democratic party credit for greater lon-

Roosevelt Arriving Home And Entering Mercy Hospital

Photos copyright, 1912, by American Press Association. COLONEL ROOSEVELT, who was shot by John Schrank at Milwaukee, left Mercy hospital, Chicago, where he was taken the morning after the attempted assassination, and reached his home at Sagamore Hill without apparent distress. He stood the journey well. The doughty colonel was snatched just as he was alighting from his private car at Syosset, N. Y., near Oyster Bay, his train stopping there so that the candidate could avoid the excitement of meeting his loyal town folks, who had turned out in goodly numbers to welcome him home. The colonel was also snatched, as seen in the lower picture, just as he was being assisted from the auto ambulance into Mercy hospital the morning after he was shot at Milwaukee.

givity and greater service, and it would take more than a prophet or the son of a prophet to convince the Enterprise that the party founded by Lincoln, the party that carried the country through its greatest crisis, is to die of a wound inflicted by one it has so signally honored. The Republican party might have been crucified as its enemies say, Tuesday, but if so, there will be a glorious resurrection.

The Flashlight election returns of the Morning Enterprise gave the results first to the people of the city. More than 1000 persons, instead of 100, as published through a mistake Wednesday, watched the canvass for hours. The Morning Enterprise is the only newspaper in Oregon outside of Portland that gave this service.

PRETENSE. Why will not men be contented with appearing what they are? As sure as we attempt to pass for what we are not we make ourselves ridiculous.—Henry Kirke White.

The Sea Otter. The sea otter combines the habits of a seal with the intelligence and amusing character of the otter. When met in herds far out at sea, which is but seldom now, they are commonly seen swimming on their backs. They even eat their food lying in this position on the water and nurse their young ones on their chests between their paws, exactly as a south sea island mother swims with her baby in the water. When swimming in this attitude they even shade their eyes with their paws when the sun dazzles them.

A Printer's Blunder. A Paris newspaper on one occasion made a blunder which excited no small amount of merriment at the expense of a man of real talent. The following paragraphs, intended to have been printed separately, were by some error so arranged that they were read consecutively: "Dr. X. has been appointed head physician to the Hospital de la Clinique. Orders have been issued by the authorities for the immediate extension of the cemetery of Mont Par-nasse. The works are being executed with the utmost dispatch."
