Americans Would Be Wise to Generalize In Sports Rather Than Specialize

By Sir ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, English Author, Creator of Sherlock Holmes

CERTAINLY THE OLYMPIAN GAMES HAVE WON FOR AMERICANS A PRIME PLACE AS AN ATHLETIC NATION, BUT I THINK THEY WOULD BE WISE SHOULD THEY SEEK TO GENERALIZE MORE THAN TO SPECIALIZE. AS IT IS, THEY TRAIN FOR ONE THING AND THE RESULT OF WINNING OR LOSING SEEMS TO BE THE PRIME FEATURE OF THE SPORT. THE ENTHUSIASM SEEMS TO BE CENTERED IN THE END RATHER THAN THE PLAY OF THE GAME.

That the American people have made enormous strides in the athletic arena in their short history goes without saying, and if they will only develop the GENERALIZING of sports rather than being specialists only they will naturally INCULCATE THAT SPIRIT IN THE PEOPLE generally to the better athletic development of the people themselves, which, of course, will naturally TEND TOWARD THE CULTIVATION OF A SPLENDID ATHLETIC COUNTRY.

For it is seemingly evident that nearly every sport that is introduced brings out strong capabilities. For example, take football. I have seen most delightful football in America, and, of course, it is primarily our game. I have only one fault to find with it, and that is that it is unnecessarily rough. It is a most satisfying sport, indeed, to the average Englishman to witness an American football game with this one exception.

In fact, all American sports seem to DISPLAY VIGOR AND APTITUDE that with just a little broader conception of the game must continue to place them at or NEAR THE TOP OF THE WORLD.

busy and provide the city with an elevator to the Hill section by polling a solid vote for it. You know the need for such a convenience, such a necessity and you can win one of your first fights for women's rights in this coming city election. The first cost will be small, the maintenance smaller, while the value is not possible to estimate when tired mothers of all ages are to be considered with no thought of its commercial value.

FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

SOCIALISM VS. CHRISTIANITY.

OREGON CITY, Nov. 20, (Editor Morning Enterprise).—Apropos of Socialism and Christianity it is worth while to observe that Socialism as a plan for the economic reconstruction of society is neither Christian nor anti-Christian. The attitude of Socialists toward religion depends upon the Socialist. There is a wide range of difference, all the way, from the Christian Socialists of the last century Charles Kingsley, of the Church of England, to the anti-religionist quoted in your editorial of Sunday Morning. There are those who believe that the carpenter of Nazareth was the first great Socialist and that to establish the Socialist program is an act of faith; while others are so thoroughly antagonistic to every existing institution that they would fain read God out of the universe. Before we judge a man's religion or politics it were best to let him speak for himself. The significance of Mr. U'Ren's candidacy for governor depends, in my judgment upon two things: the work he has already done for the state of Oregon and the platform upon which he proposes to run. GEORGE NELSON EDWARDS

COUNCIL IS DEFENDED.

OREGON CITY, Nov. 20.—(Editor of Morning Enterprise).—After reading Mr. Hackett's article of November 18, on "Protest Against City Debt," I should say that the taxpayers and those having the welfare of Oregon City at heart are in a measure to blame for the condition that exists here at the present time as they do not attend the council meetings as they should and support and encourage the men who are making honest efforts to advance the most vital interests of Oregon City. There are men in the present council who are working until near midnight trying to do their duty by the people whom they represent against what appears to an outsider to be a very discouraging proposition. The matter of the O. W. P. freight franchise which the council have under consideration at present is a very important item to the future of Oregon City and if the taxpayers would attend the meetings and assist with their presence the men whom they ask to do their business for them, some of the members would not be so ready to give very valuable franchises and privileges to corporations which ask for them for trifling considerations. V. HARRIS.

order's foundation, and its growth. He welcomed any and all of the brothers to visit them again at any time. K. K. Kubli, Past Exalted Ruler, of Portland Lodge No. 142, made a forceful address, in which he lauded the local lodge on its magnificent temple on the banks of the Willamette. He dealt with the principles of the order, which he said, was not as old in years as many others, but it was well to the top in numbers. Gilbert L. Hedges spoke on the symbol of the order—the American flag. He told of its origin, how it had stood floating high in the air in many battles with Great Britain in the days of the colonies. A body which is growing in the Pacific Coast, he said, who show no respect for the flag, will find that some day, the people as a whole will arise against them. The American people as a whole, he said, were slow to anger, but when they reached that point they would protect the flag and country.

The local lodge was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. K. K. Kubli presented for the Portland Lodge, a large clock. J. E. Hedges responded to the presentation speech, and said that all members of the Oregon City Lodge held a warm spot in their heart for Portland Lodge, and he said had it not been for the able assistance which the Portland Lodge had given the Oregon City Lodge when it was being instituted, there would have been no gathering in the room this evening. He spoke of the Portland Lodge as the parent lodge and thanked them for their splendid gift. A. M. Blaker, Exalted Ruler of the Vancouver, (Washington) Lodge presented a reading lamp to the local lodge. In presenting the beautiful lamp, he extended an invitation to the Oregon City brothers to visit them in their home at any time. Grant B. Dimick responded to his speech, and thanked Vancouver for its splendid gift. He said in Elkdom state lines were not known and that one brother, though he were humble, was as high as the brothers who were rulers of the land. A beautiful vase of chrysemum was presented by the Albany Lodge. Grand Esteemed Loyal Knight, William Eagles, a member of Albany lodge, made the presentation speech. Walter A. Dimick responded in a few words, thanking the Albany lodge for its elegant gift. A singing cabinet was presented by Eugene Lodge, Mark L. Frost representing the lodge. Livy Ship spoke in behalf of Oregon City Lodge thanking the Eugene lodge for remembering them. Bayley's orchestra played a number of selections and the Oregon Male Quartet was called back several times after rendering the "Old Mill Wheel". Miss Kathleen Harrison sang "A Gypsy Maiden". It was a jolly lot of the finest representatives in Elkdom that thronged Busch's Hall in the evening and with their wives, sweethearts and sisters they made merry until long past midnight. The huge hall room was tastefully decorated with the ever popular purple and white and the flags of the Nation, which were artistically displayed. Dancing started early, and after the finish of the dedication ceremonies, the throng was augmented by several hundred people from the Elks Hall. Features that were especially pleasing were the entrance of the band from Portland Lodge No. 142, and the toast to "Our Absent Brothers." The band marched in and formed a circle in the center of the ball room floor, and led by Frank Hennessey, played two selections and were applauded vigorously. Promptly at 11 o'clock, the lights went out and the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" floated out, and John G. McCue, of Portland, made a brief address, touching upon the solemn and tender significance of the 11 o'clock toast. Special late cars and trains carried the Elks into Portland and Willamette Valley cities from a day that will long be remembered by all of them who were fortunate enough to share the generous hospitality of Oregon City Lodge.

Smashed Bow of Warship Repaired in Twenty Days

OUR photograph shows in especially clear manner the damage which was wrought to a destroyer without that vessel being sunk. The Vixen, an English ship, was in collision in Shields harbor, England, recently with a large steam vehicular ferry. She is here seen in a drydock, where her damaged bows were rebuilt and the whole of the necessary repairs carried out within twenty days. The Vixen is one of the older, three funneled, three knot British destroyers of a class which average 800 tons and have average dimensions of 210 by 21 by 11 (maximum draft). They were built between 1896 and 1903.
