

FANS BELITTLE GRIFF'S RECENT HERO STUNT.

The story from Montana about Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington Americans, saving his life by beheading an infuriated deer with a rock the size of a baseball will not go around the big ring, where they've been unable to find any steam to the Old Fox's delivery, even with a gauge, for some time past.

It is reminiscent of the yarn about George Engle, a minor league pitcher in the northwest, who was getting by on a wind-up and a prayer. He had some words with a player on an opposing team one day, and when this player came to bat against George the shortstop on Engle's team bustled up to the pitcher and whispered vengefully: "Bean him, George! Bean him!"

George eyed him with withering scorn.

"Bean him?" he said. "Bean him? What with?"

ATHLETIC STARS TO QUIT.

Many Famous Knights of the Track to Give Up the Sport.

It now looks as if the athletic world will be minus a few stars next spring. Many of the crickets have announced their intention of giving up the sport. Among them are John Paul Jones of Cornell, holder of the world's amateur

BASKETBALL IN WATER.

New Game Proposed to Supplant Rough Rugby Polo.

A new game—basketball in the water—is to make its first appearance this winter. The sport will embody the game of Rugby polo without the objectionable points and will have all of the good points of basketball. It will be known as "basket polo."

Norman Cox, swimming instructor of the Chicago Athletic association, is the author of the new game and has framed a set of rules for it.

Twelve players, according to the rules, six on a side, will engage in the game. The area of the playing pool will be not less than 40 feet long and 20 feet wide nor more than 100 feet long and 50 feet wide.

Baskets fourteen inches in diameter, on a background four feet high and five feet wide, will form the goals, and tops of which shall not be more than five feet above the surface of the water nor more than eight and one-half feet from the bottom of the pool at the shallow end.

Points will be made by allowing three points for a field goal and one for a goal from a free trial. The game will be played by halves of twenty minutes each.

NAVY UNCOVERS WONDER.

Name, Leonard; Weight, Only 142; Speed, Lightning.

Leonard, the lightest man on the Naval academy squad, has been doing some brilliant work in the back field during practice, and his ability as a punter, coupled with the fact that he is distinctly the best punter on the squad, makes him sure of playing against the Army team.

He weighs but 142 pounds, but has the greatest amount of natural half-back ability of any Navy player this year.

Pittsburgh's Trio Made Great Record. Fred Clarke, Hans Wagner and Tommy Leach were members of the Pittsburgh team for thirteen years. They first came together in Louisville when that city held a franchise in the big circuit. This big three combined made 5,905 hits out of 19,043 times at bat, stole 1,150 bases and accepted 16,530 chances out of 17,538.

Shadeless Forests.

Large tracts of dense forests in Australia are practically shadeless. Many kinds of trees in that strange country turn their leaves to the sun, and thus one may stand under a tree of enormous size and be as fully exposed to the sun as though he were in the open plain. Travel through these forests is said to be exceedingly arduous work, as the trees, while they do not cut off the sun, prevent the breeze from reaching the ground, and thus the traveler experiences a stifling heat.

Points for Mothers

Timely Hints on Care of Baby.
What mother does not long to give her baby all the advantages possible for normal development? Yet there are many, having had no special training for motherhood, who neglect methods best adapted for a child's welfare.

Take the question of pure air for babies. Many a mother thoughtlessly allows her baby to stay in a heated room in which there are several occupants. With so many people breathing this same atmosphere it soon has its oxygen exhausted, and it is not an uncommon thing to see the baby yawn and become fretful. Those who understand this cause either immediately change the air in the same room or take the little one into another room that has been specially aired, that he may regain his composure. For this same reason it is imperative for grown-ups to avoid keeping the baby in rooms where household duties are being performed, as the odors from cooking, the dust from sweeping and the steam from washing all rob the air of the freshness so beneficial to the health of an infant. Busy mothers especially should see the advantage of training a baby to stay in one place, and that place should be made clean and well ventilated. Frequent trips to this room can be made between tasks, to change positions and to look after his comfort.

Even in cold weather indoor airings of fifteen minute periods should be given to babies. They should be commenced when the little one is a month old, and an excellent way to keep him warm is to put him into his coat, leggings and bonnet and then tuck him into his crib or carriage beneath some warm, light weight covering and place him face forward toward the widely opened windows. Care should be taken to see that all doors in this room are kept closed to prevent drafts.

It is not universally recognized that the constant supply of pure air for the tiny lungs of the baby is fully as important as his food. Fresh, pure air is required to renew and purify his blood, and the beneficial effects produced by it are good temper, red cheeks and an improved appetite.

Just when it is safe to begin taking a baby out of doors in winter is a question often asked by the young mother. It is wiser to wait until he is three months old and then only on pleasant days. He should be tucked snugly into his carriage and kept in the sunshine, out of the wind, with the precaution always of shading his eyes from the sunlight. Days when it is very cold or when the winds are heavy should be avoided, and a nap in an open air sleeping room substituted. When babies are out of doors they should be constantly watched to see that they are not suffering from cold, as it is important that a baby's bodily heat should be maintained. It is well for mothers to remember that many of the diseases of infant life are directly attributable to overheated and vitiated air, so that riding in electric or steam cars in winter or the carrying of children into department stores is done with attendant risks.

Six Don'ts For Mothers.

Haven't you seen mothers, not only the young, inexperienced mothers, but women of mature years who are old enough to know better, constantly doing things to their children that make you want to shake them and if possible bring them to a sense of realization of the error of their ways?

Mothers will persist in allowing themselves to grow old in feeling. Of course they cannot stay the passage of years, but they can keep young in thought by making themselves a companion to their children, joining in their play as well as the more serious phases of their lives.

Mothers must take care not to let themselves rust mentally. The growing girl and boy who can have mother help them out of a tight place in their lessons or can go to her for a clear answer to a perplexing question rarely get that disagreeable know it all air so common to young America.

Never try to force your children's confidence. If you have tried to be the chum of your child from the start the confidence will be given unhesitatingly. Confidences that are asked or demanded are always given grudgingly and with a sense of resentment when they are not refused altogether. Children never confide willingly in an unsympathetic mother. The moment a child realizes he will be criticised or scolded for the little mistakes he makes he will hide everything possible from the mother, but if he is sure of her ready sympathy the confidence will be given unasked.

Avoid allowing a child to see that you are disappointed in him. There is no surer road to self-consciousness and the don't care attitude than if the boy and girl feel that mother thinks them a failure.

On the other hand, don't think your children are prodigies. Children usually know they are not the human wonders their fond mothers believe them to be, and when they are constantly exploited they are bound to be conscious of embarrassment and being under a strain show up to bad advantage. And if the child agrees with the maternal opinion he becomes a bore and disgustingly conceited.

OBSTINACY.

There is something in obstinacy which differs from every other human passion. Whenever it fails it never recovers, but either breaks like iron or crumbles sulkily away like a fractured arch. Most other passions have their period of fatigue and rest, their sufferings and their cure, but obstinacy has no resource, and the first wound is mortal.—Johnson.

WON'T YOU SEND AN OFFICER?

Is this the police station? This is Mrs. Barton, 18 Garden Terrace. Two suspicious looking men are prowling around and seem to be watching the house. I'm awfully frightened, as my husband is away and the servants are out. Won't you send up an officer?"

Such an appeal over the Bell Telephone always brings a quick response from the police headquarters.

day morning. Judge Dimick, who is representing the Clackamas Southern, declares that the Southern Pacific has no right to try to prevent the other company from crossing Fifteenth Street. He says the Southern Pacific has no franchise and is operating under a permit granted by the Oregon Central Railway Company by the city in 1868. The city council has granted the Clackamas Southern a franchise to lay tracks on certain streets. Judge Dimick says the company he represents will not even have to ask permission of the Railway Commission to cross the Southern Pacific tracks.

At a meeting of the city council held in November this year a resolution declaring that the Southern Pacific had no franchise for a track on a portion of Center Street and that the trestle at Twelfth Street be removed, was adopted.

It was announced that the Southern Pacific would immediately proceed to secure a temporary restraining order in the event of an effort being made by the Clackamas Southern to put the crossing in. It was reported, but denied by the officers of the company, that the Clackamas Southern had its plans made to select a Sunday as the day to put in the crossing, knowing that the Southern Pacific could obtain no injunction on that day. It is evident that the Southern Pacific Company will spare no expense in placing every possible obstacle in the way of the Clackamas Southern in its effort to cross the Southern Pacific tracks to get out of the city.

If it happened it is in the Enterprise.

TYPHOID PATIENTS NOW NUMBER 44

intendent of Schools Toozee and the board of school directors Monday decided to dismiss the children at 11 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Toozee and the teachers urged the children to bring bottles of boiled water with them today. None of them will be allowed to use any of the water from the faucets at the schools.

The children also were urged to use none but water that had been boiled at their homes.

The Board of Water Commissioners at a meeting Monday night discussed the typhoid epidemic, and it was announced that Superintendent Howell had sent samples of the city water to chemists for analyses and expected at least one report Wednesday. The commissioners do not think the water is the cause of the disease but want to take every precaution to prevent its spread. A report that the filters had not been cleaned as often as they should be was ridiculed for they are cleaned at least three times a day. The samples are being analyzed by chemists in Portland and at the state university.

The coupons representing the first installment of interest on the $40,000 bond issue were received, the interest being $900.
