I	There is an utter lack of demand for potatoes from the outside and trade in the local market is on a nominal basis. Potatoes are now so low priced in California that a large per cent of the crop will not be dug at all. There is a big freight handicap against the local producer when prices are fairly good in the south, but at the present time the railroad charge will eat up at least a quarter of the price received even for the fancy stock. For ordinary stock there is absolutely no demand from the outside and it is not likely that producers could obtain shipping charges at this time.	26th, 1912. RESOURCES D	ollars Cts.
