The First Woman Suffragist. A modern historian makes the claim that Gouzen Hroth, the mighty viking, who afterward became the first Duke of Normandy and the progenitor of William the Conqueror, was the original woman suffragist and that it was this valiant Norseman who sounded the first clarion call for woman's rights ten centuries ago.

APPLE TRADE SHOWS GREAT IMPROVEMENT

The market for apples is somewhat more active but prices are showing no improvement. Cheaper quality offerings are not pressing so hard upon the market but there is a sufficient amount of good quality of lesser-sought varieties to fill 't he wants.

Little first class stock is displayed in the local trade, this being true more of extra fancy Spitzenbergs than other varieties. While there are quite a few shipments of this variety marked extra fancy, little of it is really of the quality marked.

Most of the so-called extra fancy Spitzenbergs are scarcely fancy, in fact, a majority of present shipments under that label could not be considered higher than extra choice.

KRAXBERGER DIVORCE SUIT IS DISMISSED

The advice that Circuit Judge Campbell gave Wednesday evening at the conclusion of part of the testimony in the case of Mrs. Julia Kraxberger against Franz Kraxberger, of Macksburg, if hung upon the walls of a great many American homes, would cause less divorce cases which now crowd the court dockets.

The couple came to this country without funds, as is the case of many, and through hard labor on the part of both husband and wife, have arisen to be fairly wealthy citizens. They have reared a large family, consisting of eight children.

The court indicated that the trouble had arose through gossip and bad advice and warned the parties that they must not open their ears to what any one would tell them, or they must not allow any one, not even their children, to step between them as husband and wife.

In dismissing the case, Judge Campbell observed that a great many foreigners come to this country, practically poverty stricken, but through hard labor and by depriving themselves of many of the pleasures of life, they accumulate property and wealth. They find open to them, he said, many opportunities to make money in this country, that they do not find in their own country.

The people of this country, or the average American citizen, do not see these opportunities, and quite often, when they see people strive as those people have striven, they imagine that great hardships are being endured and the draw the conclusion, the court said, that abuse is prevalent. In this case, it seems, that the husband has had more opportunity to get out and learn the modern ways, while on the other hand, the wife stayed at home. The minds of the two became greatly different and the wife, said Judge Campbell, imagined that the husband was not true to his matrimonial relations.

As a great many do, she would think of little things that happened in the past and make mountains out of mole hills. Judge Campbell dismissed the case, after hearing all of the testimony of the plaintiff, and part of the testimony of the defendant. William M. Stone represented the plaintiff and Judge Grant B. Dimick the defendant.

Her Love for the Roses

(Written by Thomas Wineset of Oregon City a blind boy educated at the Institute for the Blind at Salem.)

Her love for the roses her choicest of flowers In the evenings in the weeks of fair July Upon the mown-grassed lawn she spends many happy hours

A great fir tree standing not far from the fence Appears to her to be noble and tall With its giant trunk and wide spreading branches Towering high in air above each and all

"What a wee thing am I" thought the lone little maid While she sat on the lawn beneath the fir's shade And held in her hand a single fair rose

She heard the cry of the wild canary Above the moaning wind. "Tis lonely she said Just for one little maid. There's naught but the rose with me in the shade

And the fence over yonder and the giant fir tree Is indeed a statue high above me!" The one small girl and the one large tree

The love for the rose and all beautiful flowers Are treasures to her through slow passing hours (Thomas Wineset was born blind He never saw the trees and roses and describes from feeling only.)

RED CROSS SEALS SAVE LIVES OF MANY PERSONS

"Red Cross Seals?" inquired a young woman at a selling-booth in a Washington post-office to an elderly man, who halted as she spoke.

"What are they for?" he asked. "To help in the cure of tuberculosis."

"My, my," broke in the old man, "if I had only known about these before my wife died I might have saved her!" and he wiped his eyes as he went on, "How do you use them?"

"You stick them on the back— But the young woman was interrupted again. "On the back? How simple! Oh, if I had only known!" mused the man as he walked on with misty eyes. But he bought no seals; it was too late for him.
