At Napoleon’s Command

A splendid offer made in the days of the Napoleonic Wars (To Two Parties)

This is a short tale in the style of Napoleon’s great histories. A Lorrain, an officer in the army, finds himself in a desperate situation. He is in search of a safe place to hide his treasure. He turns to his rival, a French general, for help. The general agrees to help him, but only if he can use the treasure to buy his way into the army. The story unfolds as the two characters try to outsmart each other.

Lucius & Valera Bartelme

Watch for events in Pathe’s Weekly

The Grand Theatre