

CLEAN-UP

It is said that a good many people go to Portland for necessities and pleasures instead of getting them in Oregon City. There is a way to stop this. People trade where they can get the most for their money and they enjoy themselves where they get the most pleasure for the effort involved. It is not to keep our trade, our money, and our people at home, we should make "home" just a little better than some other place.

In any plan to make a more attractive and greater city, the matter of cleanliness assumes prime importance. Editorially the Telegram deals with the subject in an excellent way: "Practically, it is futile to hope for the realization of a more beautiful city if we cannot bring ourselves to the maintenance of a clean city. We must first get rid of the habit of slovenliness and acquire the habit of tidiness and good order before we can effectually appreciate the value of the sort of a city we are striving for. The clean street; the well-kept residence environment; the compulsory up-keep of vacant property within reasonable limits; the freshening up with the paint brush; the more general planting of trees that will give us uniformly shaded trees by and by, as well as the more extensive ornamenting of home premises with vines and shrubs and flowers, will all help to make a more beautiful city."

"Clearly, the beginning is now and with the city that we have rather than the city we would build. Engender a pride in conditions that exist and we create the ambition which will more speedily bring about the more magnificent city we have planned. We must first learn to be clean, and after that we'll be beautiful as a natural consequence."

This common-sense sentiment applies equally well to Oregon City. Until we first learn to be clean, all our well-meant efforts to become a bigger, better city must necessarily be largely fruitless. Not everyone can subscribe money toward the advancement of Oregon City's welfare, but certainly everybody can take part in the vitally important work of cleaning up.

MILWAUKIE TO MAKE IMPORTANT DECISIONS

MILWAUKIE, Or., Feb. 17.—(Special.)—At a special election the voters will decide five important questions: Authority to purchase or construct a municipal water plant by issuing water bonds to the amount of $20,000; a new method of condemning property for street extensions; power to organize and maintain a fire department; use of the initiative and referendum, and providing for biennial elections, registration of voters and the division of Milwaukie into wards.

City Auditor David Matthews has issued printed statements of these measures in detail, and begun circulating them to the voters. The most important measure is the water bond issue. It is set forth in the act that Milwaukie is to acquire by condemnation proceedings or construct a plant and acquire Minthorne Springs. This opens the way for the purchase of the present water works in Milwaukie if terms can be arranged, but Minthorne Springs are to be the source of supply. The bonds are to run for 20 years, and bear interest at not less than 3 per cent.

For the creation of a fire department authority is asked to levy a special tax of not more than 1 per cent. It is set forth that the department shall consist of 30 active members, beside honorary members. A fire commission of three members, of which two shall be members of the council, is to control the department. It is provided that there shall be two fire stations, one near Main Street and one in the Eastern part of town. The commission is authorized to purchase suitable grounds for these stations.

The election act provides for biennial elections and registration of voters. At present voters are not registered and primaries are not held, but if this amendment carries voters must register. It is provided that there shall be two or more wards. Milwaukie has over 200 voters.

THE LYRE TAIL HAT.

A Charming Creation of Rainproof Malines.

Designed by Ora Cne. AN UNUSUAL COLOR SCHEME IN THIS MODEL.

A new rainproof malines is the material from which this charming hat is fashioned. It is developed in tones of gray malines that shade from a pale to a dark color. The light malines is used for the crown, the dark coming near the face to meet the brim of golden brown velvet.

The ornament adorning the hat is a unique affair made from pheasant feathers. It is known in the millinery world as the "sunburst ornament."

These light malines hats are a delight for early spring wear, and it is the English malines that is used, a fabric much more substantial and a trifle more expensive than the French variety.

Yards and yards of the filmy stuff may be draped on a frame without appreciably increasing its weight.

MISS WILSON'S $650 GOWN.

She Will Wear Norfolk Nelrose Silk at Her Father's Inauguration.

When President Elect Woodrow Wilson is inaugurated in March his daughter, Miss Eleanor Wilson, will wear a dress made from silk manufactured in Norfolk, Va.

A silk dress was offered to Miss Wilson in November when her father was elected president, and she was asked to designate the shade she desired. She chose the outside petal of an American Beauty rose, and the dress is now being made in New York. It will cost $650 and will be delivered in February. The dress will be placed on exhibition in a department store in Norfolk before it is sent to Miss Wilson.

The company has decided to name the shade of silk nelrose in honor of Miss Wilson.

Miss Wilson is said to have accepted the dress from the Virginia concern because she wanted to pay a compliment to her father's native state.

ORIENTAL NOTE IN AFTERNOON GOWNS.

Young Girl Hunter.

Miss Helen B. Elcock is one of the youngest hunters in the country. She lives in Quincy, Mass., and recently she wanted a set of furs, and her father suggested that the "best way to get them was to capture the animals. Her fosskins are so respectable that hunters from all over the state have viewed them, and now she does not want them made into a coat, but prefers to exhibit them as trophies of the chase.
