WHERE THE PRESIDENT'S CHOICE IS JUSTIFIED.

dent Wilson's choice of his cabinet advisers has already been justified, in the case of one of them at least, by the quality of the man as publicly exhibited. That is the case of the Hon. Lindley Murray Garrison, whom Mr. Wilson brought with him from New Jersey to be Secretary of War.

Mr. Garrison was among the 90 per cent of Mr. Wilson's Cabinet who had to be introduced to the country at large. And the introduction was necessarily meager. About all that could be said of Mr. Garrison was that he had been a reputable lawyer and esteemed equity judge in New Jersey. A few days after the inauguration President Wilson added some thing, with the remark that he had chosen Mr. Garrison because of his practical common sense.

Secretary Garrison has already proved that he possess the quality ascribed him by his chief by some pertinent public remarks about what our Army should be. As now constituted, with the necessary deductions for colonial services and coast defense garrisons, our Army, though nominally about 90,000 men, as a mobile or striking force is less than 35,000 men. On this fact Mr. Garrison remarks:

"No one will pretend that with a mobile force of less than 35,000 men we are prepared, in fact, if you don't alter the condition, we are not even prepared to prepare. If we are called upon to meet a force with a force we simply sacrifice men and money in a shameful way. We literally send men out to acquire their education under the fire of the enemy." We do, in fact, even worse than send men to learn the rudiments of fighting under fire. We also send them out to learn how to march and camp and take care of themselves in the field after the war has begun. We send hundreds and thousands of young men, the flower of our population, to death by disease, because of their own and their officers' ignorance, without having ever come in sight of the enemy. That is what we did with our volunteers in the war with Spain. Are we, and our representatives in Congress, never going to learn the lesson of the camp, not the battle-field, mortality of 1898?

The Morning Enterprise is in receipt of a letter signed "Taxpayer on Washington Street". The writer does not give his name and consequently we cannot publish the letter. If he will send us his name the letter will be published with any signature he desires used.

The Hapless Actor. "We actor folk are a hapless lot," said David Warfield. "There is the only profession on this whole globe that does not permit its worker to see his product. Think of it, no actor sees himself. We work in the dark, and our intuition and imagination must be brought to a high class of development in consequence."

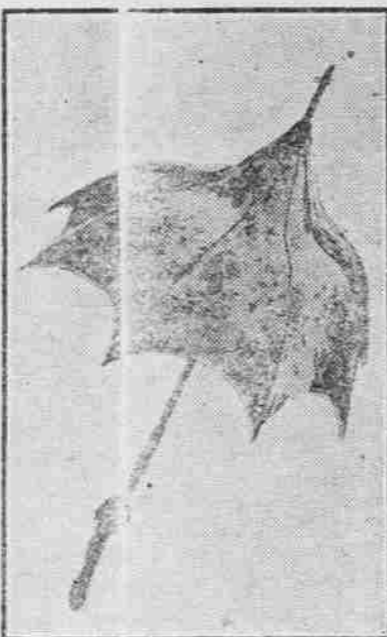

Quint—So you've written a new song for a soprano voice. What's it called? Quaver—"World That I Were Young Again." Quint—Great Scott! You'll never get any woman to sing that.—Boston Transcript.

How the Mighty Are Fallen. Descendants of proud Polish kings live a decadent life in one of the wildest mountain regions of Europe, holding fast to their gallea. They have become primitive and clothe themselves in suits of blanketing and furs fashioned at home, with which to withstand the long and rigorous winters. They wear their hair long, live in rude slab board and log huts, and altogether strangely resemble the North American Indian in his semi-civilized life to day in the American northwest.—Ar gonaut.

Hats and Hoops. Women need to be admonished regarding certain details of good manners in the eighteenth century quite as much as today. At the Banquet at Westminster Abbey in 1790 a notice was posted reading, "No ladies will be admitted with hats, and they are particularly requested to come without feathers and very small hoops, if any."

THE 1913 PARASOL.

The Sunshade That Looks Like a Hat.

"LA CAPRICE" PARASOL.

"La Caprice" is a chic little affair that is going to be a favorite model this summer. On a stick of ebony is mounted the cover of American Beauty dyed silk, and the extension top is a very modish new feature.

BALKAN BLOUSES.

Quite the Latest Effects in the New Waists.

The blouse of cotton, crepe, voile or some similar soft, clinging cotton stuff with a touch of vivid color is a feature of the new season. These blouses are called Balkan blouses and reflect the influence which the present war in Europe is having on feminine costume. For Balkan frocks, blouses and hats are all the rage in Paris now. For the dainty price of $12 or $13 may be picked up a veritable bijou of a Balkan blouse made of French cotton crepe with all edges bound with red or green silk braid and a small braid bound breast pocket embroidered exactly to match. A flaring detachable collar, also braid bound, and groups of tiny buttons down the front and there you are, not much to show for your $12 perhaps in the way of fabric and trimming, but no hold the chic and the "line" as the deft seamstress in the little blouse shop will assure you. Some of these Balkan blouses have tiny Turkish neckties of crimson or purple silk embroidered in contrasting hues. These ties are drawn softly under the rolling collar and knotted four-in-hand style the long ends pasting under buttonhole slashes in the front of the blouse and then falling free to the waist line. One of these Balkan blouses made of dotted white cotton crepe and bound at the throat, sleeve and collar edges with green silk braid was noted the other morning at a fashionable hotel, the blouse being worn with a smart new tailor of mixed black and white worsted stuff and a black milan straw turban.

Sir Thomas Lipton Will Try Again to Lift America's Cup

Photos by American Press Association.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON, following his recent visit to this country, dived headlong into the spotlight's glare on the water of publicity by issuing a challenge for the America's cup. It is six years since he last challenged the New York Yacht club, holder of the famous international trophy, to a race. He agrees this time to build Shamrock IV and sail her across to compete on this side with the best American product. He stands ready to race in 1913. Three years before he was defeated, the last time being ten years ago. Sir Thomas is shown here with Shamrock III.

Perils of Crinoline. The dangers of the historic crinoline are illustrated by a story told by Lady Dorothy Nevill in her reminiscences. Going too near the fireplace, her voluminous skirt caught fire, and in an instant she was in a blaze. There were no men present, and the women could not help her, because if they had gone near enough to be of use their own skirts would have been ignited. Fortunately Lady Dorothy had sufficient presence of mind to roll herself in the hearth rug and thus subdue the flames.

By Professor J. L. GILLIN of the University of Iowa

WE have been so often told of the value of our grain products and of our cattle and hog products that we have failed to realize that the GREATEST ASSET in this country from the point of view of dollars and cents is OUR NATIONAL HEALTH.

The capital value of the eighty-five and a half million inhabitants of the United States in 1907 Professor Fisher of Yale estimates at least two hundred and fifty billion dollars.

Disease and death result in social waste. It is waste largely because it is largely preventable. Forty-two per cent of the one and one-half million deaths in the United States every year could be PREVENTED OR POSTPONED.
