A gathering of relatives surprised Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Jonsrud Sunday, the occasion being their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Jonsrud, who are both natives of Norway, were married 50 years ago near Albert Lea, Minnesota, on April 13th, 1863. They moved to Oregon in 1877 and settled in Clackamas County, on the place where they now live, in 1878.

Mr. Jonsrud is 78 years old but spry as many a man ten years younger. While in Minnesota he served as Senator in the State Legislature, and in Oregon was Justice of the Peace for some thirty years, and is widely known and respected in Clackamas County. "Grandma Jonsrud" as she is affectionately called, is 72 years old and in spite of having one leg crippled by a fall three years ago does all her work and is characteristically cheerful. May they have many more happy anniversaries.

FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

ONE VIEW OF IT

OREGON CITY, Ore., April 25.—(To the Editor)—Lately we have witnessed several unprovoked, cowardly, brutal assaults upon a number of our prominent citizens by a local newspaper, wherein the aforesaid persons were held up to ridicule, scorn and contempt, and a number of other people, friends of the bilious editor, were extolled for their many good qualities.

It is not our purpose to say who is right, and who is deserving of rebuke, but it ought to be that a decent minded, honest, conscientious man, a taxpayer and a factor in the community, be protected from vicious assaults of men suffering with cancer of the intestines, or catarrh of the brain.

One's good name is the most valuable asset he can have—a possession more worthy than anything else he can possess. Yet we are greeted to a spectacle of men's good names dragged down to the dust and ruthlessly trampled upon by whom?

Is it right and fair that one should set himself above his fellows and say "I am holier than thou?" Is it fair that men deserving of respect should be abused like felons? Can any good purpose be thus served? Will society or government be benefited by these tactics employed by a man who is a "knocker"; one that attempts to destroy in his feeble might without trying to build up.

A number of our prominent citizens are to be congratulated on their broad mindedness charity and good will toward people of the type we have just described, or these character wreckers—these vampires in human form that prey upon those of their kind would be serving terms in the penitentiary or answering as defendants in civil actions for libel.

The best way to treat these friends is to let them rave. It has always been thus. How great a blessing is a good health, and those that are sick, or weary are to be pitied.

A. J. HASKINS.
