CITY OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER

THE PURPOSE At a recent investigation of the law gation of city jail methods in the fair city of Tacoma the police station matron expressed it as her opinion that "the law was made to punish folks, and I don't believe in giving prisoners pillows and sheets." This matron, an excellent woman according to her lights, had the ancient interpretation of the law deeply impressed upon her mind.

Oregon City is fortunate in having some officials who differ quite radically with this matron of the old school. While they know that the law is designed to punish evil-doers, they also appreciate that it is designed to protect those who are trying to lead honest lives. Owing to this fact a man is today working in Clackamas county, and so doing his best to support his wife and child, who otherwise might be lying idle in jail and indirectly forcing his wife to become a county charge. Because of certain features of the case more than usual credit is reflected upon the Oregon City and Clackamas county officials who had the courage of their convictions, and who made it possible for this man to step from behind the bars and into a place that is as healthy for himself in the social structure.

The man once was convicted of wrong-doing, and was sent to prison. There by good behavior he earned a parole. While in prison he learned a trade, and upon his release he went to work at his trade. For reasons which must have seemed good and sufficient to the man he did not join a certain labor organization, and according to his statement, the labor organization thereupon set itself to work to make life unpleasant for him. In time he left his former abode—left it 30 days before his parole period was complete. And in time he came to this county with his wife and child, and after paying down a sum of money upon his home, started in to earn his living, support his family and pay the balance upon his little place. Technically this man had broken his parole, yet he may have had extenuating reasons for thus breaking faith with those who gave him his second chance in life.

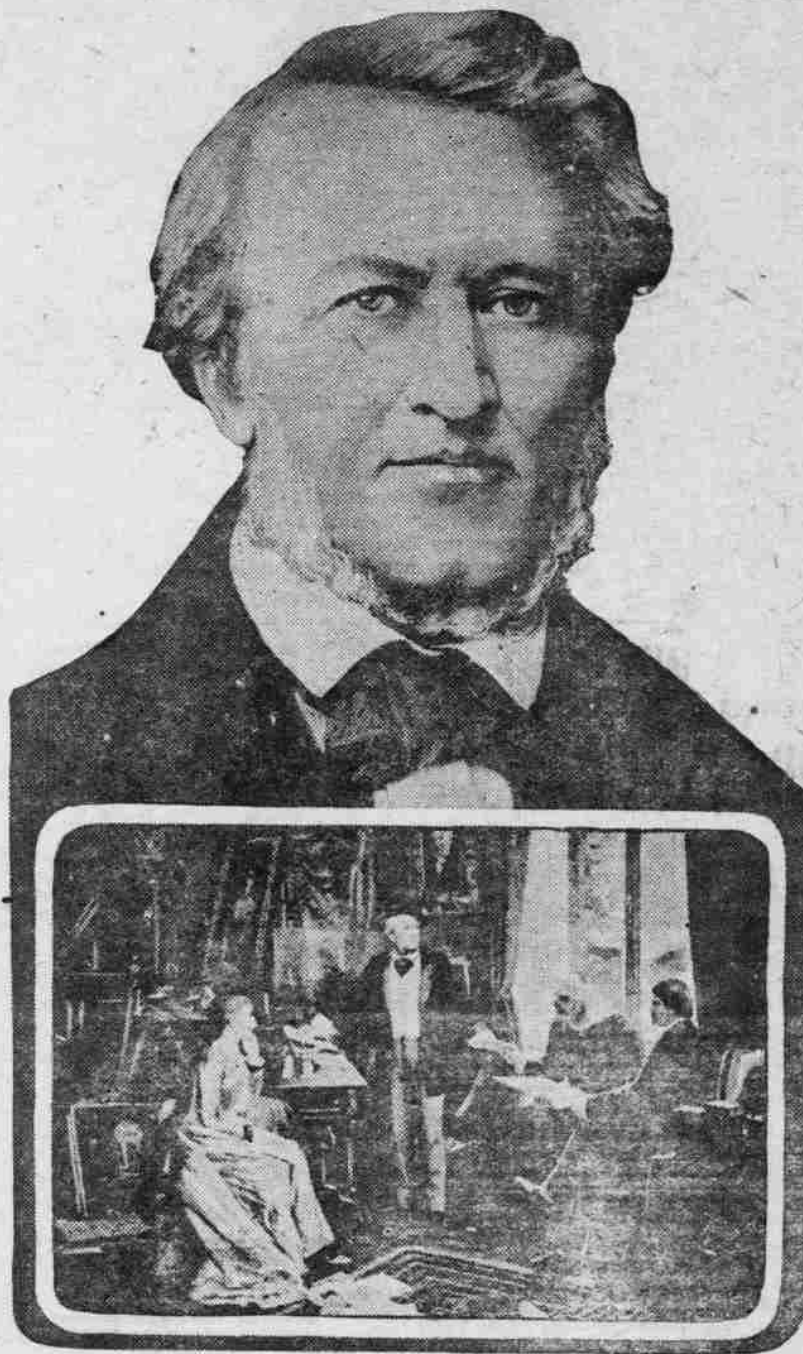

Be that as it may, he subsequently got into a quarrel not of his seeking,

Hundredth Anniversary of Wagner's Birth Is to Be Celebrated May 22.

The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Richard Wagner, famous German composer, will be celebrated May 22 not only in Germany, but through out the United States and other countries where Wagner's music is loved. The celebration will take various forms, from elaborate pageants to Wagnerian concerts. German orchestral and singing societies will play an important part in the celebrations in this country. Wagner was born in Leipzig May 22, 1813, and died in 1883. He was the originator of the music drama and is recognized as one of the greatest of musical geniuses. In this illustration are a portrait of Wagner and a scene in his home.

warped his life, will now return to his work; and, later will stand trial for his part in the second offense unprejudiced before his judge. Opportunity presented itself to temper justice with mercy, and the legal officers of this county believed they were doing best to so interpret the matter. That they have done the right thing there is no doubt, that they have helped this man is certain; and it seems probable that their action will do more to make this man a better citizen than would the old-style Mosaic law, which with its "eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth" would have sent this man back to prison regardless of his efforts to reform.

FAITH IN YOURSELF. Have faith in yourself; faith in your power to break away from evil companions and evil habits; faith in your power to heed and to follow the voice of your own conscience; faith in your power to find in God a present help in time of need; faith in your power to become a minister of his help to others in time of their need—Lyman Abbott.

Misinterpreted. Lord Macaulay passing one day through the Seven Dials bought a handful of ballads from some street folks who were bawling out their contents to a gaping audience. Proceeding on his way home he was astonished to find himself followed by half a score of archbishops, their faces beaming with expectation. "Now then, my lads, what is it?" said he. "Oh, that's a good 'un," replied one of the boys, "after we've come all this way."

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

STEALING AN UMBRELLA. There are laws against most kinds of theft, but some varieties of larceny are too small for the law. It may not be so in theory, but it is so in practice. A man who will steal an umbrella would steal anything else if he thought he could get away with it.

We make a joke of this thing, but in reality it is not a joke. No question that involves a moral principle is a joke.

The man who takes another's umbrella is not only a thief, but a coward. He has not the courage for other kinds of larceny, for he fears the law. Yet the theft of an umbrella is as much a violation of the moral law as any other form of larceny.

Here is a case in point that came under my observation. The incident occurred in a boarding house in a large city. One of the boarders bought a new umbrella and deposited it in the hall on his entrance. Upon leaving he discovered that his umbrella was gone, but that in its place was an old one with a similar handle. On the handle of this one were scratched initials, but they were not the initials of any of the boarders. The man whose umbrella had been stolen naturally refused to take this substitute bearing some one else's mark.

He supposed it a mistake, but the next morning when the subject was mentioned nobody seemed ready to rectify the error. One man, however, said that he had also bought a new umbrella the previous morning and made other remarks that left an unpleasant impression on the minds of several of those present. The incident there dropped, but the unpleasant impression remained.

It was evident that there was a thief among them and the most despicable kind of a thief at that. The money loss was small, but the principle was big.

The suspicion forced upon these people was that this individual was in the habit of taking umbrellas that did not belong to him, that he had previously picked up the one with the strange initials and in turn had left this and taken the new one belonging to his fellow boarder.

A small thing, you say? No, it was not a small thing. It was petty, yes, which made it all the worse, but habitual stealing is never a small thing. The only man to tie to is one who is honest from principle, not because he is afraid of the law.

Mind Unto Mind. "She disturbed my peace of mind." "How?" "By giving me a piece of hers."

Keep the Home Dollar at Home

Don't send that DOLLAR away! Spend it in your home town! A DOLLAR put in circulation here is worth any number in the mails or in the mail order house's pocket.

When you send that DOLLAR away some other community makes the profit that might just as well be made by yours.

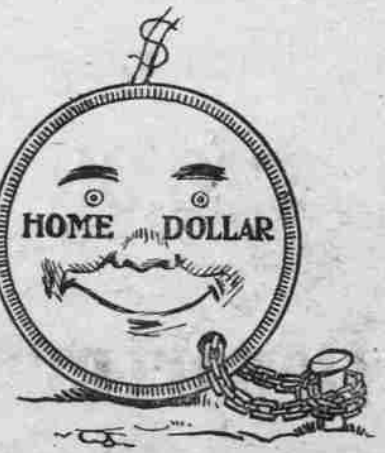

DOLLARS ATTRACT DOLLARS.

For every DOLLAR in use in your locality another DOLLAR will come. Conversely, every DOLLAR that is sent away has a pulling power on another DOLLAR that is left behind.

A DOLLAR spent in your home town helps to make your neighbors just that much more prosperous. To that extent, also, it makes the community more prosperous. And it makes you profit it just the same way that the community does.

When there is plenty of money in circulation everybody benefits. That's why you should keep just as many DOLLARS here as you can instead of sending them away. By PATRONIZING HOME INDUSTRIES you can do this.

Isn't it worth while thinking over?
