BOYS MAY BEAT TEACHERS' NINE

OLD SCORES OF SCHOOL DAYS TO BE SETTLED ON DIAMOND AT GLADSTONE

ANNUAL FIELD DAY FEATURES NEARING

Athletic Sports, Frolics, Ball Games and Maypole Windings all included in Program Saturday

Students of the Clackamas county schools will have a chance to get even with their teachers next Saturday at Gladstone park, for one of the features of the annual field day of the Clackamas County School leasura will be a baseball game between the pupils and the professors. There are many old scores to be settled at this game, and while the teachers are not saying much, they are approaching the ordeal with fear and trembling. As for the boys, they are all smiles. Most of them are pretty good ball players, and they have been practicing steadily in school and interclass games. They regard the teachers as being "soft" in the matter of physique, and expect to gain victory over them. However, there will be other things in the game besides the strictly competitive struggle, and it is said that quite a number of "dead balls" will be delivered with lightning speed when some unfortunate teacher who has been severe with the lads during the school year enters the batter's box to face the delivery.

The game promises to yield a lot of fun for the spectators, as well, and will be staged at three in the afternoon. There is some doubt as yet as to whom the umpire will be. The teachers are said to want County School Superintendent T. J. Gary, but Mr. Gary is a bit bashful about accepting the job, fearing that his knowledge of the national game is not sufficient. The boys, on the other hand, seem to think that one of their own number ought to be arbiter, so as to prevent any bias in favor of the instructors.

The field day will commence at half-past ten in the morning and will be brim-full of features from then until sunset. Aside from the set athletic events there will be a number of lesser features, arranged for both school children and the "grown-ups" who are expected to be on hand; and there will also be a baseball game between the teams from Gladstone and Oak Grove schools. The girls of both teams have been practicing hard for the past month or more, and have developed a remarkable amount of speed and skill.

The main events of the day will be staged as follows:

- 10:30 to 11:00 a. m.—50-yard dash, preliminary.
- Dodge ball.
- All standing-up relay.

Monument In New York City to Perpetuate the Name of Carl Schurz, German-American Patriot.

At Morningside Avenue West and One Hundred and Sixteenth street, New York city, a handsome monument has been erected to the memory of Carl Schurz, great German American patriot and statesman. It was designed and wrought by Karl Ritter. The full size-figure of Schurz is of bronze and shows Schurz in the long coat he so often wore. Bas-reliefs around the base represent Schurz's work on behalf of the Indian and the negro, and on the pedestal is the inscription "Carl Schurz, Defender of Liberty and Friend of Human Right." The unveiling of the monument, postponed several times, was finally set for May 10, with arrangements for the participation of many distinguished persons, among them being Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador; Mayor Gaynor of New York; Joseph H. Choate, chairman of the memorial committee, and Congressman Richard Bartholdt of Missouri. In the upper part of this illustration are shown, from left to right, the photographs of Congressman Bartholdt, Carl Schurz and Count von Bernstorff. In the lower right hand corner is a picture of Mr. Choate. To the left is a picture of the monument, draped and ready for the unveiling.

INFORMER HELD TO GRAND JURY

GEORGE MEYERS, WHO REVEALED AINSBERRY'S PRISON PAST, ARRESTED

WIRE CUTTING HERE IS CHARGED

Man Has Prison Record of Own, and so Knew of Former Life of Non-Union Lineman Who Shot Striker

George Myer, sometimes known as George Maher, a member of the electrical workers' union, and an employee of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, was arrested Wednesday afternoon charged with cutting message wires in Oregon City. After arraignment before Justice Stevens the man was bound over to the grand jury in $500 bail, which was furnished in cash.

The arrest of Meyer is an aftermath of the riot at Oswego, earlier in the week, in which a dozen striking linemen attacked men employed by the Home Telephone company; and in which one of the strikers, Fred Ream, of Willamette, was shot in the groin by J. C. Ainsberry. When Ainsberry was arrested and brought into justice court for preliminary hearing, it was Meyer who recognized him, as a former convict at San Quentin penitentiary, and who informed Sheriff Mass and others that Ainsberry had broken his parole.

Asked how he knew that Ainsberry was the man who had been in prison under the name of Bert Lawson, Meyer first said that he recognized him from circulars sent out by the California authorities, but later admitted that he had served time at the same penitentiary. At the preliminary hearing Meyer asked that his record be not made public, as he was "trying to live down the past."

Meyer is a wire inspector for the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, and carries passes upon all of its divisions. He was arrested in Portland at the instigation of Home Telephone company officials, and was brought to Oregon City for arraignment by Constable Jack Frost. Cash bail for the man's release was also brought from Portland.

Members of Meade Post, G. A. R., and of the Women's Relief Corps, visited the Canemah and West Oregon City schools Wednesday, addressing the children in the former in the morning, and appearing at the West Side school in the afternoon. As at other schools where Memorial Day exercises have been held this week, the veterans told the pupils intimate anecdotes of wartime history; and the Post files an drum corps rendered its stirring music. In both schools the old soldiers were warmly greeted. At the West Oregon City school the veterans were provided with bouquets of wild flowers, picked by the children for their special benefit.

AINSBERRY, TWICE OUT OF JAIL, REARRESTED FOR PRISON BREAK

J. C. Ainsberry, out on $1,000 cash bail pending his trial for assaulting Fred Ream of Willamette with a dangerous weapon during a strike riot at Oswego, was arrested in Portland Wednesday night by Deputy Sheriff Frank Curtiss and Archie Leonard, assistant chief special agent of the O. W. R. & N. company. The new charge against Ainsberry is breaking from the Wyoming state penitentiary at Rawlins, Wyoming, after having served but 45 days out of a three-year sentence.

Ainsberry's third arrest this week—the first being for assault, and the second for breaking his parole at San Quentin penitentiary, California—sheds much further light upon the young man's career. According to Portland officers who made the arrest, and according to admissions by the prisoner, Ainsberry is known under the aliases of "Bert Lawson," "W. W. Warren" and "Clarence Armsberry," and broke from the Wyoming penitentiary on August 31, 1912, in company with Russel H. Harris and Terrell Pope.

Following his violation of his parole at San Quentin, Ainsberry went to Cheyenne, where he was implicated in a series of box-car robberies in the railroad yards. For this he was arrested and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Forty-five days after his incarceration he, with two other prisoners, filed the bars of their cell and escaped, going to Huntington, Oregon. From there they went to Baker City, then to The Dalles, and then to Portland.

In Portland—Detectives Coleman and Snow arrested Harris, one of the trio, and thereupon the other two left town. Ainsberry went back to The Dalles, where he married a young woman of that place in January of this year. They subsequently moved to Lents, where Ainsberry was first arrested in the present tangle of captures and releases.

When arrested at his home again Wednesday night, and while en route to the county jail in Portland, Ainsberry made two attempts to commit suicide. On the Mt. Scott car, coming in with the officers, he chewed up and swallowed two plugs of tobacco. This made him sick, instead of unconscious as he had probably expected, and while leaning from the car to relieve the inner man, the prisoner twice attempted to leap off and end his life under the wheels of the following car. It was only by great effort that the two officers restrained him.

When "lined up" for his pedigree at the county jail, Ainsberry voluntarily admitted that he had done time in the Nevada state penitentiary as well, and also admitted that he had escaped from the Wyoming prison, and that he had broken his parole at San Quentin. He is being held now for return to the Wyoming institution.

Ainsberry gained his last freedom through a writ of habeas corpus, discharging him from custody on the charge of breaking his parole from San Quentin. He was free on the assault charge on $1,000 cash bail pending trial, and officers of which expressed great confidence in him and his efforts to live an honest life.

COUNCIL CLOSES 2 MORE SALOONS

Oregon City has nine saloons left. The city council, in session Wednesday night, revoked the licenses of Ed. Rechner and Davis & Lovin, following their being found guilty in Recorder Stipp's court of selling liquor to an intoxicated person.

These revocations, coming within a few weeks of the refusal to renew licenses of two other saloons where violations of the law were shown, created considerable excitement at the council session; and the possibility that such action would be taken brought out one of the largest crowds that has ever attended a council meeting. Every inch of space in the council chamber was occupied, and spectators stood ranked five deep in the hallway and on the stairs.
