Divorce Destroying Homes and Breaking Up Our Families

Crying Evil of People of This Country.

By Senator JOSEPH E. RANS-DELL of Louisiana

T requires no argument to prove that divorce DESTROYS THE HOME, BREAKS UP THE FAMILY, SCAT-TERS THE PARENTS AND CHILDREN TO THE FOUR WINDS and makes an ugly sore that breeds sin and sorrow of the deepest dye.

AND YET DIVORCE IS TO-DAY THE CRYING EVIL OF THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY.

Divorce is growing rapidly in the United States. In the last twenty year period, from 1887 to 1906, the number of marriages dissolved was 945,625, while from 1867 to 1886 it was 328,716, or a little more than one-third. In 1887 there were 483,069 marriages and 27,ever, in voting on the matter, and in It seems to be a case of "be damned 919 divorces, about one divorce in every seventeen marriages. In 1906 marriages numbered 853,290 and divorces 72,069, or one divorce in every twelve marriages. This is a fearful rate of increase.

If it continues in like proportion for the next forty years the middle of the present century will see ONE MARRIAGE OUT OF EVERY FIVE DISSOLVED BY DIVORCE.

Accepting as true that marriages resulting in divorce produce as many children as others, the figures for 1906 would mean that onetwelfth of our citizens, or over seven million souls, are the unfortunate victims, either as participants or offspring, of this terrible evil and that FOR SALE -6-room bungalow, Dutch the homes of seven million American citizens are arid spots, unworthy of that sacred name and nurseries of sorrow rather than of joy.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

IT IS THE MAN THAT COUNTS. There is a great deal of weak and idle talk about luck, about some men getting on without earning promotion and others being held back who deserve to succeed.

Most of such talk is twaddle itism and of others being kept down duties of the office were explained to through jealousy.

injured one will have redress.

Also, if you will learn all the facts nerve and the will to win.

Some men will remain clerks all ture, their lives. They lack the initiative and force to rise out of the ranks. But there have been conspicuous in-the mass. You must discriminate. You must consider them as individuals. Lincoln once illustrated it in the way. He said that in a time of crisis men were like a lot of stones placed in a sleve. As the sieve was shaken the larger stones came to the top. If shaken long enough and hard enough. finally the very biggest stone would emerge and take command. I am not attempting to quote his language, but only to give his thought. It afterward transpired that he himself was that biggest stone. Well, we are always living in more or less of a crisis, and the larger stones will find their way to the top. The shaking of circumstance and the force of individual gravity take the little men to the bottom and the big men to the top. Shun the weak waller who says he never had a chance. Every man has a chance, if he would seize it. It is the man that counts. That is the one big fact that sticks out in all biography and all life.

As certainly as water seeks its leve so do men gravitate to their place-or perhaps gravitate is not the word-so do men attain to their place.

There is as wide a range of differ ence between human beings as is found in the lower orders of creation. It is individual character that tells
