HONOR TO WHOM

In commenting HONOR IS DUE upon the action of the Daughters of the American Revolution in marking the Santa Fe Trail, the St. Louis Globe Democrat of recent date takes issue with the patriotic women as to the wisdom of their movement to outline the historic southern route across the deserts. As the St. Louis paper sees it, more real honor would be accorded those to whom the honor is due were the same funds and energy expended upon marking the famous "old Oregon trail," over which there came in early years the men and women whose offspring have become the backbone and the pride of the Pacific coast today.

The real historic trail was the northern one, says the Globe Democrat, and over it came the men who blazed the way into the gold diggers of California and the vast timbered stretches of Oregon and Washington. It was first blazed by the Oregon pioneers, who had for their guides the trappers who had roamed over the Rocky Mountain region and penetrated clear to California and Oregon in the earlier years of the century. Fremont became famous for his explorations in 1843-44, and gained the name of "the Pathfinder" for covering with light pack-horse equipment the same route over which the Oregon pioneers had laboriously taken their heavy emigrant wagons several years before, and with the use of the same trapper guides.

The trail for a number of years was an Oregon trail only. Then came the great gold discovery in 1848, and the rush of the following year to California. The old trail was followed until the Rocky Mountains were crossed, and then the gold hunters left it to go further southward through Nevada to the various passes in the Sierras. Over this trail through the South Pass went many thousands of men, women and children. There were tragedies of death from Indian attacks, from exhaustion, from starvation, and one year from an epidemic of cholera. Human graves marked its entire length. It was literally a Via Dolorosa. But it was the greatest of all the arteries through which the blood of the nation poured to Americanize and win for freedom the vast expanse of the Pacific coast.

an ethnic consciousness which nothing will change.

In other words the dispute is based upon, and rests upon, the conflict of bloods. The Japanese are not a Caucasian race, they cannot hope for assimilation in this nation any more than can the negro. In fact, their position would be the same as that of the negro had they not a powerful, proud and fast-developing nation behind them to which an appeal could be made. It is not a question of treaty discrimination—it is a question world-wide in scope, a question resting solely upon the natural distaste of the Caucasian to regard with equality any people not of the same hued skin and the same racial characteristics.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

IN THE MORNING.

In my boyhood the sun always rose in the east. During subsequent wanderings, owing to my faculty of getting turned around, it rises in the south, the west, the north or many old direction except the right one. So when I think of a morning it is usually of a morning of my boyhood. The points of the compass are necessary to the proper appreciation of such things.

When I was a boy the sun used to rise and shine into my window through an old locust tree. There was some kind of wonderful bird that sang to it. I do not to this day know what kind of bird it was, but the song was very sweet. I got a sort of shivery happiness away down inside of me when I hear it to this very day.

Those were wonderful mornings—when I was a boy. There were generally dewdrops on the hollyhocks, and they gleamed—well, as the dew does gleam on hollyhocks when you are a boy. You know how it is yourself. Don't expect me to spoil it by comparing it to diamonds or any such junk. That would be out of the picture. I knew nothing about diamonds then—and know little now.

So when I think of a morning scene it is of those morning scenes. There was the little hill in the sheep pasture across the road, and the summer sun peeped up over its shoulder. And there was the cherry tree where the swing was, and the sun sort of slanted around from the hill and through the locust and into this cherry tree.

A little farther on was a strip of woods where the whippoorwill and the frogs sang at night and where we made paths through the leaves so that we could creep up on the squirrels without scaring them. All of that is in the picture, although it may seem that the paths are paths of digression. Yes, and there were dreams. No morning when you are a boy is complete without dreams.

There were dreams of fame, of love and of high adventure, of course. All boys have them. Yet in my own case there was one particular vision that did not concern me personally or concerned me only as a part of the general human scheme. It was that we are in a new morning of humanity or which those physical mornings were but symbols. There was a better day coming—a new order.

Maybe the dream is coming true. Perhaps there is a new day breaking over the earth. Perhaps there is a new morning for humanity.

Milady's Mirror

For Summer's Tan.

If your skin became sunburned you have no time to lose. You may laugh at the idea of special treatment because you have often been burned and brown without, as you believe, any really harmful results. Such results may not be fully apparent at once, but in a short time small faint lines appear, and the skin assumes a sort of dry and cracked appearance. These lines, although faint at first, if not properly treated become deeper and soon develop into premature wrinkles.

As a soothing application and cure for sunburn buttermilk is most effective. Apply it freely with a soft cloth and rub it into the face, neck and chest. The hands and arms should receive applications also if they have been burned. Then the parts must be thoroughly saturated with the milk and allowed to dry.

Now put a teaspoonful of borax into a basin of tepid water and carefully and gently wash off the buttermilk. Pat the skin with an old bit of soft linen and then with the finger tips massage or work into the skin very softly some of the lumpy pieces of the milk and allow it to dry thoroughly into the skin. Buttermilk not only bleaches and cleanses the skin, but it nourishes and feeds the dry and shriveled parts. After sunburn buttermilk should be applied as soon as possible and allowed to remain on the skin. Soap and water must not be applied while the skin stings or smart.

To obtain a soft elastic skin the buttermilk treatment must be repeated daily. A disagreeable feature of the milk as a cosmetic is its odor. For this reason it is sometimes best to apply it at night and to use reliable skin food and powder during the day. However, if you are alone and you do not mind the odor then bathe in it all you wish. Because of its efficiency as a bleach and as a food both for the body and skin and because of its commendable cheapness, which is a point well worth considering, it occupies an important position in relation to health and beauty.

Fresh Air Always.

Seize upon every chance to keep out in the open air. If you can do no more, stick your head out of the window as many times a day as you can. Walk instead of ride whenever you can, whether you feel like it or not. Train yourself to it. Keep out of the cars as much as possible; the air in them is not of the purest. On all occasions walk, exercise, play, do anything in the open if it is only to sit in the sun and take a sun bath. Get this one point well fixed in your mind—that the greatest tonic given us is the fresh air, whether it be cold or warm, rainy or sunny, clear or murky. It is always healthful and the finest element that we can take into our systems.

Cause of Dandruff.

There are four main causes for the prevalence of dandruff—ill health, worry, pressure of close hats and the use of quantities of false hair. Ill health, especially nervous disorders, are instantly communicated to the scalp. When one feels full of life and energy the hair responds readily to the hurried or careless touch. When ill, hair is stubborn, stringy and generally unruly. Worry is really an affection of the nerves, so that those who indulge in this form of mental folly always pay the price in dull, oily looking coiffures and irritating dandruff.

Improving the Looks.

We owe it to our friends as well as ourselves to look our best at all times, and the girl who can improve her appearance without harming herself should do so. Nothing gives us quite the self confidence as to feel we look well.

Attresses are usually warm hearted, sensible and cheerful. That is because they make the best of themselves in face and form. An old saying is true, "The face is often a reflex of the mind," and in a measure it is no less true that the mind is a reflex of the face.

For the Outdoor Girl.

A hot bath and a vigorous rubbing after a day outdoors is a necessity both for cleanliness and to prevent fatigue. The feet and the face and hair natural suffer most, and where much walking is done one should be careful not only to bathe the feet in lukewarm water and soda at night, but also to keep the soles powdered and take heed that the stockings are well fitting and without cracks. Even though the shoe be well fitting much misery is caused by too long, too short or too heavy stockings.

Meanings of Dyke. "Dyke" has even more divergent meanings than ditch in Lincolnshire and bank in Holland. In Scotland it means a low wall or fence of turf or un-mortgaged stones, and in some parts of northern England a "dyke" is a hedge. Yet there are other northern districts where it is a pond. Originally, in English at any rate, "dyke" or "dike" and "ditch" both meant what ditch still means to us, but as the digging out of a ditch necessarily involves the raising of a mound with the dug-out earth the words came to signify ditch and mound together and eventually in some cases the mound alone—London Standard.

Skinning Goats. The Abyssinians and Somalis are considered the most expert in skinning goats. The former rarely permits his knife to touch the animal after killing and during the skinning process and by the means of a bellows removes the skin in an excellent condition. Somalis women are also very adept in this art and exercise great care throughout.

Pretty Duchess, Sued by Her Husband, May Turn Tables

THIS is the pretty Duchess of Westminster, against whom a suit for divorce was filed by the duke with sensational allegations. The friends of the duchess hastily came to her defense and said that she would not only show that her husband's suspicion was not justified, but would turn the tables and would bring a counter suit, naming a popular English show girl. The Westminsters have two children. They have been estranged for some time, and the announcement that the duke had brought suit did not cause any surprise in English society or upon the continent. It was the Duke of Westminster who paid the expenses of sending the English polo team to this country to compete for the international trophy on June 10.
