WHAT IS AN Oregon City has re-education? son to be proud of her schools. Friday there was opened an exhibition of the work accomplished in all the grades, from the lowest to the senior year in high school, and it indicated two chief things, first that the students took an interest in their studies, and secondly that the studies were based upon the idea of practicality. No boy or girl who conscientiously follows the courses as outlined at this exhibition will later take up "the business of life" unequipped. No boy or girl who goes through all the grades will come out a misfit, overtrained in non-essentials and sadly lacking in common sense.

From start to finish the idea seems to be in the local school course, to give the children a varied knowledge that will not only be of service to them, but which will also develop any natural talents they may have along any definite line, and so enable them to take a later course in the special profession or business for which they are temperamentally fitted. This is as it should be. And that it is so here is not only a credit to Oregon City, to her school directors, and to her advancement; but it is also a special credit to Peter D. Forbes, head of the manual training department.

Mr. Forbes is not singled out for special honors here to the detriment of anybody else. But through the leeway given him by City Superintendent Tooze, he has been able to install in the school course a basic idea of sequence and orderly progress. He has borrowed the best from other schools, has combined these ideas with schemes of his own, and as director of the manual training department he has paved the way for an orderly, interesting and logical development of the entire course. Largely through his influence and suggestion it has been made possible for the child who in the lowest grades starts with paper mat weaving as "manual training work" to follow the development of this course gradually into the mazes of arithmetic, mechanical drawing, higher mathematics, physics and history without realizing the transition from pure manual training into the more or less closely allied subjects mentioned.

Manual training has become one of the basic ideas of the Oregon City school. Some phase of it is taught in all grades. Because it is constructive manual work it interests the children; and because the pupils see that its principles are also the principles of mathematics and other sciences, and its history is also the history of the development of civilization, they take an interest in the allied studies and have an understanding of them. They learn geometry, for instance, with comprehension, for in their manual training work they have dealt with planes and solids and angles in actuality. They learn mechanical drawing with understanding, because they are enabled to see how the science of planning on paper is but a step to actual construction of things with which they have become familiar in manual training. They see the connection of studies, and they are led entertainingly from one to the next. They are getting an education. In connection with this it is interesting to note here that H. E. Cross, in his Memorial Day address, also saw the value to the present day of educational methods that were logical. After paying tribute to the dead heroes of the war, and recounting what they had procured for the present generation, Mr. Cross took a look ahead, and urged his audience to think also of the future, and of the manner in which America was preparing to guard her dearly bought heritage. And in pleading for the best care of children, so that they when grown to manhood and womanhood, might carry on the work of preservation of the union, he said in part:

"A professor in the University of Chicago told his pupils that he should consider them educated in the best sense of the word, when they could say yes to every one of sixteen questions that he put to them. Here is a list of the questions: "1. Has education given you sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them? "2. Has it made you public spirited? "3. Have you learned how to make friends and how to keep them. "4. Has it made you a brother of the weak? "5. Can you look an honest man or a pure woman straight in the eye? "6. Do you see anything to love in a little child? "7. Will a lonely dog follow you in the street? "8. Can you be high-minded and happy in the meager drudgeries of life? "9. Do you think washing dishes and hoeing corn just as compatible

Bad Boys Must Be Saved at Any Cost

By Judge B. B. LINDSEY, Advocate of Juvenile Court Reform

WE must learn to PUT LOVE IN THE LAW. We do not judge men, but the things men do.

I hate a lie, but not a child. That is what I mean when I say we must put "love in the law." You must love the boy, but hate the bad thing that he does.

THE BOY IS OF VALUE. HE MUST BE SAVED AT ANY COST. IT'S THE BAD THING THAT HAS TO BE KILLED. IF YOU HAVE AN APPLE WITH ONE ROTTEN SPOT, WHAT DO YOU DO—THROW THE WHOLE APPLE AWAY? NOT A BIT OF IT. YOU SAVE IT AND CUT OUT THE ROTTEN SPOT, DON'T YOU?

YOU MUSTN'T FRIGHTEN KIDS. A lot of the bad things they do are just because they are frightened. Most kids would not lie unless they were afraid. Oh, that daredevil, misdirected age of youth, how you have to love it to understand it! And I'm no sentimentalist. I believe you have to be firm. THE LAW MUST BE OBEYED. But you have to learn to PUT PATIENCE AND SYMPATHY, WISELY USED, INTO THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE LAW.

Human beings are naturally good. If they HAVE HALF A CHANCE they will stay good.

ONE DAY OF LOVE IS WORTH MORE TO THE HEART OF A CHILD THAN ONE YEAR OF EMPTY CREATURE COMFORTS.

with high thinking as piano playing or golf?

- "10. Are you good for anything to yourself. "11. Can you be happy alone. "12. Can you look out over the world and see anything but dollars and cents. "13. Can you look into a mud puddle by the wayside and see a clear sky? "14. Can you see anything in the mud puddle but mud? "15. Can you look into the sky by night and see beyond the stars. "16. Can your soul claim relationship with its Creator?"

Mad Pursuit of American Women For Dress

By Professor WALTER SARGENT of the University of Chicago

THE MAD PURSUIT OF AMERICAN WOMEN FOR THE VARYING FADS OF DRESS AND THEIR ACCEPTANCE OF DESIGNS FROM THE EUROPEAN FASHION CENTERS AS MANDATES IN TECHNIQUE OF DRESS ARE DIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE HIGH COST OF LIVING IN THIS COUNTRY.

The American should be like the Chinese woman. She should have an ESTABLISHED STYLE OF DRESS and follow that style. That is what is the matter with Americans today.

The French send dress designs to America which they THEMSELVES WILL NOT ACCEPT, and the American woman and homemaker accepts that edict as a fashion law to be followed literally. It is no wonder that women in America make themselves GROTESQUE in the garb they wear. One does not see those styles in Paris.
