NEW WEEK'S EVENTS MANY AND VARIED

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31.—The Home Rule for Ireland bill will be brought up in the house of commons for the second time next Tuesday. The bill is expected to go through in the exact form in which it was passed last year, and later rejected by the House of Lords. After a second rejection by the Lords, which is regarded as inevitable as was the first, the bill will come back to the House of Commons and in the general belief, will be enacted into law. Arguments in the so-called tap line case, which has attracted country-wide attention, will be presented to the commerce court in Washington Tuesday. The question at issue is whether fifty-seven tap lines located in various states are common carriers and entitled to participate in joint rates. Two municipal elections of wide interest will take place early in the week. Portland, Ore. will hold its first election under the commission plan of government. In Los Angeles, where a mayor and other city officials are to be chosen, a hard fight for control is on between the Socialists and anti-Socialists. The trial matches between the American tennis champion, the Australian team for the Dwight F. Davis international challenge cup are scheduled to begin Friday. The matches are to be held at the West Side Tennis club in New York City. Events of the week abroad will include the customary observances of the birthday anniversaries of Pope Pius X and King George V., the running of the Epsom Derby, the British woman's golf championships, the opening of a Maritime Exposition at Amsterdam, and the Franco-American celebration commemorating the origin of the name "America" at St. Die. Conventions and conferences of the week will include the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in Canada, at Toronto; the annual meeting of the Canadian Press association, also to be held in Toronto; the Western Governors' Congress, at Sal Lake City; the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, at Asbury Park, and the annual convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, at Washington, D. C. Exercises in honor of the birthday of Jefferson Davis, only president of the Confederate States of America, will be held Tuesday throughout the South.

GARBAGE COLLECTIONS RESUMED FOR SUMMER

Collection of garbage by wagons of the city sanitary department will be resumed Monday, and calls will be made for waste matter at all homes on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. All citizens are urged to put their garbage cans out where the collectors can obtain them, and to see that they are covered. No charge is made for this service by the city, and it will be continued throughout the summer months.

Passing of Famous Race Track NEW YORK, May 31.—An auction sale of the Morris Park estate, embracing the historic old race track of that name, was begun today. The crowd that gathered for the opening of the sale was the first that has been seen in the great club-house since the good old days when racing was an established institution in New York. The sale is expected to last a week or longer, as there are upwards of 3,000 lots to go under the hammer. The clubhouse and its furnishings, representing an investment of half a million dollars, will be disposed of to the highest bidder and may be removed by the purchaser or retained as a home.

A FLIGHT FOR LIFE

The Story of a Rescue Trip In the Mountains of Alaska.

BRAVE MEN AND SPEEDY DOGS

An Act of Heroism That Saved a Woman and Her Sick Husband From Death When Stranded on a Winter Night Amid the Snow Clad Peaks.

The hardships to which people are exposed in the far north give frequent occasion for the display of heroism. In the pages of "Trailing and Camping in Alaska" Mr. Addison M. Powell tells of the rescue of a woman and her husband who were stranded on the mountains in an Alaskan winter. A dog team galloped up and stopped in front of the only pretense of a hotel in Valdez. The night was dark, as the northern winter nights always are when the moon is not shining. The dogs immediately lay down, almost exhausted from their long trip, and the two men were soon surrounded by inquiring friends. One of the two said: "What do you think, fellows? We passed a woman just this side of Sawmill Camp. She was pulling a sled, on which was her sick husband. We remonstrated against her crossing the glacier, but she replied that they might as well die up there as anywhere else, as it meant certain death to stop. Our dogs could pull only our outfit, and there wasn't grub enough for all, so we were compelled to leave them. They will be at the last timber tonight, and if somebody doesn't go to their rescue they will be dead by this time tomorrow."

A man stepped out from the crowd and said: "I'll go for one. Now, who else has a good dog team to splice in with mine?" "I'm your man," answered another. It was 3 o'clock in the morning before they had made their selection of dogs and were ready to start on that hazardous trip. "We'll be on the first bench by daylight and have them here before midnight," said one as he straightened out the team for the sixty mile run. "Yes, boys! Stand in there, Leader! Mush, mush on, mush!" And with a yelp the dogs galloped away as if aware of the urgency of their mission. "Haw, Leader!" we heard as they turned the corner, and then they were gone. "There goes the best dog team in Alaska and driven by two of the best men on earth!" exclaimed a man as he re-entered the house.

The trail was easily followed, and soon the nine miles of level bench were passed. The speed slackened only when they were ascending the ridge, which they crossed by 11 that morning, and there it was seen that the sharp peaks were curling the snow high in the air. "They are beginning to smoke!" exclaimed one of the men. "Yes, we must get back before night or it's all off," replied the other. Down, down, the steep descent they plunged, and by 1 o'clock they were off the glacier and skipping over level ground. In a short time they discovered the unfortunate couple whom they had started out to rescue, and when they came up to them it was a pitiable scene that presented itself. The poor woman had become completely exhausted and had thrown herself down beside her helpless husband. She had evidently abandoned all hope and was weeping bitterly when she suddenly heard the yell of a driver and the barking of dogs. In a moment she passed from despair to hope. As the team galloped in a circle and stopped beside her with the dogs' heads pointed back toward the glacier she clapped her hands with joy. The dogs lay down and with their lolling tongues lapped the snow, while the drivers ate some crackers and jokingly encouraged the sick man and the tired woman. They bade her seat herself comfortably while they fastened the two sleds together. Soon they were bounding away again at the dogs' first speed.

When they recrossed the summit the whole range was "smoking," and the wind was sending the fine snow along the crust. It whipped their faces with a warning of what was coming, but the driver said: "Twenty miles to town, and it can never catch us!" In Valdez every one was anxiously watching the trail. Many exclaimed, "They can't possibly be here before midnight!" but they were. As they rushed up to the crowd with a yell and a chorus of barks from the noble dogs they were met by eager, helping hands. The dogs acted as if they had understood why they were being petted, and again the woman wept for joy.

The Contingent Fee.

The following pointed note was written by Daniel Webster in answer to a request that he take a certain case for a contingent fee: "I do not desire employment in professional matters, although I do sometimes engage in them. But I never engage on contingencies merely, for that would make me a mere party to a lawsuit."

Her Specialty.

How the Story Ended

By F. A. MITCHEL

I am a novelist. I had been working very hard upon a story—"Her Choice"—to finish it, since the printers were waiting for the copy for the last chapters, the whole to be ready for publication within a week. I was writing late one night when for a time—how long I know not—my faculties came to a standstill. My next remembrance is that I was walking in a grove, strange to say, with my heroine, Evelyn Hope—not only Evelyn Hope, the creature of my imagination, but Evelyn Hope a real being. And she was talking to me. "You are trying to compel me to marry that Scotchman, and I wish you to understand that I won't do it."

"Angus McGregor is a fine fellow," I replied. "You must marry him. I've written the story with that end in view, and if you won't have him I shall have to tear the whole thing to pieces. Besides, there's no time for you to change your mind at this late date. The book is advertised for the 1st of March."

"I change my mind! You might better state it if you change my mind. You novelists collect a lot of us together and undertake to make us do just what you intend we shall do. Then when we—" "Kick!" "Yes, that expresses it exactly. When we kick you say, 'You've got to do as I wish you to do.' And we won't—that is, unless your will coincides with our own."

"Well, then, if you will be so obstreperous, whom do you wish to marry?" She didn't reply to this right off. We were passing through some long grass, and she bent down and picked a blade growing higher than the rest and, putting the end of it in her mouth, said: "You profess to be a novelist. A novelist must understand the human heart. What do you know about the human heart?"

"I thought I was well equipped in that respect."

"And you can't make your heroine marry the man of her choice. Fine instincts you have for divining how love works."

"In woman, I admit my most successful novel was one in which I made love were I a woman and then made her marry the biggest chump in the lot."

"The woman knew better. At heart he was a noble fellow."

"The fellow I was creating wasn't." "You novelists tire me. The fellow you were creating! Just as if you could create a character?" "Why not?" "You set up a dummy and put this into him and that into him, thinking that this and that you have put in will make him act so and so, but it doesn't. He goes off and does the other thing while you stand gaping at him. What's the reason for your failure? Why your calculations are all wrong."

"SAFE AND SANE" FOURTH ORDERED

Oregon City is going to have a "safe and sane Fourth" this year, and Chief Shaw of the local police force, is going to take particular pains to see that it is such. Not that the chief has any grudge against young America, he is simply obeying the mandates of the city council, which in Ordinance No. 590, passed August 10, 1912, has put the everlasting kibosh on the noisy celebration of Independence Day.

Under its provisions there is to be nothing stirring in the fireworks line in the city proper. Outside the city limits, and in West Oregon City, the youngsters can blow their fingers off if they so desire, and can shatter the piece of the holiday with noise and explosion. But within the corporate limits the Fourth is to be safe, quiet and dignified. Firecrackers, no matter how small, are strictly taboo; and are go-devils, hicans, choke-cannons, bombs and all other detonators. People who feel that they must make a noise and see smoke on the national holiday are urged to hie themselves elsewhere. The same is true of those who want to see sky-rockets at night, for there is to be nothing of that sort either. Dealers who sell noise-makers will be just as liable as those who may set them off.

CONGREGATIONAL SERVICES

Interesting services will be held in the Congregational church today, the pastor, Rev. George Nelson Edwards speaking three times. A morning sermon topic will be "A Man and His Garden." At 6:45 in the evening Christian Endeavor meeting will be held, when the theme will be, "How Should a Christian Choose his Vocation." At the regular evening service Rev. Nelson will preach upon "The Battles of Peace," touching upon Memorial Day observances.

LIVESTOCK MARKET SEES SHARP DROP

Receipts for the week have been: Cattle 853, calves 59, hogs 2014, sheep 4570, horses 26. Cattle values suffered a severe cut during the week and the market is generally 25 to 50 cents lower. Steers received the brunt of the attack. Best bullocks were selling steady $8.25 to $8.50 toward the close with good grass stuff around 8 cents, butcher staff was slow to participate in the slump as heifers brought $5.00 and cows $7.50, although these prices are not in existence today. Good bulls and stags are steady to a shade weaker, while calves remain unchanged. Heavy liquidation from drought afflicted section in California and Rockie Mountain states, has hurried along the annual advent of the grass cattle run. Beef is not as plentiful as in former years and the trade expects a comparatively steady market all spring and summer.

The hog market displayed strong "come back" qualities from opening to closing and gained approximately 25c. Best light swine sold steady Wednesday $8.50 to $8.55. Demand has been brisk and big enough to absorb receipts which have been better than the average. Uncertainty as to the market status the coming week prevents much speculation. Sheep house proved an irregular affair up to Thursday and thereafter appeared to be steadier. Killers are surfeited on poor mutton and lambs. Are calling for prime stuff which is fairly firm. Wethers at $6.00 and ewes at $5.25 and spring lambs $7.00 to $7.25 are price tops in the various sheep classes. Liquidation large and range of prices wide.

GROWERS GET $4 FOR FIRST BERRIES

Strawberry picking will start in the Willamette and Clackamas valley Monday, and indications are that there will be a good yield. The crop will be in fine shape for early sales, but indications also are that all fruit not at once marketed will be valueless to the growers, as the late rains and extra frosts seem to have effected the keeping quality of the berries. Those that have been picked so far, and left for 24 hours, have shriveled up and lost all their good points, not even being fit for canning. However, as the demand for berries is exceptionally heavy this year on account of the lateness of the season, local growers expect to get rid of their crop at good figures. Some few growers, who have been picking the last two days of the past week, have received $4 a crate for fruit.

Asparagus, which has been one of the most varying of products this season, is down again, after a recent soaring into the class of luxuries. Week end prices in Portland ranged from 65 cents a dozen bunches up. Prices in local markets have been holding better. Better eggs have been shipped to wholesalers lately by poultry fanciers, and the market has assumed a higher rate, and is firmer. Not much over 22 cents is being paid for prime stock, however, and much product is still being sold direct to consumers. Other market staples are showing little change. Green vegetables are
