SCHOOL EXHIBITS WANTED AT SALEM

To interest school children and school teachers in a state-wide exhibit at the state fair in Salem of school work done in Oregon, L. P. Harrington, of Cresswell, field worker of the state department of education, was in Oregon City Tuesday, and will spend the next two or three days in other parts of the country. Mr. Harrington came here primarily to make arrangements for an exhibit by the county schools at Salem, but in the course of his visit was shown the city school exhibit in the Barclay school, and at once became an enthusiastic booster for that, as well.

"I told your Mr. Toose that we wanted that exhibit in its entirety at Salem," he said, shortly after having viewed the display. "I am not exaggerating a bit when I say that it is one of the finest exhibits of co-ordinated school work that I have seen, and that it demonstrates exactly what we believe the aim of modern education should be—to teach the child useful, practical, developing work, which will be of service to him or her in later years."

"I am a great believer in practical work. I think our schools should not give the children not only the regular studies, but something more besides, something that will develop the natural talent of the youngsters and enable them to amount to something—not only in later life, but while they are in school as well. I think there ought to be a closer relation between the school and the home, I believe in 'home credits' in fact, and I believe that by doing such work as you are doing here you are taking great strides towards that end. You are interesting the children, you are making them regard their studies as something necessary in their lives, and because of this you are making a direct appeal to the parents and the home through the school children."

"This is why we want your exhibit in planning this school fair at Salem to carry on this work of bringing the home and the school into closer touch. This is why we want your exhibit, we want people to see it, we want other children to see it, so that they will want the same things in their locality. You are surely on the right track here, and those who are responsible for the work are doing the state and the children a great service."

Mr. Harrington goes from here to Oak Grove, Milwaukie, West Oregon City and Canby. On his way he is distributing literature descriptive of the school division of the state fair, the prizes offered and the work being done elsewhere.

RUSSIA'S POLICE SYSTEM.

It Has an Assistant in Every House in St. Petersburg. The Russian police system is extremely complicated, for it practically gives Russia an assistant policeman in every house in St. Petersburg. The landlord has a private porter or acts as porter himself. A porter has authority to make an arrest, and he is obliged to rush from the house to the street at the sound of a police whistle. As there is a policeman stationed at every block, which is the limit of his beat, and as every policeman within a certain radius may respond with the porters to the signal, it takes but a few seconds to get a platoon of uniformed men, with almost a regiment of porter policemen together.

Russia has also a most elaborate system of training its policemen, and some time ago there was opened at St. Petersburg a fully equipped policeman's college, designed to train men in all the various duties of an officer of the law. At this college policemen are made familiar with the tools used by criminals, their teachers holding that they cannot become proficient policemen in any other way.

A DEED AND A WORD.

A little stream had lost its way Amid the grass and fern. A passing stranger scooped a well. Where weary men might turn. He waded it in and hung with care. A ladie at the brink. He thought not of the deed he did. But judged that all might drink. He passed again, and, lo, the well. By summer never dried. Had cooled ten thousand parching tongues And saved a life beside.
