MORNING ENTERPRISE, SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1913.

Justice of the Peace Sievers is of the opinion that a web-footed Suidae Vulgaris cannot be kept in confine-ment by chicken wire. He has tried Thursday evening his honor cap tured one in his garden, shortly after it had emerged from the Clackamas river, securely tethered it in his poul-try yard, and went blissfully to bed, expecting to get up in the morning and feed the brute. When he arose there was a hole beneath the chicken house, and indistinct tracks in the general direction of the east, showed where the web-footed Suidae Vulgaris had gone.

The animal was one of two young ones, and was but four months old. They were purchased by a Mr. Tipton, who lives across the Clackamas river from Gladstone, and were brought down from Eagle Creek, where the, were raised. Thursday night they escaped from their pen on Mr. Tipton's place, and entering the river, emerged on the northern shore half a mile below. It was here that Justica Sievers captured one, but the other got away, and it is supposed that both animals are now making tracks for their native haunt. Having definitely identified (the animal, Justice Sievers says that they are not uncommon in Oregon, and are more generaly known name of "pig." by the

In this picture is illustrated that "one tremendous chapter" in two lives. It shows Attorney Burton W. Gibson and his devoted wife in the little Orange county courthouse at Newburg, N. Y., listening to testimony in Gibson's trial for the murder of Mrs. Rose Menschik Szabo, who was his client. How vitally Mrs. Gibson was interested in the testimony may be judged from the fact that from the time her husband was first accused of strangling Mrs. Szabo and throwing the body into Greenwood lake last July in order to get her $10,000 estate she was his firmest supporter and the most energetic seeker after evidence in his defense. These snapshots, showing Mr. and Mrs. Gibson in characteristic courtroom attitudes, were made about the time testimony unfavorable to Gibson was being heard.

BANKERS AND FARMERS COMING TO SEEK LAND

A party of bankers and farmers from South Dakota, who are seeking homesites and investments in the Northwest, wil arrive in Oregon City on a special train during the morning of June 13. Members of the Com-mercial club will meet the party st the depot, and will escort them about the city and surrounding country, giv-ing them a comprehensive idea of the resources of Clackamas county, An efort will also be made to persuade the visitors to remain for luncheons, though their schedule calls for their departure from here at noon.

REHEARSALS UNDER WAY

Rehearsals for "The Clackamas County Fair," the musical comedy to be given at Shively's hall June 17 and 18 by local talent, have started, and are progressing as favorably as possible considering that the attractions of commencement week in the schools and preparations for the rose show have interferred with plans somewhat. Next week Sara Bock, the director, expects to have full rehearsals each day, and it is believed hat much more rapid progress will then be made.
