Berlin En Fete For Kaiser's Silver Jubilee After Wedding

BERLIN remained en fete after the wedding of the Princess Victoria Louise, the emperor's daughter, and Prince Ernst August of Cumberland land because of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the kaiser's accession to the throne about the middle of June. Many European notables who were at the ceremony May 24 remained at the capital for the silver jubilee. As brilliant as was the wedding of the couple, German aristocracy and its guests expect the kaiser's celebration to be more magnificent.

W. A. Beck, familiarly referred to by his friends as "the founder and booster of Molalla," was a county seat visitor Wednesday.

Louis Prentiss, of St. Paul, Minn., was touring through the western end of the county Wednesday, seeking a farm either for location or investment.

E. E. Brodie and a party of friends motored from Oregon City to Eugene Wednesday to be present at commencement exercises of the state university.

Oscar Denneville, formerly of Reno, Nev., is seeking a ranch for his family in this section of the state. Wednesday he was looking over property in the neighborhood of Oregon City. STRAWBERRY PRICE SHOWS NO CHANGE

Strawberries are still holding firm at one dollar per crate, and are of good quality. Clark seedlings, Dollars, and other varieties are ruling at this price, and there is little fruit to be had for less, though some poorer stock is being unloaded at 85 cents. Extra fancy Washington berries are bringing $1.25 a crate, but not much of this sort of stuff is being offered.

The market in general is showing practically no change from earlier in the week. Asparagus is ranging around the dollar mark per dozen bunches; eggs are still between 18 and 19 cents on the markets, and are selling from 20 cents up at retail, depending on quality and the fatness of purchasers' pocketbooks.

Cherries are dropping off in quality, but are the same price. Gooseberries are plentiful, but have to be picked over carefully.

Green vegetables are as formerly. Green peas and string beans are in somewhat better condition, cooler weather having prevented further sunburn.

How I Came to Marry

By ALLAN G. LAMOND

In the gold hunting days I went out to the gold fields to make a fortune. I fell in with a young man of my own age, Elliot Mansfield, and we agreed to prospect together. Mansfield had left a mother and sister, to whom he was much attached. Unfortunately his mother had received an injury to one of her eyes, and since her son's departure for the west it had extended to the other eye, and she was gradually becoming blind.

The letters she wrote Mansfield were pathetic. She hoped that he might be with her again, but she did not hope to see him. His sister wrote him that, if possible, he should come home that his mother might see him once more before losing her sight. But he had no money for the journey, and if he could get home he would not be able to get back again. He was a resolute fellow and averse to giving up what he had undertaken—namely, to go back, if ever he did go back, with a fortune.

I was no better off than Mansfield. We wandered about with picks on our shoulders wherever we believed there might be gold and at last succeeded in striking dirt that promised to pay. While we were getting it into shape to secure capital with which to work it Mansfield was taken sick. He was ill a long while, and during this time I wrote letters for him to his mother and sister. In these letters, at his request, I forged his handwriting that they might not suspect that he was unable to write them himself. Furthermore, he charged me to tell them that he had struck a mine of value and would soon go east with a view to forming a company to work it. The poor fellow did not recover. He asked me before he died to make over his share in our mine to his mother and sister and if possible go east, as he had hoped to do, and either sell the mine or organize a company, as I might be able. Dreading the shock of his death on his mother, he asked me to keep up the deception till I should go east and arrange with his sister for breaking the sad news to his mother.

I found an opportunity to sell out for $50,000 and availed myself of it. If I had held on the property would have made me very rich, but I was tired of the deception I was practicing and knew my late partner's mother and sister were very poor. Taking their share of the proceeds with me, I went at once to the town in which they lived. On my arrival I sent a messenger to Miss Mansfield to tell her that her brother's partner had arrived with news of him, but cautioning her to say nothing about me to her mother until I had had an opportunity to see her. She appointed a meeting with me at the home of one of her friends. I went there and told her the bad news I had for her.

To her grief was added the fact that her mother, who had now become quite blind, was looking for her son every day. Her daughter—Mildred was her name—was in agony at the idea of imparting the news to her. She could not think of doing so at the time, for the old lady was not in a condition to bear it. So we arranged between us that until she was better I was to write letters as before, putting off the son and brother's arrival. Mildred Mansfield was a very lovely girl. I sympathized with her deeply, and it was a matter of satisfaction that I was enabled to turn over to her her brother's share in what I had realized for the mine.

One day, desiring to consult with Mildred, I went to her house to see her. I could see no risk of revealing the true situation in doing so. But the old lady, who was in her room above, heard my voice below and got it into her head that I was her son. The idea occurred to Mildred of permitting her mother to believe me to be her son, and I saw no objection to the plan. So I went upstairs and submitted to a hugging and weeping that were almost hysterical.

"The mine is sold, mother," I said, "and my share is $25,000. It's all in bank right here in this town."

"I'm very happy," she said through her tears, "though I can't see you. You must stay here always, and so long as I live neither you nor your sister must quarrel, but live here for me and each other."

Mildred was too embarrassed by this to make a reply, so I was obliged to make it myself.

"Yes, mother. We will live only for you and each other."

I was looking at Mildred when I said this, and she raised her eyes and blushed. Then she said, "You'd better give mother time to recover from her excitement," and I went downstairs.

Well, we were in for it now deeper than ever. Of course I was obliged to take up my quarters in the house, and since Mrs. Mansfield was blind as a bat she was not available for a chaperon. We talked over the matter of telling her the truth, and finally I said: "Why not let her remain in ignorance? We can be married, and that will make it all right for me to live here. After your mother's death, if you wish it, I will help you to get the marriage annulled."

So we had a wedding ceremony performed. Just to enable us to deceive Mrs. Mansfield for her own good, and when she died we concluded to let the marriage stand. And that's the way I came to be a married man today and the father of seven children—just to avoid giving an old lady on the brink of the grave a shock.

A Familiar Opinion. "Yes; he was appointed counselor to one of the departments at Washington."

"A legal job, eh?" "Yes; he renders opinions."

"And what was the first opinion he rendered?" "One to the effect that his salary ought to be raised."—Washington Herald.

The Great Danger. "What do you consider the chief danger of wealth?" asked the solemn man. "That the other fellow will have it," responded a searier inclined to flippancy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

FORD COMPANY DENIES SALE

RUMOR THAT STANDARD OIL CO. HAS PURCHASED AUTOMOBILE CONCERN FALSE

To Dealers, Sub-dealers, Limited Dealers and Branch Managers: For fear that you have not noticed Page 833 of the Ford Times for May, wherein an emphatic denial is made of certain silly rumors concerning a change of ownership in the Ford Motor company and a consequent reduction in the price of Ford cars, we call to your attention the following plain statement of facts:

1st. The Standard Oil company or any other company has not bought the Ford business or even a single share of our Company's stock, as we have no interest to sell.

2nd. We have no connection whatever with any other automobile concern.

3rd. We will not sell three cars for one thousand dollars.

4th. We will not market our product through mail-order houses or direct to the retail buyers, or through any other channels except our regular licensed dealers.

We expect and want everyone connected with the Ford organization to deny rumors of this character, resting assured that when any changes are made in Ford policy our organization will be the first to know of it.

A dealer need only to read his contract and do business accordingly, as his contract furnishes him ample guarantee that such rumors are without foundation.

THE LATEST FASHION NOTE

Says: "It is a wise precaution against getting holes in delicate hosiery to powder the shoes before putting them on." Many people sprinkle the famous antiseptic powder, Allen's Foot-Powder, into the shoes, and find that it saves the cost ten times over in keeping holes from hosiery as well as lessening friction and consequent burning and aching of the feet.

MRS. LARAMORE TELLS TROUBLES

Lady in Goodwater Describes Her Distressing Experience and Tells How She Was Finally Relieved.

Goodwater, Mo.—"Ever since I was a little girl," says Mrs. Riley Laramore, "I was a great sufferer from dyspepsia. I suffered misery after eating, and had terrible heartburn."

I thought I had to suffer this way as long as I lived, but when I began to take Theodor's Black-Draught, in small doses, every night, the heartburn was all gone in a few days, and I could eat without distress.

I took two small packages in all, and although that was some time ago, the dyspepsia has not returned.

I speak a good word for Theodor's Black-Draught whenever I have the opportunity.

If eating causes distress, we urge you to try Theodor's Black-Draught. It cleanses the system, helps the stomach to digest its food, regulates the bowels, and stimulates the liver.

It acts gently and is without bad after-effects. Try it. Price 25c.
