Study of the booklet. however, will move the average man or woman to the conclusion that the time has come for a change in the ethical standards and education of many of the dealers who provide eatables for the public. It is hardly to be believed that a man who sells rancid peanut butter for children to spread upon their bread is a good citizen, nor can it be allowed that a druggist who sells olive oil that isn't olive oil at all is a credit or a help to the community.

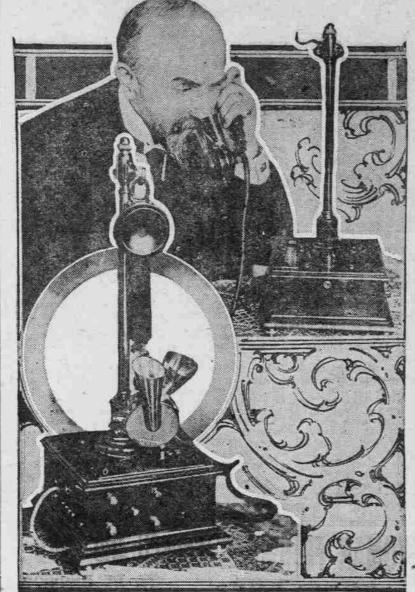

The state dairy and food commissioner keeps a series of score cards Evening star; Mercury Morning which tell at a glance the conditions of dairies, markets and slauguter houses, and this information is open to the public. It would be an excellent thing for people to take the trouble to discover what is on these score cards, and then to patronize only such places as can show a reasonably clean bill of health. If this is done there will not only be less sickness, and less danger of sickness; communities will be bettered by his retirement, A man who willfully sells

French Doctor Invents Phone: You Talk Through Your Nose In It

Photos by American Press Association.

N constructing the telephone the makers have heretofore paid too little attention to the modulations of the voice. According to Dr. Jules Glover, physician of the Conservatory of Music of Paris, this matter is one of great importance, for the electrical current affects the telephone receiver not by its intensity, but by its variations. The vibrations of the voice, leaving the pharynx, reach the soft palate, which divides them into two groups more or less unequal. One emerges through the nose, the other by means of the mouth. Of this condition the present apparatus takes no account. Dr. Glover has invented a telephone transmitter containing two microphones of different sensitiveness, into which the person using the telephone speaks respectively with the mouth and with the nose. Professor D'Arsonval has described this invention to the Academy of Sciences. It will preserve the exact tones of the voice in the transmission of telephone messages at very long distances.

of it; but it was quite unnecessary for any one newspaper to make what is technically known as a "second day story" out of the same affair, and "play it up" as a fresh happening. Oregon City people resented the intrusion of Portland agitators who came here to tell us how our mills should be run. Oregon City people also resent the "enterprise" of any paper which will, in order to prolong a news sensation, order its local cor- for director, follows: respondent to send in a good sensational story the day after events already reported have occurred. Such tactics do not show any great friendliness for Oregon City on the part of that you become a candidate for the newspaper, nor do they show any great desire on the newspaper's part to adhere strictly to the truth.
