1775—Battle between British regular soldiers and patriot militia and minutemen at Bunker Hill, near Boston. 1809—The mammoth steamer Great Eastern sailed from Southampton, England, on her first trip to New York. 1863—The Federal ironclad Weehawken captured the powerful Confederate ram Atlanta in Wassaw sound, Georgia, after a spirited action. 1889—John Gibbs Gilbert, noted actor, died; born 1810.

ASTRONOMICAL EVENTS.

Evening star: Mercury Morning stars: Venus, Saturn, Mars, Jupiter. Almost due south, high up and crossing the meridian about 9:30 p. m., the constellation Bootes driver or watcher of the Great Bear, presents a well defined figure.

ON THE—It is not so very long ago MOVIES that daring souls, who were not afraid of electricity or of contracting diseases of the eye, would drop a nickel in the slot, bend double over a rumbling, sputtering, buzzing machine, bury their faces in a dirty hood, and exclaim with joy as they saw a diminutive picture on a diminutive screen prance and dance jerkily about. This was the kineoscopes, hailed far and wide as the marvel of the age. A year or so later one solitary amusement hall in New York got 25 cents a head from people who entered to see the cinematograph, the first real moving picture machine that projected animated figures upon a white screen.

Nowdays people do not even exclaim when they read that a new $10,000 moving picture house has just opened, that it contains opera chairs, and that it has more conveniences for its patrons than the average theatre that is devoted to the drama. Admission to these palaces of animated pictures is usually ten cents, and they are packed from early morning till the last film is run. Where formerly pictures of the animated variety attempted to show nothing more thrilling than a horse race, they now present for the public view great spectacles founded upon the classics, and in which leading actresses and actors are paid fabulous sums to appear. Oftentimes a thousand people take part in the productions, and expeditions are made to all parts of the world to get the proper and appropriate stage settings.

Not only is this done, but enterprising "moving picture newspapers" maintain bureaus in all the principal cities of the globe, where nimble-footed and trained operators walk like scouts, ready to dash at a moment's notice to the scene of some great disaster or ceremony, to catch upon the long and narrow film the actual happenings, so that the rest of the world may actually see what is going on in the four corners of the earth. Anyone who has ten cents, or even five, today may visit Europe, may go to the frozen north, may share with Scott the perils of the Antarctic, or may plunge into darkest Africa, and see nature in its wildest. Even distant warfore is brought home to us, and shown night after night upon the magic mirage of the moving picture screen.

It is a wonderful thing, when one stops to think of it. In former years one had to be rich to travel, and to see the world. Now the faithful "movies," sandwiching the real world in between the exploits of Cayuse Charlie or some other favorite of the films, take the patrons of the houses from one end of the globe to the other, all in a few minutes. They bring to the backwoods hamlets, even the great personages of the world, and show them bowing, speaking, or otherwise exercising themselves. They give the country towns the benefit of Bernhardt's and Southern's and other great thespians that never play the one-night stands, and they even magnify the bugs and beasts of the field, and show them busy at their work of filling their place in the universe.

Some people say the "movies" are bad. Maybe some of them are. But for the most part they are good, for the most part they are educational in one way or the other; and in nearly every case they are worth the nickel or the dime that they cost.

OVER IN This is a great time for GERMANY the house of Hohenzollern. The German people are celebrating the twenty-fifth successful year of the reign of the present Kaiser, and they are doing it nobly. Monarchs of the old world are gathering in Berlin to extend felicitations to Emperor Wilhelm, and feudal ceremony is being revived primarily for its aid in making the celebration a remarkable spectacle.

And it is fitting. Germany is less of an empire than many another country that boasts political freedom. The Kaiser is less of a despot than many a ruler who derives his power from the people and not from divine right. Under his rule the Fatherland has grown and developed, has perfected a school system that puts the rest of the world to shame, has built up an industrial system that is the wonder and the fear of all competitors; and throughout all this the even tenore of progress has not been disturbed by the ravages of serious warfare. The Kaiser has proved a wise leader, a master hand at executive power, and a builder who will go down in history as one of the truly progressive men of the world.

Likewise other men he has his idiosyncrasies and his faults. He is perhaps over aware of his own powers and accomplishments, yet he has ground for an exalted pride in himself. He has done with Germany and the Germans what no other man has done with any other country; he has developed a race energy into new channels, and has converted a nation's resources into a wealth that stays at home. He has adopted the system of intensified development to everything, and has at the same time kept his own people happy and contented. In the past America has made some fun of Wilhelm, we have looked upon him with amusement, but at times our smiles have annoyed him. But he has had his revenge. He has so trained and developed his people that he has made the legend "Made in Germany," more familiar in the United States than any other sign; and in trade, science and general learning he has made his own nation such a leader in the world that we who in the past made fun of him now send delegations to his land to learn his secrets.

The Kaiser and Germany have a right to be proud of each other, and it is fitting that they should have a silver jubilee.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS REPORT Oregon City, Or., June 15, 1913. To the Taxpayers and Patrons of School District No. 62, Clackamas County, Oregon: Ladies and Gentlemen:

We respectfully submit for your consideration the following report of matters in connection with the business of school District No. 62, transacted during the fiscal year just ended.

We are again closing the year without a floating debt, and with $9,333.23 in our sinking fund to pay off outstanding bonds. On July 1, 1913, bonds to the amount of $6,000 fall due, and we shall have funds on hand to take up this issue and have a balance remaining to apply on the payment of an issue of $6,000 that will mature December 1, 1916.

We have kept our expenditures this year well within our estimates, and the schools have been kept up to the standard set, though we received less money during the year just ended than in the previous year due to the fact that the special tax levy was reduced from nine mills to eight mills. Of this levy one mill goes to the sinking fund, the district being required by law to provide for the retirement of bonds as they mature.

During the year considerable money has been expended in repairs and improvements, principally at the Barclay building, where needed repairs were made and upon the grounds of the high school building.

There has been a gain of 144 children of school age in the district, the census taken last November showing 1644 children between the ages of 4 and 20 residing in the district.

The district was successful in defeating an effort to compel it, through the courts, to pay for material furnished contractors on the high school building and for which the contractor did not pay.

The financial condition of the district and the receipts and disbursements for the fiscal year are shown by the annual report of the district clerk, which is hereto appended.

Respectfully submitted, W. A. HUNTLEY, O. D. EBY, A. L. BEATIE, JOS. E. HEDGES, GEO. A. HARDING.
