AS TO THE At a somewhat spirited ELEVATOR meeting Friday afternoon the city council decided to decide next week as to whether or not it would have an elevator. The council also accepted the bid of one of the competing contracting companies, but did not authorize that any agreement for the construction of the lift be entered into. For an hour the city fathers discussed the elevator matter with a most commendable thoroughness. The special committee having the elevator in charge now hope that the council will see fit to order the contract awarded next week. In fact early action on the matter will be necessary, else the accepted contracting firm may withdraw its bid.

Much of the discussion Friday afternoon hinged upon the matter of the location of the elevator. This was brought up largely by the publication in The Enterprise Friday morning of an interview with J. W. Moffatt, in which certain arguments in favor of Fourth street, rather than Seventh, as a site, were set forth. Some readers of the article got the impression that The Enterprise was boosting for the Fourth street site. The Enterprise is not boosting for either site; it merely published the remarks of Mr. Moffatt because it believed them news. The people, in voting the bond issue, understood that the elevator was to be built at Seventh street; the advertisements for bids called for the location of the elevator at Seventh street; the special elevator committee of the council presumed that Seventh street was the chosen site, and confined their work there.

Mentally Defective Child Out of Place In the Public Schools

By Dr. MAX G. SCHLAPP of New York

THERE is in these days a changing order of things in which the running equilibrium of an individual is in direct relation to his environment. INSANITY AND FEEBLE MIND-EDNESS ARE ON THE INCREASE.

There is a growing discontent in national life, and the activities of the women suffragists, the mental healing cults and those who believe in spiritualism are medical symptoms of a great mental unrest that is sweeping the world.

All feeble minded states take origin in disordered bodily function. Consequently the disarrangement of physical structures leads to DISORDERS IN THE CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM.

This has been proved in cases of cretinism and myxedema by feeding and then withdrawing thyroid extract.

THE MENTALLY DEFECTIVE CHILD IS OUT OF PLACE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS. EVERY TEACHER KNOWS HOW LITTLE CAN BE ACCOMPLISHED IN SUCH CASES. EVERY DEFECTIVE SHOULD BE TAKEN OUT OF SCHOOL AND PUT INTO AN INSTITUTION, BECAUSE ALL SUCH CHILDREN ARE CRIMINAL, IN EMBRYO, AND WILL CORRUPT THE MORALS OF NORMAL CHILDREN.

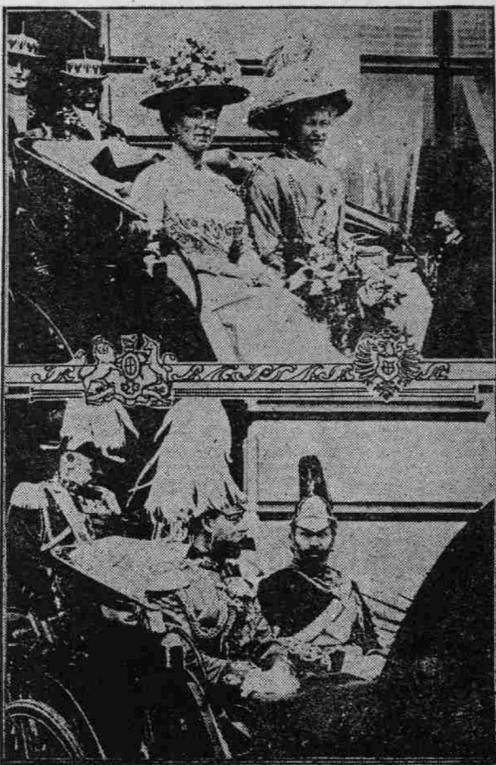

They are capable of very little book learning; hence vocational training in an institution is the only solution of their problem.

Kaiser and King George and Wives at Princess' Wedding

Photos by American Press Association.

EMPEROR WILLIAM was especially cordial in his welcome to King George of England at the wedding of Princess Victoria Louise in Berlin. The two rulers are here seen seated in a carriage going from the station to the royal palace. Queen Mary and the kaiserin are seen seated in another carriage. It was apparent that the kaiser went out of his way, as it were, to show the very best of friendly feeling toward King George because of the rumors of strained relations between the nations.

The elevator is as yet no certainty, in spite of the work of the elevator committee and the acceptance of plans. As Mayor Jones said, Friday: "It is still up to the council, and I think the matter ought to be settled one way or the other at the next meeting. I think every councilman ought to be here, fully familiar with the plans, and prepared either to vote for the elevator or to buck it—if that is their intention. This thing has been hanging fire for six months, and it ought to be settled one way or the other."

THE DAY This is the longest day in OF DAYS the year. It is said, therefore, to be the day when chickens make the most noise and get the least sleep, the day that women talk the most, and the day when everybody saves money on light bills. All these observations are made in varied forms throughout the earth every twenty-first of June, and are but the forerunners of the summer madness that comes with the silly season and the season of seashore romances and mountain lake engagements.

Nevertheless, June 21st is an interesting day in history. Lord Halifax founded the city which bears his name on this date in 1749. On the same day of the month, only in 1813, the Duke of Wellington walloped Klax Joseph in the battle of Vittoria—and thanked his stars for the extra length of daylight in which to complete the engagement. In 1834 Cyrus McCormick patented the reaping machine, which has since been the mainstay of the greatest of all American trusts. It was a long day that Cyrus took to patent his device, and it will be many a long day before the farmers of the world get through paying for the privilege of using it.

On one of the "longest days"—the one that befell in 1867, the republic was "again" re-established in Mexico. Mexico, it seems, had the revolution habit even then, and has had it consistently ever since. Queen Victoria started her enlightened reign on one of the "long days of sunshine," and on June 21, 1887, she celebrated the golden jubilee of the occasion. On the longest day in the year in 1912 they had the first snow storm in Costa Rica, this surprising phenomenon for the tropics following an earthquake. Probably there was no other day in the year which would have been lengthened enough for both these things to occur at once.

Perhaps one of the reasons that June 21st has always been more or less notable is that owing to its length there has always been time for things to happen. Most of our days are so crowded that only ordinary events come to pass in them, but the longest day of the year has several second all of its own that no other date possesses—and Nature, hating a vacuum, does her best to fill in the spare time.

"THIS IS MY 43RD BIRTHDAY"

Earl Cawdor

Hugh Frederick Vaughan Campbell fourth Earl Cawdor, was born June 21, 1870. He succeeded to the title in 1911 upon the death of his father, the third Earl, who was a noted Unionist leader and a man of great achievements in business and public affairs. The present Earl was educated at Oxford University. He possesses large estates and several country residences. One of them is the famous Cawdor Castle, in Scotland, a seventeenth century fortress built round the remains of an old tower of some four centuries earlier. In the lowest dungeon may be seen a thorn tree growing out of the floor, and by it is an enormous chest of great antiquity. In this dungeon and round this tree it is the family custom to drink the Cawdor toast, "Freshness to the hawthorn and prosperity to the line of Cawdor."

Congratulations to: Prof. Alois Brandl, of the University of Berlin, 58 years old today. Charles E. Littlefield, former congressman from Maine, 62 years old today.

Contradictory Terms. An American visitor to Cambridge sought explanation of some unfamiliar terms, which a genial Don was delighted to elucidate. "Full term," he explained, "is three-quarters of a term, and the 'May week' is the first fortnight in June. A day of general admission is the day on which men leave the university, an ordinary degree is one conferred by a special examination, and an inspector of arts is one who has been an arts student for at least six years."

The Yankee passed a hand across his weary brow. "And will they," he queried, "put me in the London train if I ask for a ticket to Cambridge?"—London Globe.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

HONESTY. Honesty is not only the best policy; it is the law of life.

When you cheat your neighbor you bear the greater loss of the two. He loses a few dollars; you lose your own soul's integrity. His loss is of something outside of himself; your loss is of something within. He may readily replace what has been taken from him, but how can you supply your missing self respect, your inherent sense of justice that you have outraged?

The law of recompense operates unerringly. Do not think you can really escape a debt. Some time, some place, you must pay to the uttermost farthing. Evasion or shirking now will not release you. The law goes on. The universe is not run at haphazard, however our lives may be. You cannot take without giving. If you attempt it you cheat yourself.

Human fictions, be they legal or otherwise, do not change the eternal law. The only way to get money or other things of value is to give an equivalent. Those who seem to evade this natural order do not really evade it in the end. Time will see the score evened. If through some subterfuge, some gambling device, some unjust law or in whatsoever way you take from your brother without making adequate return you at last must foot the bill. And because society permits it you cannot make society pay your debt.

God is not mocked. Our fictions do not change his truth. As we sow we shall reap. The debt must be paid. The debt of chattel slavery was paid, and that of wage slavery will be paid both here and hereafter—here by society and both here and hereafter by the individual.

You can't get something for nothing. If you seem to do so for awhile it is only a seeming. You must make good. The entire cosmos is pledged to see that every debt is paid. The exact adjustment and balance of the scheme of things could not be maintained otherwise. A few human symbols scrawled on a piece of parchment and proclaimed a law do not alter the divine plan. He who takes that which is not his own in the eye of the changeless truth is a thief, it matters not how many governments protect him.

Each man is entitled to that which he produces or its exact equivalent. He who corners God's resources to rob his brother shall not escape an accounting when the books are balanced.

HOME.

If solid happiness we prize, Within our breast this jewel lies, And they are fools who roam. The world has nothing to bestow.

From our own selves our joys must flow. And that dear but our home. —Nathaniel Cotton.

Such is the country's boast wherever we roam— His first best country ever is at home. —Oliver Goldsmith.

Aye, now I am in Arden—the more fool I. When I was at home I was in a better place, but travelers must be content—Shakespeare.

Anacharsis, coming to Athens, knocked at Solon's door and told him that he, being a stranger, was come to be his guest and contract a friendship with him, and Solon replying, "It is better to make friends at home." Anacharsis replied, "Then you that are at home make friendship with me"—Plutarch.
