

ELEVATOR ARGUMENT STIRS UP COUNCIL

at Fourth street. There was no mention in the bond issue as to where the elevator might be located, though the impression has gotten out that Seventh street was the site specified. I think the location ought to be at Fourth street."

J. W. Moffatt, of the Oregon Engineering & Construction company, next obtained the floor, reviewing the arguments in favor of the Fourth street location, substantially as published in his interview in Friday morning's Enterprise, he added that he believed the city ought to take into consideration the limitations of the bond issue.

"You can now spend $12,000 for your elevator," he said. "Now if you spend nearly that for the elevator and the tower, you will find that you will still have to pay $2,000 for water to operate your elevator, and your lights will cost you about $1,000 more. If you consent to believe it is better to put the elevator at Seventh street, go ahead and put it there, but you will find that it is a matter of dollars and cents, and that you can install your elevator completely equipped and ready to run at Fourth street for about $11,000, whereas at Seventh street it will cost you in the neighborhood of $15,000. You need an elevator or more at Fourth street, where the bluff is 110 feet high as against the 85 foot rise at Seventh street, and if you build it at Fourth street you will find it easier to get the money."

Special District Suggested.
"I would suggest that you form an elevator district, and get the people in the district to stand the cost. I for one would be glad to. I own six acres up on the hill, and I'd pay my share. I know the Hawley mills would pay $500, and the other mills would pay $250 each. I would like to see that it is economy to build at Fourth street, and I don't say this for selfish reasons either, for these other firms here can give you a cheaper bid if Fourth street is taken into consideration, and the Oregon Engineering & Construction company won't try to meet their figures, either. It is nothing to me one way or the other, but I think the city ought to take the money value and the convenience of the people into consideration."

Mayor Jones suggested that if there was such a willingness of people in the southern end of the city to put up an elevator, they might erect a private elevator. This moved Mr. Moffatt to say that it was the city's duty to build one. The mayor told Mr. Moffatt he was out of order, and Mr. Moffatt rejoined that the council was out of order. It is proposed to spend more than $12,000, as appropriated in a bond issue, for the elevator, and that this would have to be done if the Seventh street site was adhered to.

Councilman Sees Plot.
Just as things were getting warm Councilman Tooze got the floor, and in reviewing matters said that he thought there ought to be that given for the council to consider the questions raised. The council not appearing to be inclined to grant this time, Mr. Tooze said that he saw only too plainly that there was a move on foot to deny him the privilege of going over the plans, and that as such was the case he would vote against the elevator.

With Mr. Tooze in this frame of mind, Councilman Holman asked the city attorney if the city could pay more for the elevator than the $12,000 provided by the bond issue. Mr. Stone said the city could not spend more for the elevator itself, but might legally spend additional sums for water service and incidentals in connection with the elevator. He said that he did not believe any injunction could be brought against the city on that ground.

Representatives of the Oregon Bridge & Construction company mentioned that as their bid depended upon the price of steel, they could not hold it open indefinitely.

"Backbone" in Demand.
Chairman Albright of the special elevator committee then got the floor. "If this council hadn't got the backbone to go ahead with this thing," he said, "they might as well drop it. As for Mr. Tooze being deprived of his rights, he hasn't been deprived of anything, for he knew the other night—last Wednesday—that this was coming up, and had all the chance in the world to inquire into details."

Councilman Metzger advanced the question as to what the city would do if, with only $12,000 available to build an elevator, it found the thing would cost $15,000.

Mayor Jones then interrupted the argument to declare that much that had been said was hat-splitting. Mr. Tooze said he hadn't been splitting hairs, that he hadn't had a chance to see the plans, and that he wasn't going to vote. Councilman Beard feared court troubles might hold the thing up for six months. Council Holman then got his motion before the house again, and a vote was taken.

The result: Aye—Albright, Beard, Holman, Long, Meyer; noes—Metzger and Tooze. Councilman Horton refused to vote.

This result hobbled the council nicely. It forced them to accept the bid of the Oregon Bridge & Construction company, but forbade the mayor to enter into a contract for the work until the right-of-way over the Chase property was secured.

Chairman Albright, of the elevator committee, said he favored the street as the location. Council Meyer thought the council ought to go over the matter again. Mr. Tooze said confidentially that he knew certain people were going to do all they could to block the elevator. Finally the vote just taken was reconsidered, and Mr. Holman changed his motion so that it should read that the bid of the Oregon Bridge & Construction company be accepted, and that the mayor and recorder enter into a contract when so instructed by the council. Put to vote this measure carried, Council Horton alone refusing to vote, on the grounds that he had not seen the plans. It was then determined to bring the matter up for what is hoped will be final settlement next Wednesday afternoon.

Before adjourning the council appointed John Lewellyn, William Anderson and W. A. White as appraisers to view the property at the top of the bluff at Seventh street and set a value upon it in the condemnation proceedings.

FEW SURPRISES IN PENNANT RACES

Last Year's Leaders Disappointing Fans This Season.

PHILLIES LOOK VERY GOOD.

Charley Dooin's Team Playing Great Ball—Philadelphia. Americans Enjoy Well—Cleveland a Big Surprise. Giants Not Doing So Well.

It is doubtful if any pennant races have furnished as many surprises as the present one. In both major leagues teams which were considered as having the best chance to lead the procession have proved disappointments.

Boston in the American league was expected to get a flying start in the race this year, yet is occupying a lowly position, with slight hope of improving. The National league race was believed to be a fight between Pittsburgh and New York, and yet neither of these teams has shown pennant winning ball to date.

PHITCHER BENDER—HOW HE HOLDS BALL TO DELIVER HIS FAMOUS DROP.

McGraw's machine seems to have broken down. Marquard's great pitching of last season, when he won nineteen straight games and kept his team in the lead, is missed. Tesreau is not near as effective as he was, and Mathewson is still the Giants' star twirler, but he must have four or five days' rest to be at his best.

The Phillies appear to be showing their very best form. They are galloping out in front, but it is a question how long they will last, though Dooin seems to have the material for a winner. No team has a better pitching staff than he, Seaton, Chalmers, Alexander, Rixey and Brennan make a formidable lot of twirlers, and if they can hold up their end the Phillies are not to be easily caught.

Cleveland is the surprise in the American league. Birmingham is getting some wonderful results out of his team, but it would be most remarkable if the Naps were able to continue their present stride much longer. They have been known to make other similar spurts, only to fall down during the middle of the campaign.

Washington, because of the fact that its team has not been intact the greater part of the season, has shouldered a great handicap, yet remains prominent in the race.

The Athletics are playing great ball. It is a question whether Mack has a pitching staff strong enough to carry him along. Plank and Bender are the only ones to be relied upon, and it will probably be found that they will help before the season is over.

One marvels how major league teams of a few years back managed to go through a season with twelve or thirteen players when today the average team finds itself pushed for material even though it carries twenty-five players on its list.

In the old days few players were ever idle. Pitchers played the outfield when they were not pitching, while catchers were constantly being used in the infield when they could be spared behind the bat. It would seem that the players were more versatile in those days or the standard of play was not as high as it is today.

The average pitcher nowadays can pitch, and that lets him out. He could not fill any other position satisfactorily and is idle about five days out of every week. When the pitchers were forced to play other positions they naturally acquired ability aside from pitching, and this made them of more value to their teams.

Wood is Very Modest.
Joe Wood, modest young fellow, admits that Walter Johnson is a better pitcher than himself. He says Johnson's greater strength, size and longer arm enable him to put more speed on the ball with less comparative exertion.

Mind Reading.
"I am sure that girl has a kind heart and a considerate disposition," said the young man.

"Why?"
"Because when I asked her what her favorite dower was she took care to name something that doesn't cost more than 50 cents a bunch."—Washington Star.

TEACHERS ENJOYING SUMMER CLASSES

Teachers at the county summer school, now being held at Gladstone park, declare that they would not go back to the former system of instruction for their work, and that they have come to County Superintendent T. J. Gary and assured him that not only are they able to get a great deal more good from the classwork at the summer school, but that the intermingling of recreation and study is making it possible for them to assimilate a great deal more useful training.

The first of the big features in the sex hygiene course will be held Saturday afternoon, when Dr. Williamson of Reed College, will deliver the first of the series of lectures on this subject. It is often called good-will, as they are for the benefit of all interested, as well as for the teachers.

About 60 of the county instructors have settled down to regular camp life at the summer school, and are having a great time. It is believed that about 40 more will join the group next week, attendance at the state examinations having kept many away at the start. The open-air and tent life has been greatly enjoyed by all, and the service in the co-operative restaurant—which is a part of the practical domestic science training—has been declared all that could be desired.

For recreation the teachers have divided themselves into two groups, and nightly these groups alternate in entertaining each other. When the weather has been rainy the school-mans have met in the W. C. T. U. auditorium for extemporaneous programs. Friday afternoon there was a baseball game between teams from the county, and the game was a "co-ed" affair, and many of the women teachers showed a surprising ability in the contest. As soon as the weather clears up, it is planned to start a tennis tournament.

The rose festival visitors returned from Portland delighted with the display given there, and also inspired by the reflection that no reason exists why Macksburg should be behind Portland in the culture of the rose. With the same climatic conditions and soil as fertile as we choose to make it, nothing but the will is needed to attain the results exhibited at that wonderful show.

The Manufacturer and His Trade-Mark

Behind every trade-mark that really amounts to anything there are brains, energy, ambition, and work-hard work—joined hand in hand to produce some article of worth that will deserve and win universal approval.

After a manufacturer has spent a great many years in organizing his business and perfecting his product his name and his trademark amount to something worth while, or else he has toiled in vain. The name or trademark alone of many a big concern is worth thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is often called goodwill. It might be called reputation.

The trade-mark is the directing finger, pointing the way to articles of quality and dependability.

Manufacturers of trade-marked articles are no longer satisfied to advertise their trademark only. They are coming to understand that they must also advertise the place where their goods may be purchased. That is why you see trade-marked articles advertised more and more in daily newspapers, because the newspaper is the chief advertising medium for creating actual demand upon the retailer.
