MORE ABOUT While certain citizens are proclaiming loudly that the elevator ought to be at Seventh street, and other citizens are proclaiming just as loudly that it ought to be at Fourth street, and while still others think that the convenience ought to be somewhere else; there still remains one way by which the dispute may be settled. It is possible to seek a referendum vote upon the matter, and so determine at once what is the true will of the people.

It appears that when the people voted for an elevator they voted simply for an elevator. While many may have presumed that they were voting for an elevator at Seventh street, as a matter of fact this was mere presumption. People who wanted the elevator at Seventh street did, at that time, just what the people who want an elevator at Fourth street are doing now—they made a lot of noise about it. Other people not making a noise in regard to other locations, the natural result was that the general impression prevailed that the vote was for Seventh street.

When the matter of selecting a site was placed in the hands of the council committee for further action, the same Seventh street noise continued. The council committee thought that the people wanted an elevator at Seventh street, and true to their oath of office they tried to conform to the will of the majority. But as a matter of fact the Seventh street location never got legally and technically into the matter until the advertisement for bids was set at Seventh street—and

Dillman & Howland

In continuing to talk about, think about and act about Seventh street the council has been doing exactly what it should, under the circumstances. The only proposition before it was the Seventh street site. When the first bids were refused owing to their excess figures above the sum at hand from the bond issue, the council, in order to afford and opportunity to promoters of an inclined railway, advertised again for bids "for an elevator at Seventh street" or an inclined railway at Eighth street. But the elevator matter remained the same. With the failure of the Eighth street scheme to materialize, once again the council had before it nothing but the Seventh street matter. And the council is within its rights in refusing to consider any other plan. This in no way is to be taken as an argument for Seventh street, however. It is merely a statement of fact. People who want the elevator at some other site than the one under councilman consideration are now coming to the front with arguments in favor of their proposition. This is their privilege. But because the council cannot rightfully listen to them while it is considering the matter in hand is no reason why they should be vexed with the city dads. If somebody wants an elevator at some other point the thing to do is to first get an expression from the people as to where shall be the best place for the public convenience, and then to persuade the council to take action as the people show that they desire. The only way to do this is to have a public expression of preference by some such plan as a referendum. Probably if a majority of the people then show that they want the elevator at Fourth street, the council will give it to them—provided that there is a bond issue available. In the meantime the council cannot do otherwise rightfully than continue along the line on which it is working. Objection to that should have been made earlier to be effective.

THE LONGEST The Enterprise Saturday GONE BY urday hazzard-1 some remarks about the longest day in the year. Its more or less mirthful reflections were not intended to be prophetic. Yet Oregon City, it seems, may yet have cause to remember the longest day of 1913. Many things happened locally, among them being the bobbing-into the peaceful ways of city affairs of the recall spectre. No other day in the year, apparently, was

Cuban Cruiser and Commander At Maine Shaft Unveiling

Photos by American Press Association.

An interesting feature of the Maine monument unveiling in New York on Memorial day was the presence of the marines from the Cuban cruiser, the Cuba, which visited the United States for the special purpose of taking part in the ceremonies. The ship anchored in the Hudson with the super-Dreadnaughts of the north Atlantic fleet. Commander Fernandez Quevedo allowed his men to take part in the land parade and to hold open house for the sightseeing visitors while the vessel was in the harbor.

long enough for this ghost to appear—and even the longest day was not quite long enough for the wrath to take husky and healthy form. But it sneaked in upon us for a few minutes, and helped furnish a subject for street-corner conversation during the extra seconds with which June 21 was blessed.

The sheriff's office and the police force thought that maybe the longest day would be selected by Portland agitators for another excursion to this fair city, and they were ready to greet the visitors with due show of authority. But Portland's soap-boxers did not come, and the stalwart guards of the peace had nothing exciting to do. Perhaps this was a disappointment to them, but it was a relief to others. Any day that the agitators come here is too long a day for Oregon City.

The best known of his stories and poems are those dealing with railroad life. After leaving Colorado Mr. Warman traveled in Europe and the Orient for two years and after his return spent two years in Washington as a journalist. The past few years he has been in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway and has made his home in Montreal.

Congratulations to: Arthur Bourcier, noted English actor and manager, 49 years old today.

Sir Henry Rider Haggard, famous as a novelist and also an authority on agricultural economy, 57 years old today.

Robert S. Lovett, a prominent factor in the management of the Harriman system of railroads, 53 years old today.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

SALUTE THE COLORS.

At the Walter Reed hospital, outside the city of Washington, the troops were recently engaged in a ball game just before evening taps.

The game was probably exciting, for there are fans wherever there is baseball, even though it is played by scrubs. At the psychological moment, just after some one had knocked a fly to the outfield, the bugle sounded colors. Immediately every bat was dropped, every cap came off, and every man faced to the flag and saluted. Even the man who was fielding the fly dropped his glove, and the ball rebounded on the earth unheeded. This, you will agree, was a supreme test of patriotism, for there is no other one thing in the universe excepting sudden death that would cause a felder to neglect a high one.

The incident illustrated something more than military training. It was typically American.

In times of peace we are intent on playing the game, whatever game it may be, whether baseball or business, politics or dollar chasing. Let the bugle call sound, however—the thrilling note indicating that the country is in danger—and every true American drops the game that instant and faces the flag. That has been the inspiring chronicle of every crisis from the Revolution to the Spanish war. We are a peaceful people so long as we are

Where Frenchwomen Differ From Those of This Country

By ANDRE DE FOUQUIERES, French Author and Authority on Dress

FOR A Frenchwoman life really BEGINS WITH HER MARRIAGE. With us, in order that the young girl shall appear well brought up, she is surrounded with a thousand despotie restraints, which make her youth a sort of gilded imprisonment. She is IMPATIENT FOR HER DELIVERANCE.

IN AMERICA IT IS QUITE DIFFERENT. THE YOUNG GIRL IS BY NO MEANS IN A HURRY TO FIND A HUSBAND, SINCE MARRIAGE MEANS FOR HER THE END OF THE GREATEST FREEDOM. NOT THAT MARRIAGE DIMINISHES HER INDEPENDENCE, BUT BECAUSE, STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM, IT BINDS HER TO A GREATER RESERVE.

ENGAGEMENTS ARE LONG, and there isn't the slightest gossip if a girl goes about with her fiancé. In spite of this liberty and the fact that the toilets of young girls and of young married women are quite the same no one dreams of criticising these emancipated "misses," who have their GOOD TIME BEFORE ASSUMING THE CARE OF A HOUSEHOLD.

It is a mistake to suppose that the question of money plays an important part in American marriages. THE LOVE MATCH IS NOT RARE. Indeed, I should say it is more common there than with us.

permitted to be peaceful, but when the nation's honor, the cause of liberty or the interests of humanity demand every peaceful implement is dropped and every hand comes to salute.

Not alone at the call of war is the national spirit needed. It is equally essential in the commonplace days, when nothing more exciting than the tariff or the currency question is before us.

We are working out on this continent the scheme of democracy for the whole world. It is a high task to which we have been called. Until we have the same feeling in approaching the most commonplace public questions that the soldiers on the ball field had when they dropped their hats to salute the colors we are not up to the mark to carry out this mission and to make of this nation one after the vision of a Washington or a Lincoln.

The most potent force in the world is an ideal. It is our mission to make Americanism the political ideal that will move the world.

Queer.

"I don't believe Johnny's teacher is quite right in her mind," said Mrs. Lapsling. "When he came home from school yesterday he told me he came across the word penitentiary and asked her how to pronounce it, and she said he must place the accent on his Aunt Penitentiary. Did you ever hear anything as crazy as that?"—Chicago Tribune.
