Jack Ferguson, the Human Submarine, Nearly a Hero

Photos by American Press Association.

JACK FERGUSON, the human submarine, came pretty near becoming a hero. As it was, he got on the first page of some of the newspapers in and near New York. But as it turned out Jack was glad to be remained only a near hero. You see, it was this way: Jack, who is a diver, went down in the Central park reservoir, New York, to see what was wrong with one of the gates, which had been out of order for the last sixteen years and which somebody in official life decided at last needed repairing. He came up in a hurry and reported that the rush of water through the gate was so great that his life was in danger. Then the story of the diver who had been caught in a reservoir at Boonton, N. J., in the same way and had lived for two days was recalled. Despite this, Jack went down a second time, taking precautions to guard himself against the rush of water. He was successful. He found that the gate was simply jammed, and he came up without trouble.

cases which would be apt to cripple, in one way or another, children born of the marriage.

The trouble with those who complain of the new Oregon law is that they view it only as an embarrassment to the contracting parties of a marriage, and not as a safeguard to children unborn. Probably the spreading of the knowledge of social and moral hygiene among the public will result in a different feeling towards the measure and its provisions; for the average American, when once aroused to the menace of moral uncleanness, will not want to have his own sins, or the sins of his neighbor, passed down to the next generation. This subject is one that a false modesty has too long kept out of the public mind. Real modesty does not consist of forcing suffering upon those who are yet to come into the world.

PUBLIC SPIRIT. Are we not, then, called upon by the highest duties to our country, to its free institutions, to posterity and to the world to rise above all local prejudices and personal partialities, to discard all collateral questions, to disregard every subordinate point, and, in a genuine spirit of compromise and concession, to unite heart and hand to preserve for ourselves the blessings of free government, wisely, honestly and faithfully administered, and, as we received them from our fathers, to transmit them to our children? Should we not subject ourselves to eternal reproach if we permitted our differences about mere men to bring defeat and disaster upon our cause? Our principles are imperishable, but men have a fleeting existence and are themselves liable to change and corruption during its brief continuance.—Henry Clay.

Slighted Johnson. Men who become suddenly rich should be judged leniently. They have many temptations from which the rest of us are, happily, delivered. Mr. Johnson, a man of this class, was desirous to be known as of a literary turn of mind, and to that end proceeded to purchase a library. One of his purchases was an old dictionary, which, being somewhat out of repair, was sent to the binder. When it was returned to the purchaser he found printed on its back the words, "Johnson's Dictionary." The slight threw him into a furious passion, and he demanded of the messenger: "Why didn't he put the full name on 'John Johnson's Dictionary'?"

CLACKAMAS It is interesting to STILL LEADS note that the first raspberries of the season to appear in Portland came from a ranch immediately adjacent to Oregon City. It is still fresh within the memory of all that the biggest berries grown in Oregon this year came from a Clackamas ranch. It is also well to recall that the largest salmon are caught at the falls of the Willamette, and that the greatest outlook for diversified farm products in the state this year is also a Clackamas county possession. Forecasts which are reliable, and which have been prepared for the state horticulture department, are to the effect that Clackamas county will grow more things, and more kinds of things this year, than any other division in Oregon.

Looking back a year or so, it is recalled that of all the Oregon counties, Clackamas made the best display at the great Middle States land shows. And it was a display that disappointed nobody who came here to see if the county really could and did produce the things placed on exhibition. In other words, Clackamas county told the truth about herself, and as a result she has profited largely and in many ways.

Clackamas county may not be very expert at blowing her own horn. She may lack a complicated press bureau that sends out to all the rest of the country startling boost literature which is more remarkable than it is truthful. She may not break into print every time a box of apples are sent away; and she may not ship her roses to fancy balls in New York just for the sake of the advertisement. But nevertheless she does things and she is getting settlers, and is receiving her share of the sort of publicity that counts.

This county is truly exceptionally well favored in many ways. It embraces a variety of land and a variety of climates. It contains lowland and highlands, and in each section it raises a special kind of crops exceptionally well. Its timber resources are tremendous, and its agricultural possibilities are just beginning to be appreciated. It is a garden spot with a superb climate, and it is such a place as Nature must have had in mind when she was making an ideal homestead for a progressive people. In short Clackamas county has so much that speaks for itself that she doesn't have to get up and yell to attract attention. People who want the best of everything just naturally come here and get it—and that it at it should be.

A MATTER OF DIFFERENCE. Next month there is to be held a conference in this city upon social and moral hygiene. Coming just at this time, the subject will probably receive considerable attention mainly because the becoming effective of a law passed by the last legislature has brought it very much to the front. This law, which provides that no marriage license shall be issued until the man obtain proof of a clean bill of health, has roused the state press as have but few other enactments of the solons. Some papers praise it strongly, others are not at all enlisted in its behalf. Among these latter may be mentioned The Oregonian, which sees in the measure little else than "opportunity for physicians and justices of the peace to graft."

The stand of The Oregonian and others opposed to the law is somewhat extraordinary. The Enterprise has not observed that doctors, in general, were in the habit of grafting when opportunity offered; or has it noted any great preponderance of justices of the peace similarly inclined. While it is true that the law may have defects, it is also true that the measure was framed to abate a condition which is fast becoming perilous—not in Oregon particularly, but everywhere. Washington some years ago enacted an even more strict law, and later modified it to some extent at the earnest behest of its citizens; but Washington still requires that both applicants for a marriage license must make affidavit that they are free from consumption or worse diseases.

Majority of American Audiences Are Easily Deceived

By Professor M. V. O'SHEA, University of Wisconsin

A NATION CANNOT PROSPER WHEN THE MAJORITY OF ITS PEOPLE ARE SO EASILY DECEIVED AS OUR AMERICAN AUDIENCES ARE. THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE PARTICULARLY PRONE TO BELIEVE MYSTICAL EXPLANATIONS OF EVERY DAY PHENOMENA.

There are dozens of new pseudo sciences established every year in America. A considerable proportion of the vaudeville shows are based on "mysteries" of one sort or another. Through special investigations it has been found that a large number of men and women in this country MAKE THEIR LIVING BY PLAYING ON THE CREDULITIES OF THE PEOPLE. There are regular schools that teach people these "mysteries," many of which have to do with "mind reading" or with so called "superhuman" bodily powers. The average American audience is so READY TO LOOK FOR SUPERNATURAL EXPLANATIONS that they cannot detect what is actually occurring when a man or woman is "reading the minds" of subjects. There is one remedy for this deplorable attitude of mind, and that is TRAINING IN SCIENTIFIC METHODS, IN THE COMMON SCHOOLS. American schools in many places are behind those in one or two of the foreign countries in giving children training in the appreciation of natural law.

"THIS IS MY 51ST BIRTHDAY"

Earl of Powis

George Charles Herbert, fourth Earl of Powis, was born June 24th, 1862. He is descended from the famous Lord Clive, the hero of the battle of Plassey and one of the founders of the British empire in India. The present Earl was educated at Eton and Cambridge. He succeeded to his title on the death of his uncle in 1891. The Countess of Powis is generally considered one of the most beautiful women of the English nobility. Lord and Lady Powis are particularly rich in charming and delightful residences. They have three country places and a magnificent town house in Berkeley Square, London.
