

BURNED TREASURE DISCOVERED HERE

Theories have been advanced. The one regarded as the most plausible dates back to a story handed down to the pioneers of this section by a Catholic missionary priest who was transferred to this locality from one of the California missions when O. McLoughlin was alive and living here.

Old Tale Recalled. According to those who recall the story, the priest told Mr. McLoughlin that sometime before he (McLoughlin) came into the Oregon country that a wounded white man had come to his hut and appealed for shelter from the Indians. A few days later this man died, and on his deathbed confessed to the priest that he had robbed a Spaniard's house in California, and had come overland to the north with the loot. The proceeds of the robbery, he said, he had buried.

In speaking of the finding of the treasure, Mr. Busch says that when he formerly lived on the property he noticed that for several years on a certain day each spring, a number of Indians used to come to his land and dig around, apparently trying to locate something. When questioned, the Indians said they were "digging for gold." They only spent one day on the place, and then went away. He thought that possibly these Indians had heard of the wounding of the thief, and that those who told them had seen the wounded man bury his loot.

WEST LINN TAKES MILLSBURG'S PLACE

Millsburg, the prospective city on the west side of the Willamette river, changed its name Friday evening to West Linn, thereby doing away with a title that was neither euphonious or distinctive, and adopting in its new name a memory of the old pioneer town of Linn City which once stood upon its site. The change was decided upon at a stormy meeting in the rooms of the Oregon City Commercial club, at which there were some 90 residents of the prospective town in attendance.

After much discussion the name of West Linn was officially adopted. Aside from the historical interest of the new name, it was remarked that it might lead to an early annexation to Oregon City, just through association for Mayor Jones, of Oregon City, has "Linn" for his given name, this being presented to him at his christening in honor of the pioneer town in which his parents were interested.

After the new name had been finally accepted, its adoption was made the unanimous voice of the meeting. Incorporation papers were then executed, it being determined to change the boundaries once again, this time eliminating Magoon's Park, and making the border of that part of the new city coincide with the present borders of Bolton. It was also determined to extend the boundaries to the middle of the Willamette river from a point opposite the termination of Willamette's city limits to the projection of the Bolton line into the river.

The incorporation papers will be presented to the county court for approval at the next term, which will be on July 2; and soon after that date the city of West Linn hopes to come into being and get itself upon the map.

PURE BULL RUN WATER POSSIBLE

Bull Run water by gravity from Gray's Crossing to the present city pumping station, and that from there the present pipe lines can be used to carry this water up on the hill. The pressure of the Bull Run water would be sufficient to supply the lower part of the city, and to serve the fire hydrants in the downtown portion.

B. T. McElain, who is one of those who have made inquiries in the matter, points out that now Bull Run water by gravity, is run through Portland, and up the west bank of the Willamette river almost to Oswego, where it is delivered with sufficient pressure for all ordinary uses. This being the case, Mr. McElain says that there is no doubt but that the water can be delivered from Gray's Crossing to Oregon City at a good working pressure. The utilization of the present pumping plant for high level service will entail no extra expense upon the city, and the present filtration plant can be held for emergency that might arise should the pipe line break.

It is pointed out that the expense of building a pipe-line from Gray's na. Byd ranch to Portland, Oregon, crossing to Oregon City will be no more than the cost of the pipe line from Gray's Crossing to Portland, Oregon, and the cost of the pipe line from Gray's Crossing to Portland, Oregon, and the cost of the pipe line from Gray's Crossing to Portland, Oregon.

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY INTERESTING ITEMS FROM ALL PARTS OF CLACKAMAS COUNTY

MACKSBURG.

An advance in vegetation that would seem fabulous to any but witnesses of it, was the result of the warm, moist atmosphere that prevailed on the three longest days of the year, viz: June 20, 21 and 22. Especially was this noticeable in the new experimental corn, received by all the ranchmen, who wrote for it. Corn could not look more promising than does this today. We shall be glad to welcome the visitor from the O. W. R. & N. Co., when he comes to see what has been done with the seed, so generously distributed by them, unless attacked by some of those lurking foes of the grain field, weavers, gray diggers or field mice, there is every reason to hope that Macksburg may be able to send a creditable exhibit to the State Corn Show to be held at Pendleton the coming fall.

The annual meeting of the Macksburg school district was held in the school house June 16. Mr. Stevens was elected district clerk, as successor to Mr. Charles Kraxberger and Mr. Kesling was chosen director to take the place vacated by William Barth. Mrs. Seward is staying in Mullino with her daughter, Mrs. Bert Wallace, whose home was gladdened last week by the arrival of a little son. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace were residents of Macksburg before their marriage, and were so highly esteemed in the high school as well as elsewhere that Macksburg still claims them as her own, and considers it fitting that any important event in their family should be regarded as Macksburg news.

We learn with pleasure, that the new public library, formally opened last week in Oregon City, will be free to all residents of Clackamas County. As renewal of books may be made by telephone it would seem that few Clackamas County readers need be deprived of this valuable privilege. This will be appreciated as a favor that will, very acceptably, tide us over to the time when we shall have a public library of our own.

The Man Who Put the E's in FEET

Look for This Trade-Mark Picture on the Label when buying ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE. The Antiseptic Powder for Tender, Aching Feet. Sold everywhere. ALLEN S. OLMSTED, Le Roy, N. Y.

The International Correspondence Schools are NOT closed in summer. All of our truly ambitious students who think more about the increased salaries their studies will qualify them to earn, than of the imaginary discomforts of summer study--devote a part of each week to their studies all summer.

Why? Because he will only study in cold weather punishes himself. Because he takes two or three times as long in preparing himself to earn more money, as the student who studies from a half hour to an hour per day all the year round. We have enough letters on file to make several very large books, the general purport of which is: "Oh, if I had only taken up that Course when I first wrote you about it! I have just missed a fine position, at largely increased wages, because I wasn't prepared to fill it. I lacked just the special knowledge I could have had from the Course." The writers of those letters never have to be coaxed to study in summer NOW. They knew what delay costs. Why not profit by THEIR experience, instead of taking the same bitter medicine yourself?

Persons that suffer most from the heat are those that have nothing else to occupy their thoughts. A man who is interested in his studies doesn't know how hot it is. He has no time to fret about the weather. He is looking ahead a few months to the time when he can demand advancement in position and salary, because his special education will have made his services of more value to his employer. It is no harder to read an Instruction Paper in summer than to read a newspaper. How many summer days are hot enough to prevent you from reading the daily news?

The man who promises himself that he will enroll next fall is only trying to deceive his conscience. He may not know it, but he is weakening his will-power, and it is will-power--power to do what one knows he must do to succeed--that makes the man. A man of weak will--one who will study some day, but not now--will always be down in the world; always in "hard luck," frequently out of work, and when employed, it will always be at low wages. He knows that a knowledge of certain subjects will fit him to earn more; yet he stills his conscience by promising to start later. Such a man isn't truly ambitious. He is one of the kind that always does the hard, menial work, and draws small pay all his life. Are YOU one of that kind. Are YOU truly ambitious to earn more and make something of yourself? If you won't study in summer you are NOT. If you prefer to fret about hot weather, rather than forget it by studying, you are NOT.

The dangerous habit of "putting off" has ruined the lives of more promising young men than drunkenness. It is so easy to say "Yes, it's what I need; I'll start tomorrow--next week--some other time." The difference between the man that makes a failure of life and the man that succeeds is simply this: The failure is going to begin "tomorrow"; the success begins today.

The men who "get there" are those that study for self-improvement in summer, or whenever they have time. They don't let the weather keep them in inferior positions, at small wages. They don't make excuses to themselves when they ought to be up and doing. They don't work for wages barely enough to keep soul and body together either.

Which Kind of a Man Are You?
