FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

The Willamette Election.
 WILLAMETTE, June 30.—(Editor of the Enterprise)—Will you allow a Willamette voter to say a few words through your paper in explanation of the attempt of the Willamette people to extend the corporate limits of their town to include that part of the mill property which already belongs to their school districts; but which some of the greedy west sliders are trying to take away?

Some years ago when the Willamette school district (No. 105) was organized out of part of the West Side district (No. 34) the boundaries were decided by a vote of the whole district and the Willamette district was freely given that portion of the mills and Electric Co.'s property (about 2-5) which it has retained to the present time. This division has always been considered fair and there has never been any contention on the matter until the West Side decided to incorporate and some more greedy than others, thought they saw a chance to enrich their own district at the expense of Willamette by taking all the mills and the Electric Co.'s plant into the new incorporation.

The people of the Willamette district have labored hard to build up a good school, and as the mill property which the west sliders proposed to take from them, represented about 75 per cent of the valuation of their district which would be practically ruined if this property was lost to it, it was plainly up to people of the district to make an effort to hold this property.

The only feasible plan, that could be learned of by consulting the best authorities, was for the town of Willamette to extend the incorporation so as to include the mill property in question; thus preventing the west side from incorporating it in their territory, and tying it to the Willamette district for good. In order to take this mill property into Willamette it was necessary to include other property lying between the present city limits and the mills and which includes about 49 voters. At the first meetings held in Willamette to discuss the matter, these outside voters were pretty well represented and those present were almost unanimous in expressing a desire to come into Willamette; thereby preserving their school district intact. For this reason, at first, there seemed to be no doubt of the success of the undertaking and an election was ordered held for the purpose of annexing the territory in question.

Immediately a strong opposition sprang up, partly from the west side, where it was expected, but more from the inside and from people who it was naturally expected would be friendly to Willamette. People who own no property in the district, who have never paid more than a small personal property tax in the district, and who this year pay none at all.

Part of the voters in the disputed district were persuaded to believe that it would be more to their interest to help improve the west side property which lies some two or three miles distant, than to help improve Willamette which joins their own property, and of which they have always been considered a part.

It was also argued, as stated in the Morning Enterprise of the 29th inst., that these property owners would have to "bear a share of the burdens for past improvement in Willamette." Now there are no burdens for past improvements in Willamette to be born by any one.

The only debts Willamette owes are for a small chemical fire engine and some minor bills for which there is plenty of money in the treasurers hands to pay and which will no doubt be all settled at the next meeting of the council.

There is a good deal more to be said in this matter, but these are the main facts, and as I do not wish to take up too much of your space, I will close for this time.

ONE WHO BELIEVES IN FAIR PLAY.

both rather a shock Monday morning when the opening offerings of the summer fruit were put on display. Too much rain, or something else, had spoiled most of the berries, and on many markets they were withdrawn soon after opening time.

Cantaloupes, currants, watermelon, cherries and some peaches, however, were offered, and helped make up for the slump in berries. Prices on all of these varieties of fruit are reasonable, considering the early time of the season, and offerings are good and getting better daily. Watermelon was retailed at from 3 cents a pound up, cantaloupe found ready sale at three and four for two-bits, which peaches came from both California and Oregon.

Eggs continue to be quoted at from 18 cents up, wholesale, and are retailed at from 23 to 25 cents a dozen. Portland seems much excited over eggs, but is not moving the market one way or the other.

Fresh vegetables continue plentiful, and prices are easy.
