GLADSTONE FORD IS TREACHEROUS

Lad, Confused, Gives Tug Upon Reins
That Sends Horses Back Into Current That Carries
Them to Death

Caught in the swiftly rushing waters of the Clackamas river early this afternoon, and fighting desperately to save the life of his boy and two valuable horses, J. P. Murphy, of Gladstone, succeeded in rescuing his son from the current of the stream, only to have the lad, in his confusion, pull hard on the reins and send the nearly exhausted horses back once again into the river, where after a hard struggle they were overcome and drowned.

Murphy, who is well known throughout Gladstone and Oregon City, was hauling gravel from the new municipal pit, at Gladstone. He was returning to the pit after having successfully forded the swift river with several loads, when one of his horses stepped off the narrow ridge that is utilized as a ford, and lurching into deep water, drew the other horse and wagon with him. Murphy's little son, who was riding in the body of the wagon, was thrown over the upstream side of the vehicle, and was carried by the current under the body of the wagon.

Realizing his double peril, Murphy dropped the lines and left the horses to fight their own way to land, while he tore at the bed of the wagon to release his son. Struggling in mid-stream, and balancing himself on the sides of the wildly pitching vehicle, while the horses ahead were lashing the water to foam in their efforts to breast the current, Murphy succeeded in wrenching loose one head-board of the heavy wagon, and dragged his son's limp form through the opening. Then, exhausted with his fight, he leaned against the seat, making a feeble effort to recover the reins.

The horses, meanwhile, had made their way to shallow water, and were just pulling out of the river when the boy, coming back to consciousness and realizing his father's desire to

NATIONAL HOLIDAY

MILITIA UNITS WILL TAKE PART

All Day Celebration to Be Enjoyed by Citizen Soldiers and Friends
Will Include Races and Field Dinner

People who cannot enjoy the Fourth of July without plenty of noise are invited to go to Clackamas on the nation's birthday, and are promised all the varieties of sound that they desire. The Third Infantry, Battery A, Field Artillery and the Eighth Company Coast Artillery, assisted by the Ambulance Corps, will provide the noise and the excitement; the same being a part of a sham battle that is to be held as a patriotic spectacle at the state rifle range grounds. Aside from this there will be races, drills and contests, in which the military flavor will predominate, and which will show off uniforms, flashing sabres and gleaming muskets to perfection.

That there will be a crowd on hand goes without saying, for practically all the militia in the lower Willamette valley, including the Portland companies, will turn out, and will participate in the battle. Special trains will be run from Portland over the Southern Pacific, and preparations have been made to care for a crowd that will break all former records at the rifle range. A special fare has been secured for the day, and trains will leave at convenient intervals.

Major Loran A. Dowman, of the Third Infantry, will referee the sham battle; while in the other contests of the day the officials will be as follows: Judges—Captain Hiram U. Welch, Battery A, and Captain George H. Schumacher, Third Infantry.

Time keepers—First Lieutenant Harry O. Hulse, Third Infantry, and Second Lieutenant Eugene C. Libby, Third Infantry.

Clerk of the Course—First Lieutenant Richard W. Holman, Adjutant Second Battalion, Third Infantry.

The full program for the day will be as follows:

10:30 a. m.—Sham battle, Third Infantry, Battery A, Field Artillery.

Railroad Men All Over Country Watch Outcome Of Engineer Dougherty's Story of Smashup.

Railroad men all over the United States, both officials and employees, watched with vital interest the progress of the coroner's inquest into the fatal wreck on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at Stamford Conn., where six were killed and nearly a score injured. The main feature of the inquiry was whether Charles J. Dougherty, engineer of the locomotive which crashed into the first section of the Boston to New York express was telling the truth or not. He had run the train only three times and had reported the engine's air brakes "in good." The railroad attorneys attempted to discredit the man's story and to lay all the blame upon his young shoulders. Dougherty is here shown before the coroner pointing out in the roundhouse record book the report he wrote after his first run on the engine. It read "Brakes in good."

PIONEER BARN REPORTED FILTHY

Live Wires Wind Up Activities for Season at Patriotic Luncheon and Elect Officers for Next Year

The Live Wires of the Oregon City Commercial club, meeting for the last time before the summer holiday, Monday indulged in a patriotic luncheon, heard a favorable report from the civic improvement committee, showing that citizens of the city are making a general effort to comply with the provisions of the "barn ordinance," elected officers for the ensuing year, and then adjourned. There were about 35 present at the meeting, and all sat down to tables decorated in red, white and blue; while in the absence of fireworks, soda crackers were served with the soup.

New officers for the coming year are as follows: L. Adams, Main Trunk Line; Dr. L. A. Morris, Sub-Trunk; Dr. Clyde Mount, Transmission Wire; A. C. Howland, Guy Wire; W. S. U'Ren, Feed Wire. Practically all the standing committees reported progress, and F. J. Toozie reviewed the water situation.

Earl Cummins, representing the Oregon Social Hygiene society, made a brief talk, and outlined the work of the organization, telling what he hoped to see done in Oregon City, and asked the Live Wires for their support.

Dr. van Brink, chairman of the civic improvement committee, submitted his report, dealing with sanitary conditions in the city's barns. The report follows:

"Your committee wishes to report on Monday evening, together with the police and health committee, an inspection of the barns in the downtown district was made. The results found were most satisfactory. In five out of six commercial barns, with minor corrections, things were found in excellent shape, the barns being clean and well ordered. The absence of the familiar manure piles was ex-

MURDER TRIED AT HILLSDALE

This Schneider, a farmer of Hillsdale, in the Tualatin valley, Tuesday afternoon shot and probably fatally wounded his former wife, Mrs. Louise Schneider, who obtained a divorce from him last week. Then he turned the revolver he had used upon himself, putting three shots into his abdomen. Both people were hurried to the Good Samaritan hospital in Portland in an automobile ambulance, and physicians have but slight hopes for their recovery. Schneider is 59 years old, and his former wife is 40.

According to accounts of the tragedy, Mrs. Schneider went to her former home to see the condition of the place, and to make arrangements with her former husband for some sort of a financial settlement. The interview led to an altercation, and Schneider drew a small calibre revolver and started firing at the woman, striking her twice in the breast. After she had fallen he turned the gun upon himself.

There are six children living, and they have been taken in charge by neighbors.

- BOOK OF TICKETS
IS WORTH GETTING
- Chautauqua patrons are gobbling up the "book" tickets in great fashion. The tickets were placed on sale yesterday at the Bank of Oregon City, and at the office of the P. R. L. & P. First and Alder streets, Portland, and both places report an excellent first day sale.
- The "book" plan was adopted a year ago and met with popular approval immediately. The system is a simple one, and results in a cash saving of fifty cents to every season ticket purchaser. The purchaser secures the names of ten who plan to attend Chautauqua, including himself, takes the names and $2.00 from each, and is given in exchange a book of 10 season tickets. As the individual season ticket is $2.50, the saving of 20 percent to each purchaser is quite an item.
- Last year hundreds of season tickets were sold in this fashion, and during the week preceding Chautauqua the "book" collectors were busy on every corner. The book offer is only good during the present week, so it is a safe prediction that there will be some lively bustling among the book-makers during the next three days. Start a book today.
- Mothers' Pensions in Jersey
TRENTON, N. J., July 1.—County clerks throughout New Jersey report numerous applications for widows' pensions under the new state law which became operative today. Under the provisions of the law a pension of $9 a month is to be paid to widows with one child under the age of 16 years. Fourteen dollars a month will be allowed for two children under 16, with $4 a month for each additional child under that age.

"DISTRICT RIDING" HAS ITS DRAWBACKS

Trials and tribulations of a "district rider" as many, as are also his joys and accomplishments. During the recent rainy spell the Rev. E. A. Smith, who is probably more widely known in the county than any other minister, made a trip into some of the communities removed from the better roads, and had adventures. After going as far as he could in a wagon, he abandoned this means of locomotion, and took to horseback.

"A friend loaned me a horse," said the district rider, in telling of it. "It was a short horse, and merely served to keep my toes out of the mud. Also it was one of these horses that would swell up when one tried to tighten the saddle girth, and which at other times would collapse like an accordion. We slipped along quite a way, and finally the steed swelled sufficiently to break the cinch-strap completely, and then we walked. When I got to my destination, I was sore indeed, and also sore in body. In fact I was so sore that I felt like calling down blessings upon that horse and the friend who loaned him to me. Yet probably if I had not been given the horse I would never gotten anywhere, so I just charged it up to experience. But you can say for me, that the roads are not in good shape."
