WATER FLOWING WITH STEADY VOLUME

According to Councilman Tooze, chairman of the special water committee of the city council, the outlook for a satisfactory and adequate supply of water from well on the Englebrecht tract, northeast of the city limits, is most excellent. Wednesday Mr. Tooze reported as follows:

"Indications are that we will be able to develop a flow of 500 agallons of water per minute from wells on the Englebrecht property. I believe that this is good water, as it comes from a deep vein of water-bearing gravel

ANCHOR PUZZLE THOUGHT SOLVED

That the anchor recently recovered from the bed of the Willamette river was probably either from the ship Convoy or the brig Owyhee, both of which are known to have anchored close to the spot in the river in 1829, is the opinion of Mrs. Eva Dye, historian and writer of note, who has been investigating records of early river shipping in an effort to fix the identity of the relic. In regard to the matter, Mrs. Dye's Wednesday said:

"I have probably solved the problem of the anchor recently dredged from the sands here at the river bend. In 1829 the brig Owyhee, Captain Dominis, and the brig Convoy, Captain Thompson, both American ships from Boston entered the Columbia and commenced trading with the Indians for skins and peltries. In nine months Captain Dominis secured a cargo valued at $96,000. Both captains ventured up the Willamette. Oregon histories mention that the Convoy was attacked, but in Honolulu I obtained the following:

"Captain Dominis moored at the rapids about a mile below the falls in 12 feet of water in 1829. Captain Dominis says: 'I was daily assailed with the reports that the Indians intended attacking me when my vessel was lying at the falls of Willamette rapids.'

"The principal chief of the Willamettes told Dr. McLoughlin he was going to cut off Dominis, but the doctor forbade it. The Indians were taught that no vessel but the company's ships were allowed to trade in the river.

"This Captain Dominis settled in Honolulu, and brought his Boston wife there. In 1846 the Captain was lost while on a voyage to China to obtain furniture for the magnificent new home he was building, now known as Washington Palace, the home of Queen Liliuokalani. The son of Dominis married the Princess Liliuokalani and was governor of Oahu when she was queen.

"If 'Convoy' is not found upon the anchor, 'Owyhee' may be, as Captain Dominis distinctly states that he was anchored at that place. The two ships kept together for safety, and were both anchored at Clackamas Rapids."

HOT WAVE HITS ASSEMBLY PLAN

CHAUTAQUA FEATURE, CAUGHT IN EASTERN TORRIDITY, LOSES PERFORMERS

OPENING DAY PROGRAM IS CHANGED

Pamahasika Pets Succumb, And Will Not Appear at Gladstone to Please Little Tots—Substitute Booked

"Cancel all coast engagements at once; best animals have died from heat. 'PAMAHASIKA.'"

An eleventh hour change in the Chautauqua program has been necessitated by a telegram from Mr. Pamahasika, at Keosauqua, Iowa, canceling his engagement. Mr. Pamahasika and his pets ran into the intense heat wave of the Middle West last week, with the result that several of his best performing animals have died. This unfortunate news is regretted by the management, but the only one else, as it had looked forward in presenting Pamahasika for a most enjoyable evening, especially for the little folks. The telegram was received Wednesday afternoon, and Secretary Cross immediately tried to secure a substitute from among the other Oregon Chautauquas, but found all bookings complete, and was unable to secure any attraction to replace Pamahasika.

This unavoidable cancellation has necessitated a change in the program of the opening day, and the Ladies' Concert Band of Portland came bravely to the rescue. The ladies will give their opening concert in the morning at 10:30, while folks are completing their camp arrangements, and erecting their tents. In the main auditorium the summer classes will be organized and announcements of instructors will be made.

Then at 2:30 the official opening of Chautauqua will take place, thus giving the large crowd of Oregon City folks who could not attend the morning program, a chance to witness the opening of the 1913 Chautauqua. Dr. T. B. Ford will deliver the invocation, and the address of the afternoon will then be given by Dr. Fletcher Homan, president of Willamette University, and also president of the Chautauqua. Dr. Homan is a delightful speaker and one of the best known men in the state.

This will be followed by a responsive address by Hon. C. B. Moores of Portland. Mr. Moores, too, has a delightful way of driving his conclusions home, and is quite popular with Chautauqua audiences.

Then will come the mighty contest for the baseball supremacy of Oregon City. Promptly at 3:30 Al Price's Giants and B. T. McBain's Commercial Club Hopefuls will open the Chautauqua series, and Oregon City will turn out en masse to see the struggle.

At 7:30 will come another big concert by the Ladies' Concert Band, as a prelude to the first appearance of the Sierra Quartette, who will fill the evening engagement cancelled by Pamahasika. This, the directors, feel will be the best solution of an irritating breach of contract, which no one can be blamed, unless it be the weather man who has been punishing the Easterners during the past two weeks.

COUNCIL SESSION IS BUSY ONE

After its recent rather stormy sessions the city council held a love-feast Wednesday evening, and moved with surprising accord through a long list of routine matters, nothing coming up to ruffle its passive surface until near the close, when the request from a property owner for a concrete sidewalk threatened for a moment to raise a ruction. This was quickly railroaded out of harm's way, however, and the session closed in the same sort of calm as that in which it opened.

Permission was granted to William Dutcher to operate a saloon in the rear of the proposed Weinhard building as an opening move. This being granted, Councilman Tooze rose to ask whether or not horse-traders who came into the city to ride themselves of steeds should be classed as itinerant merchants. Messrs. Tooze, Albright and Holman were appointed a special committee to look into this matter and prepare an ordinance if they thought it necessary.

City Engineer Noble submitted a proposed grade for Harrison street, between Ninth and Twelfth, and it was placed on file. The police and health committee reported all barns in the city save that of the Pioneer company, to be in good shape, and patted itself on the back for passing the barn ordinance—which had been slated for repeal at this session. Nobody emitted a peep about rescinding the measure.

Catatract Hose Company No. 2, extended a formal invitation to the mayor and city council to be present at a banquet next week, and the invitation was accepted unanimously and with thanks.

Came next the passing of ordinances. The first one up, relating to the employment of minors in cigar stands adjacent to saloons, was referred to Councilmen Tooze, Albright and Metzner for revision, after it was shown that it would work a hardship upon a blind man. Discussion of this measure almost brought on conflict between Messrs. Tooze and Albright, over the relative disadvantages of having minors hear saloon language and having them listen to Socialists orators on the street, but the appointment of the committee quieted matters down.

The ordinance making it a misdemeanor to buy liquor for a habitual drunkard was passed unanimously, as were ordinances establishing the grade on Davison, between Ninth and Sixteenth streets and one changing the grade of Center street, between Ninth and Tenth.

The ordinance providing for the purchase of the Jones rock crushing plant and its conversion into a municipal plant so that the price of street material might be regulated, brought Councilman Tooze to his feet with a jerk. He stated that the last delivery of a certain amount of rock from this plant had just been made, and that as had to that time no opportunity of looking into the cost of the work, and such other details as he thought the council ought to know about, and asked that final consideration of this ordinance be postponed one week. This matter is one of those things that has caused the council considerable un-

GETTYSBURG HIT BY FIERCE GALE

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 2.—A roaring storm swept down out of the Blue Ridge over the plateau of Gettysburg today, bringing needed relief to thousands of veterans in blue and gray, who have sweltered for four days in an atmosphere that would do credit to a fireless cooker, dangerous in a city of 50,000 old and weary men. For more than half an hour rain came pouring down on the sun-cracked and windswept encampment ground. It charged with violent thun- der over the ground that Pickett covered in '63. Its salvos of thunder were like the booming guns of Meade and Lee, and the thermometer dropped rapidly. Lightning cleared the air of its burden of humidity.
