Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

SUN FIELDS BOTHER JACKSON.

Naps' Great Batter Loses Battering Eye When Forced to Face Old Sel.

Joe Jackson of the Cleveland Naps is a wonderful hitter at home, but he always loses a lot of ground as soon as he is asked to play on eastern diamonds. But for his falling to hit up to his standard in the east Jackson would probably have led the league in hitting for the past two years.

Manager Birmingham has figured it out that the sun fields which Jackson has been forced to play in in the east have had a bad effect on his eyes. He proposes to avoid this in the future, and on the recent eastern trip Jackson was shifted to those fields where the sun does not interfere with him in the hope that he will be able to keep up his terrific gait with the stick on the road. When Jackson stops hitting the Naps will cease to be a real ball team.

FRUIT IS QUOTED HIGH FOR SEASON

Though this is supposed to be the best week of the cherry season, prices are not such, so far, that any great amount of buying is being done. With cherries retailing at two pounds for 15 cents, as an average, and with wholesale prices ranging from 5 to 8 cents, there will be but little trading. However, dealers expect lower prices to prevail the latter part of the week, when the Columbia basin crop really gets on the move. Rain has hurt much of the fruit, and this is aiding in keeping the price up.

The fruit par excellence of the Northwest—North Yakima peaches—are breaking into the market now in considerable quantity. The early crop is not up to the standard of the later fruit, but is bringing 85 cents a box and is being eagerly sought.

Blackcaps are being quoted at from 10 to 12 cents a pound, raspberries are ranging from 75 cents to $1.25 a crate, the fancy stuff taking the top price. Loganberries are holding firm at $1.25 for the most part, though some local growers are cutting this price to get rid of ripe crop.

Watermelons are just at present one of the features of the market, being quoted at from $1.50 to $2.25 per hundred, making some of them lower than cantaloups. This unusual relative price for this time of the year is due to the scarcity of supply of other melons.

JEFFERSON'S LAST WORDS

He Explained the Influence of the Declaration of Independence.

NINE days before his death Jefferson was asked to write a sentiment for the forthcoming fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the day of jubilee on which, by a singular coincidence, he was destined to die.

He wrote: "The eyes of men are opened and opening to the rights of men. It has become clear that the masses of men are not born with saddles on their backs nor a favored few bootied and spurred ready to ride them legitimately by the grace of God."

Could Get Shoes From the Enemy.

One day in the middle of winter General Greene, passing a sentinel who was barefooted, said, "I fear, my good fellow, you suffer much from the severe cold." "Very much," was the reply. "But I do not complain. I know I should fare better if our general had the means of getting supplies. They say, however, that in a few days we shall have a fight, and then I shall take care to get a pair of shoes."

The First Anniversary.

The first anniversary of the Fourth of July was celebrated in every American town, hamlet and force or fleet that was able to do so with bonfires, illuminations, regular salutes and individual feux de joie. Oration, prayer and praise prepared the hearts of men for their generally decorous if somewhat noisy and varied demonstrations which made up the general holiday.

Solid Foods.

The importance of never allowing a "taste" of ordinary food while the baby is small can hardly be overestimated. Not so much as "a crust or bite" should be allowed before he is nine or ten months old, and even that is better postponed until after the first year is completed.

Increase in Height.

Although perfectly healthy children differ greatly and no fixed rule is possible, the average child increases in height an inch a month between the second and fourth months. After this, up to a year, a half inch a month.

Nourishing Dishes.

Small children who are much in the open and who take vigorous exercise, should have cheese dishes and a little meat, nut or broth for supper.

MISS BELLA DE COSTA GREEN.

When the late J. P. Morgan's librarian, Miss Bella De Costa Green, was asked her official title this pretty young guardian of rare editions smilingly replied:

"Well, my friends in England suggest that I be called 'keeper of printed books and manuscripts'; but, you know," she continued, "I have such long titles in London. I'm simply librarian."

Being a librarian with Mr. Morgan's unsurpassed treasures to care for is no small task. Miss Green was originally selected for the position while she was a student several years ago at Princeton, where she specialized in early printed books. Mr. Morgan's nephew, Julius Morgan, was associate librarian of the university, and through a noted collection of books purchased by him for his uncle—the files of the wonderful library which has descended to Mr. Morgan's son was begun.

Seeing Miss Green in her home, one would imagine that she was an unusually cultured society girl with decidedly intellectual tastes, evidenced by the bookcase which has a prominent place in the attractive living room. When she tells you at this late date she is only beginning to find time to read fiction and other "moderns" you naturally wonder whether it is a dancing tea or the opera that has interfered with her education.

But you soon learn that dusty tomes have interested this young woman of twenty-seven. Miss Green has been obliged to study in diverse fields and be ready at the slightest warning to scour the ends of the earth for a rare book and to identify almost at a glance stolen volumes.

Miss Green is deeply interested in the project of developing a university press at Harvard which will eventually compete with the Oxford Press in England. The establishment of such a press would make printing a serious art in this country, and already several bibliophiles from Harvard have been to New York to see Mr. Morgan's collection with this object in view.

A Community of Interest.

"Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Green seem to have little to do but talk across the fence."

"Yes, they have plenty to talk about. Mrs. Brown has just come out of the hospital and Mrs. Green thinks of going."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Tactful.

Dobson had just bought a new typewriting machine.

"Now, what color ribbon do you want for this machine?" asked the salesman.

"Oh, black, by all means," said Dobson. "You see, my typewriter is a widow."—Judge.

A DREAM COME TRUE.

The other day I rode around the Soldiers' home at the national capital. It is in some ways the most beautiful spot in the most beautiful city of the world. At that time I heard the story of the starting of the home. I do not vouch for the historic accuracy of all the details, but repeat the tale in substance as it was told to me.

Prior to the Mexican war General Winfield Scott urged congress to establish a soldiers' home in or near the city of Washington. For reasons of economy congress refused to act on his suggestion.

As a part of the spoils of the Mexican war General Scott brought back in the neighborhood of $100,000, which he deposited in the name of the Soldiers' home. He then said in effect to congress that it could now carry out his plan without cost to the nation and that the money which had been taken as the result of the war could be put to no better use than in creating a harbor of refuge for the nation's defenders. Today the Soldiers' home at Washington is the noblest monument to the memory of General Winfield Scott. It was the home of Lincoln during the civil war. It is intimately associated with the name of General John A. Logan, who was for some time its commandant.

My opinion of General Winfield Scott went up several points as a result of the visit to the Soldiers' home. That is a material embodiment of his ideal.

In some aspects it represents a greater victory than he won in either Canada or Mexico, for it will be a place of refuge for the regular soldiers probably to the remotest days of our history and will keep the name of its author as green as the trees and landscapes that are its ornaments.

Many men have noble dreams for the good of humanity that are never realized. All the more gratifying is it when we see one such vision incarnated and brought into material form. Washington dreamed the American nation and its capital city. Lincoln dreamed that nation reunited and free. General Scott, a typical soldier, dreamed a home for soldiers. All these dreams have come true and perhaps in a more splendid form than was foreseen by the men to whom were vouchsafed the visions.

We, too, may plan for better things in the days to be. We, too, may have our dreams for human good and happiness. Whether or not we can make them come true, they are yet helpful, for no worthy aspiration is ever wholly unfulfilled. No seed of a noble purpose ever falls into the soil of human consciousness that it does not grow and flower and bear fruit some time and somewhere.

Perfect Marriages Are Rare.

Only one perfect marriage in ten seems a pretty small average.

In view of the proposed law in Michigan requiring the issuance of medical certificates before marriage licenses are issued, a letter has been sent to the chairman of the committee, Cuno H. Randolph, by Fulton R. Gordon, in which he says:

"The proposed medical certificate is a step in the right direction, but only a step. Why stop there? Why not go to the very bottom of this the most important and far-reaching subject now before the American people—that is, the schooling and preparing of our loving sons and daughters, who trust us, to become both perfect fathers and mothers, to the end that their children, our descendants, will be of a higher standard both mentally and physically?"

"We teach our children the geography of the world. Then why not teach them the geography of their precious little bodies? Which is the more sensible, to have your sons and daughters happily married and not know so much about the exact location of the Kalama-zoo river or to be divorced on account of the lack of proper knowledge?"

"If you are successful in fathering this important legislation at the national capital it will no doubt be immediately taken up and adopted by all the states, and when this is done you will be the greatest benefactor to man kind in the history of the world."

"Statistics show about one divorce in ten marriages in the United States. This means that one in nine is within ninety days of a divorce and so on down to only one perfect marriage in ten."

The 'stuff Successful Men Are Made of

The International Correspondence Schools are NOT closed in summer. All of our truly ambitious students those who think more about the increased salaries their studies will qualify them to earn, than of the imaginary discomforts of summer study—devote a part of each week to their studies all summer.

A student who will only study in cold weather punishes himself. Why? Because he takes two or three times as long in preparing himself to earn more money, as the student who studies from a half hour to an hour per day all the year round. We have enough letters on file to make several very large books, the general purport of which is: "Oh, if I had only taken up that course when I first wrote you about it! I have just missed a fine position, at largely increased wages, because I wasn't prepared to fill it. I lacked just the special knowledge I could have had from the course." The writers of these letters never have to be coaxed to study in summer NOW. They knew what delay costs. Why not profit by THEIR experience, instead of taking the same bitter medicine yourself?

Persons that suffer most from the heat are those that have nothing else to occupy their thoughts. A man who is interested in his studies doesn't know how hot it is. He has no time to fret about the weather. He is looking ahead a few months to the time when he can demand advancement in position and salary, because his special education will have made his services of more value to his employer. It is no harder to read an Instruction Paper in summer than to read a newspaper. How many summer days are hot enough to prevent you from reading the daily news?

The man who promises himself that he will enroll next fall is only trying to deceive his conscience. He may not know it, but he is weakening his will-power, and it is will-power—power to do what one knows he must do to succeed—that makes the man. A man of weak will—one who will study some day, but not now—will always be down in the world; always in "hard luck," frequently out of work, and when employed, it will always be at low wages. He knows that a knowledge of certain subjects will fit him to earn more; yet he stills his conscience by promising to start later. Such a man isn't truly ambitious. He is one of the kind that always does the hard, mental work, and draws small pay all his life. Are YOU one of that kind. Are YOU truly ambitious to earn more and make something of yourself? If you want study in summer you are NOT. If you prefer to fret about hot weather, rather than forget it by studying, you are NOT.

The dangerous habit of "putting off" has ruined the lives of more promising young men than drunkenness. It is so easy to say "yes, it's what I need; I'll start tomorrow—next week—some other time." The difference between the man that makes a failure of life and the man that succeeds is simply this: The failure is going to begin "tomorrow"; the success begins today.

The men who "get there" are those that study for self-improvement in summer, or whenever they have time. They don't let the weather keep them in inferior positions, at small wages. They don't make excuses to themselves when they ought to be up and doing. They don't work for wages barely enough to keep soul and body together either.

HAIR TURNING GRAY OR FALLING? JUST MIX SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

It's Grandmother's Recipe for Dandruff and Restoring Color to Hair.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is tedious and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves, by mixing at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some drug-gists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's," which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and locks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.
