July 12 In American History.

1780—Count de Rochambeau, French ally of the Revolutionists, landed in Rhode Island with 6,000 soldiers, whom he brought from France to re-enforce Washington's army. 1863—At Falling Waters, Md., where General R. E. Lee's army had halted on its retreat from Gettysburg, a Federal pursuing column under General George G. Meade was repulsed in a preliminary attack. 1892—Cyrus W. Field, capitalist and ocean cable promoter, died; born 1819.

MAKING The Corvallis Gazette-Times 'EM GROW says that an Oregon rancher, writing to a friend back East and trying to give him some idea of the fertility of the soil, said they had to mow the grass off the dirt floor every day to find the baby; that one family near him had twins, with only one cradle, and the kid that had to sleep on the floor grew twice as fast as the other. He also wrote that where the soil is richest a man dare not stand on one foot for any length of time lest that leg, like that of a sidewall hog, become longer and so be likely to bother him in walking, unless he takes pains to even up every day.

This is pretty good for a booster with a sense of humor. However, if this rancher had lived in Clackamas county, instead of in Benton county, he might have boasted just as thoroughly and surprisingly, and yet not had to draw upon his imagination. Secretary Freytag, of the publicity department of the Commercial club, has in his little exhibition parlors some proof of the particular fertility of the kind of Oregon soil that is found in Clackamas county that quite comes up to the Corvallis story. Among other things he has a thistle stalk 17 1/2 feet and four inches high that attained its size without any care or cultivation, and which probably would have rivaled Jack-the-Giant-Killer's famous bean stalk if an unthinking rancher had not cut it off in its youth. It is indeed a remarkable sort that will coax nine feet of growth out of a thistle.

Then there are those famous strawberries that came four to a box, there are gooseberries that are as large as many Eastern plums, there are cherries that look like crab-apples, and there are rubarb stalks that look like fluted columns from the Parthenon.

American Suffragists Will Never Adopt Militant Methods

By Miss ELIZABETH FREEMAN, English Suffragette

AMERICAN WOMEN SUFFRAGISTS WILL NEVER ADOPT MILITANT METHODS. THEY WILL NOT HAVE TO, AND THEY WILL NOT WANT TO. THERE IS NO POSSIBILITY OF WOMEN GOING TO THAT EXTREME IN AMERICA.

Political procedure is so different. American women are allowed freely and without question to do things for which they arrest us in England.

American women have free access to the state and federal legislatures and are received with courtesy and open arms. They HOLD STREET MEETINGS UNMOLESTED and sell their papers as they like. For all these things Englishwomen were arrested long before there was any violence. It was those old arrests which helped lead up to the violence. Just think of it, we were even arrested for going to the house of commons.

AMERICA CALLS FOR ENTIRELY DIFFERENT METHODS. The spectacular thing which rouses the interest of the man in the street and which rouses the curiosity of the ignorant man and woman who have never heard of suffrage is the MOST EFFECTIVE MEANS of carrying on the propaganda in the United States.

Big meetings are not as good because it is only the converts or the nearly converted who will go to them. But as for violence and militant methods, the SITUATION DOES NOT CALL FOR THEM, and they would be both futile and impossible.

non. While it is true that these and other exhibits received some cultivation, they were not "milk fed" like the prize pumpkins of the county fairs of former days. They are selected from average crops, and are but little larger than the average run of things on Clackamas county farms. Things grow well in Clackamas county when they are given reasonably intelligent care, and people in the rest of the world are beginning to realize that the western counties of Oregon are just about as good places in which to farm as can be found.

It was only last week that an expert in the linen business dropped in to Mr. Freytag's wonder-parlors, and saw the finest and tallest flax he had ever beheld. That flax grew in Clackamas county, and may be the means of bringing to this county a new industry that will provide employment for hundreds. The better the growth of flax, the longer the fibres, and the longer the fibres, the more valuable is the plant for manufacture into linen. When this expert discovered Clackamas county flax, he put this county on the map in the linen world, and it is dollars to doughnuts that something will come of his visit. All of which goes to show that it pays to advertise. Boosting is a fine thing. Pride in one's home county is a fine thing. Boosting with a thread of humor in it, such as the Benton county writer upheaved from his cranium is very attractive—but the real stuff that cuts the ice is the sort of silent yet eloquent boosting that is being done day in and day out by the exhibit maintained of Clackamas county marvels by the Oregon City Commercial club.

THE MOVIES The moving pictures 'VE AGAIN are a joy to all of us. Some of us go to see them night after night because we find them entertaining, some discover in them an educational value, others do their traveling by the "film limited," and feel that they have seen just as much as the millionaires who go voyaging about in cabins de luxe and high powered benzine buggies. And out here in the West there are some of us who go to the flicker-shops because we know that we are going to laugh.

These guaranteed laughs are not expected from the comedies, however, but from the "Western pictures" that are made on the Jersey flats in the neighborhood of Newark and other centers of realism. It is only in such surroundings that there could be evolved the wonderful Indian pictures that are flashed on the screen for the edification of the movie patrons. It is true that there are Indian pictures and "Western dramas" that have the real Western favor, and that truthfully portray the cunning of the redman and the ingenuity of the pioneer. But they are in a class by themselves, and are not regarded as mirth producers.

But when the average Westerner sees a film in which any human who is enwrapped in a blanket is supposed to be an Indian, and any character in leather trousers and blue shirt is supposed to be a cowboy, there is occasion for smiling. And there are such films. They show the brave and dashing hero, pursued by savage Sioux wearing Navajo blankets made in Germany, suddenly pull up his horse, turn about leisurely, and shoot down the red fiends, and then go galloping calmly on again. They show Indians in a perfectly modern Maine-summer-resort canoe paddling first on one side and then on the other across the film; and they oftentimes show stretching across the background of the "wilderness" the cobweb lines of telephone and telegraph wires. Such films as these are a thing of joy to the modern West, and are just about as funny and mirth-provoking as the visiting Eastern actor who portrays the Western sheriff as a man with black whiskers, a foreshorn voice, a red nose and a perpetual "stilt." Someday the East is going to wake up, and find out how funny it really is when it tries to show the West what the West is supposed to be like.

"THIS IS MY 45TH BIRTHDAY" Frank F. Westbrook

Dr. Frank F. Westbrook, who recently became president of the University of British Columbia, the most richly endowed university in the world, was born in Brant county, Ontario, July 12, 1868. After graduating from the University of Manitoba in 1887 he attended the University of Cambridge, and continued his medical studies in London, Dublin and Marburg. He served for a time as professor of pathology and bacteriology at the University of Manitoba, and in 1895 accepted a similar position at the University of Minnesota. In 1906 he became dean of the medical college of the University of Minnesota.

Congratulations to: Prince John, youngest son of King George and Queen Mary, 8 years old today. Richard Carl, well known comedian, 42 years old today. Prince Louis, heir to the throne of Monaco, 33 years old today. Newell Sanders, former United States senator from Tennessee, 63 years old today. Dr. William Osler, noted physician and educator, 64 years old today.

STATE BOARD'S HELP DESIRED

sons of the year. It seemed to be the general opinion that the water entered the gravel vein at some point well up on the Clackamas river, and that there would probably be found a constant supply. Owing to the rock formations nearby, it was not thought that the water could come from the Willamette river, or from Abernethy creek. In the course of the discussion, Dr. Mount gave some opinions as to the filtration powers of the gravel vein, but did not say that he regarded such filtration as absolute protection against organisms in the water. The gravel bed, however, was regarded as a great factor for safety in the supply.

Mr. Tooze also told the members of the two committees that he was going to have the test well sealed in some way, so that none but the engineers, the drillers and members of the committee could have access to it between the various tests that he will have made.

TEST WELL EXPENSES WILL BE MET BY CCITY

Mayor Linn E. Jones Friday signed the ordinance appropriating $350 for extra expenses in making water tests, and for drilling the test wells on the Englebrecht property, north of the city limits, in a search for a pure supply. This is the ordinance which brought on the lively discussion at last Wednesday's council meeting, and against the passage of which Councilman Holman and Albright went on record.

FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

SOME OBSERVATIONS

OREGON CITY, Or., July 10.—(Editor of the Enterprise)—Quite an amount of talk has been indulged in regarding city water and the source from which to obtain it.

Friend Tooze has fun poked at him from all quarters regarding his "musk rat holes" on the Englebrecht tract

Unique Pageant Presented by One Thousand I. W. W. Strikers

ONE thousand I. W. W. strikers from the silk mills of Paterson, N. J., appeared in a huge pageant in Madison Square Garden, New York city, to enlist sympathy in their labor war and to raise funds to carry on the strike. All the principal scenes in their strike were re-enacted in as life-like manner as possible. The men and women were shown quitting the mills, establishing pickets, holding open air meetings, standing in the bread line and holding the funeral of one of their comrades who was slain in a riot with the police. This last named scene is illustrated above.

Premontion.

He was brought to Bellevue hospital with some injury to the skull, and a surgeon, having examined the wound, determined to keep the man in the ward for a day or two.

Too Slow.

"Why has your daughter dropped her hospital work so soon?" "She found she'd have to nurse poor patients for two years before they trusted her with any millionaires. So she's going on the stage in a musical comedy."—Kansas City Journal.

Utality.
