MORAL Moral suasion is a fine suasion thing in its place, and so is the good, old-fashioned slipper with the leather sole. Moral suasion is great stuff to use on adolescent youths and maidens who can appreciate it, but for the boy who thinks that he is just old enough to feel that he ought to draw up and present a declaration of independence to his parents or guardians there is nothing like a good, warm, sound, spanking. Mother's slipper may be objected to as having an element of danger in it, owing to its tendency to have sharp edges and nails; but mother's hand, or father's for that matter, can always be recommended.

For instance: one idea of moral suasion these days is to "scare" delinquent childhood by halting it to the juvenile courts, there to be reprimanded by a jurist who must sometimes find it difficult to keep a grave and sober face. Trotting youngsters to a juvenile court may be all very well when the kids are really bad; but when they are simply naughty it is a dangerous procedure. It undermines the authority of the father and mother, it gives the lad or lass, if they are so inclined, opportunity to consider themselves real criminals with a tendency to emulate Jesse James or Lucretia Borgia—and then it is a waste of the courts' time. Many a child is made actually wayward by too much moral suasion at home, too much threat of the juvenile court, too much effort to spare the rod. Many a child would straighten up and grow to be a useful and honest citizen if roundly spanked, as its fathers and mothers were, when it needs it. Our modern civilization has found substitutes for many things which were deemed necessary in former days, but the substitute for mother's hand, strenuously and properly applied when needed, has not yet been invented. All of which will bear consideration by parents and others interested.

ALL ON THE Astrology may be SAME DAY mythical, as far as its scientific value goes, but there is no getting away from the fact that there are peculiar coincidences to be discovered by the person who has a fad for dates. For instance, forty-one years ago today Roald Amundsen was born. He is the amiable gentleman who first reached the South Pole, it will be recalled. His entire life has been one of adventure and of daring, he has penetrated the wilderness and put upon the map many spots that were not there before. This he did, undoubtedly because of his character, and not because he happened to be born upon the 16th day of July.

However, this 16th day of July seems to be more or less tangled up with adventure in strange lands and strange places. It seems to be a day given over, in the years, to pioneering or to pioneers. It was on the 16th day of July, 1905, that one Robert E. Peary left once again on a search for the North Pole. Whether or not Robert gained that geometric spot depends largely upon whether or not one belongs to the "Cook club" or to the "Peary club." But he started for there on the anniversary of Amundsen's birth, and Amundsen got to the other pole. Likewise there was born on July 16, 1821, so it is said, one Mary Baker G. Eddy. Possibly she was not born with the full completeness of that name, but it is used here for purposes of identification solely. Mrs. Eddy pioneered in her own field, she was a seeker after what had heretofore been unattained, and she discovered many things, one of which was an interpretation of the Scriptures that for consistency has not been equalled

"Twin Brothers" of Royalty As Like as Two Peas In Pod

Photo copyright, 1913, by American Press Association. This interesting picture of the "twin brother" rulers of Europe shows how strikingly alike are the czar of Russia and King George of England. Perhaps you might have to look twice to tell "who's who" if this text did not state that the czar is on the left. They both have the same kind of mustache and beard and the same general outline of nose, mouth, ears and eyes. The picture was taken at the recent wedding of the German kaiser's daughter. The czar and King George are first cousins. Russia's ruler is forty-five and England's monarch forty-eight.

BRITISH COLLEGE WORK THOROUGH

EUGENE, Or., July 15.—"The Oxford ideal in education" was presented to the University of Oregon summer school today by Harold G. Merriam of Beloit college. Prof. Merriam, who is a member of the summer school faculty, was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, appointed from the state of Wyoming. "Self reliance is the main quality Oxford succeeds in cultivating in its students to a degree conspicuously in advance of the American college," he said. "Self reliance and the philosophic habit of mind that enables a man to grasp a whole subject, to see the idea through the facts, are the basis of the Oxford system. "In comparison with the average Oxford student, the American youth shows two defects: the inability to stick to a subject long enough to accomplish real results and the inability to grasp a subject as a whole."

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON FAITH AND SERVICE. In climbing the upward path the staff we use is service—not the service of others to us, but our service to others. The world's idea of service is an inverted truth. It is in reality the only badge of nobility and helps him that gives more than him that takes. The true service is that which is given for love, not hire. It may be to an individual, which is good, or to the race, which is better, for then it is multiplied. The climbing of the path is the only success. All other achievements, if they are in the line of true success at all, are but contributory to this. Fame, wealth, power, place, are but opportunities for greater service, therefore aids to more rapid climbing. But while they may help us they may also hinder, for if used selfishly and not for the good of others they become weights to drag us backward. There is much free advice nowadays on the achieving of success. Most of it is good, perhaps at least in its intent. But it would seem that in many of the precepts on the subject the one great source of success is largely overlooked, and not only the source, but the goal, for the two are one. Faith in God is the only true means of winning success, and to this truth all history bears witness. Faith is not alone a sentiment. It is the most rational and actual thing in the universe. It is a positive force. Faith heals the body and builds the character. It is as essential to business as breath is to life. It never disappoints any one who really takes hold of it. It becomes a stay, a support and an inspiration. It was by faith that Luther shook the world, that Lincoln ruled, that Cromwell won his battles. Faith in God is an actual working hypothesis, the most real thing on which we can seize to lift us to success. No conspicuous triumph was ever achieved in any other way. Trust in the Father and ask him to show you the way; render service to others; overcome your baser passions and use your self conquests as stepping stones; make all things contributory to your soul growth, and thus you will climb forever the upward path.

ORIGIN OF QUARANTINE.

Dr. Richard Mead's Action During the Plague of 1721. To Dr. Richard Mead, who was in consultation at the deathbed of Queen Anne and became physician to George I., was due the credit of having first established quarantine. In 1721, when the plague ravaged Marseilles and its contagious origin was discredited, Dr. Mead declared the plague to be "a contagious distemper," and a quarantine was enjoined. He also proposed a system of medical police, which finds its counterpart in the health officers of today. It was he who declared, "As nastiness is a great source of infection, so cleanliness is the greatest preventative." He it was who said nearly 200 years ago: "If there be any Contagious Distemper in the Ship the Sound men should leave their Cloaths, which should be burnt, the men washed and shaved and having fresh Cloaths, should stay in Lazaretto—that is, quarantine—thirty to forty days. The reason for this is because Persons may be recovered from a Disease themselves and yet retain matter of Infection about them a considerable time." In practice Mead was without a rival, his receipts averaging for several years between $3,000 and $7,000, an enormous sum in relation to the value of money at that period. He possessed a rare taste for collecting. But his books, his statues, his medals, were not to amuse only his own leisure. The humble student, the unrequited foreigner, the poor inquirer, derived as much enjoyment from these treasures as their owner. At his table might be seen the most eminent men of the age. Pope was a ready guest, and the delicate poet was sure to be regaled with his favorite dish of sweetbreads. Matthew Arnold and the Girls. Of Matthew Arnold as a school examiner a tale is told by a fellow inspector of a class of girl pupil teachers that he asked Arnold to examine for him. Arnold gave them all the excellent mark. "But," said the other inspector, "surely they are not all as good as they can be. Some must be better than others." "Perhaps that is so," replied Arnold. "But then, you see, they are all such very nice girls."

Farmers Should Co-operate. It Is Worth While.

By SETH LOW, Former Mayor of New York City, President of the National Civic Federation. THE late Dr. Knapp of the United States agricultural department used to say that "farming is one part science, three parts art and four parts business." The ordinary farmer would do well to increase his knowledge of the science of farming, to say nothing of the art. On the side of business management he NEEDS HELP if he is to succeed, for to succeed in farming it is not enough to produce. ONE MUST BE ABLE BOTH TO PRODUCE ECONOMICALLY AND TO SELL ADVANTAGEOUSLY. It is precisely here that co-operation is so important for the farmer, for co-operation ought to do for the small farmer precisely what he cannot do for himself. CO-OPERATION OUGHT TO GIVE HIM EXPERT INFORMATION AS TO THE BEST CROPS TO RAISE AND HOW TO RAISE THEM; IT OUGHT TO ENABLE HIM TO BUY WHAT HE NEEDS MORE CHEAPLY AND TO SELL WHAT HE PRODUCES TO BETTER ADVANTAGE; IT OUGHT TO BE ABLE TO HELP HIM TO KEEP ACCOUNTS SO THAT HE CAN DETECT WASTE AND LEARN HOW TO IMPROVE HIS METHODS. IN A WORD, IT OUGHT TO DO FOR HIM JUST WHAT HE CANNOT DO WELL FOR HIMSELF. It is hard in the east, where the farmers are not used to co-operation, to learn how to co-operate, for we come of an ancestry whose great merit it was that each one of them could stand upon his own feet. But if the eastern farmers are again to prosper they must all LEARN TO CO-OPERATE WITH EACH OTHER. It may be said without fear of successful contradiction that through well managed co-operation the small farmer can get his supplies at least as cheaply as the farmer with large capital. Is not this WORTH WHILE?
