VIOLATING THE SABBATH have called upon the sheriff and asked him to prevent the performance of a circus in the immediate neighborhood of this city in the near future, the exhibition being billed to occur upon a Sunday afternoon and evening. The ministers point out that the coming performance is what they believe to be a violation of the state law, and they think that the county peace officer ought not to permit it.

Whether or not the performance of a circus on Sunday is a violation of the law is a matter that will be decided by the deputy district attorney for this district. There is another side to the question, however, which perhaps may merit some comment. Aside from the legal technicalities involved in the case, the question arises as to whether or not the circus is an ethical wrong, and whether its influence upon the community will be harmful.

During the summer months it is not customary, in many of the churches, to hold services except in the morning on the Sabbath day. This being the case, it does not appear that any other popular attraction on Sunday afternoon will interfere with church life. Aside from its religious import, Sunday is generally observed as a day of rest and recreation; and attending a circus is a form of recreation that is quite generally enjoyed, from the small boy who delights to feed peanuts to the elephant, to the older person who likes to see the youngsters enjoy themselves, and who incidentally likes to go to the circus likewise, but who hates to admit it.

It would seem that the efforts of the good men who object to the circus are rather narrowly drawn, and that some ethical hairs must have been split by their reasoning. To most people there is less harm in going to the circus than there is in many other things that are commonly done upon the Sabbath, both by church-goers and by those who do not attend divine worship. The enjoyment one obtains from witnessing a circus or a "Wild West" performance, for instance, is a good deal less fraught with danger than is that peculiar form of enjoyment to be found in cheap dances which are often held upon Sunday; and going to a circus is surely better than going "fishing" on the river accompanied by numerous bottles and flasks.

The days of Puritanical Sabbaths have passed, largely because the rest of the week, in these days of grace, is taken up by much more tiring and exhausting work than was done in former days. Throughout six days of each week, nowadays, most of us are engaged in earning our bread and butter, and the pressure of the times has become so great that the effort expended in this necessary task is sufficiently exhausting to make us want to forget the wordaday world entirely on Sunday, and either rest at home or go away out into the fields, there to get at first hand a demonstration of the wonderful works of Nature, and of the far-reaching purpose of the Almighty. The average man can get quite as much uplift for his soul from actual communion with Mother Earth, in some of her varied forms, on the Sabbath, as he can from listening to the average discourse from the average pulpit. This being true, it is a considerable tribute to the church and its power, and the devotion of people in general to it, that as many attend divine worship as do.

Under the gracious and wise laws of this state theatres are permitted to operate upon Sunday, and to furnish entertainment to the people. Yet what is offered on many a stage is far less uplifting than what is offered at the circus. In fact the modern circus may be said to be pure fun and enjoyment, and stripped of its "Oriental dances" and its "three-card mente man," it has nothing in its make-up to offend even the most strict of humans.

Attendance by the public at a circus on Sunday may draw somewhat from some church services, but in this warm weather and summertime, it will not draw a very appreciable amount. And aside from this, efforts of any church to dictate to the people in general what they shall do, and what they shall not do, upon the one day of rest that is granted out of the seven, will not tend to make friends for that particular church. This is an age of broadmindedness and of compromise; an age in which people are guided largely by their own consciences. Efforts of any men or group of men to suggest that the public conscience is lax, or that it is incapable of dealing with public problems, is not apt to work for the ultimate advancement in popularity of these men. Ministers of the church today are complaining generally of the falling off of interest in church matters, and while they doubtless have grounds for their complaint; the reason for the fault lies not with the people, but with the churches themselves, for they do not offer to the public at large that which the public wants. Fighting popular amusement will not profit any organization, secular or otherwise.

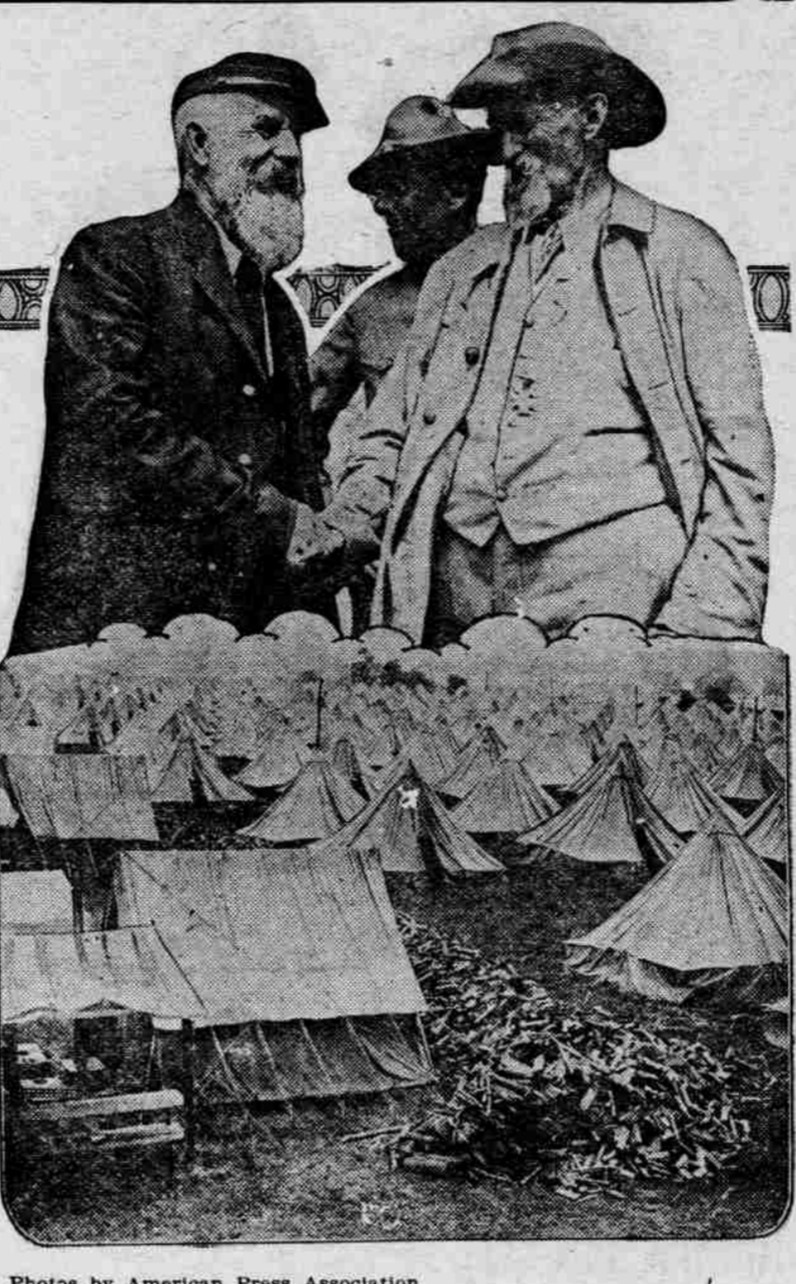

DON'T FORGET Monday, Tuesday, —DO IT NOW Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week are the few days that remain in which voters may register for the recall election. Grave charges have been preferred against the county court. These charges have been answered by the officials of the county, through the press and by personal statements. The people have heard both sides of the case, and whatever may be their opinion of the matter, they should go to the polls and vote on August 16 as their consciences may dictate in the matter.

Citizens who have this sacred duty to perform cannot do it unless they are registered. It therefore behooves every true citizen to see to it that his name is entered upon the rolls, else he cannot do his duty and vote at the coming election. The citizen who is satisfied that the county court has conducted its business in an honorable way, and for the best interests of the county, and who desires to keep at the head of the county government the men who have lifted the district out of debt and put it upon a business basis, cannot express their commendation of the present officers as they should unless they register. Those other citizens, who believe the charges preferred by a group of disgruntled and disappointed seekers after their own advancement, and who have been led to believe that the recall is justified, cannot vote their way without registering. Therefore it is important to all, on both sides of the cause, to register.

The motto of every citizen of Clackamas county, no matter what his personal opinions may be, should be henceforth:

"Register, don't delay, DO IT NOW."

Echoes From Semicentennial Of Gettysburg's Great Battle

Photos by American Press Association.

THE big thing, the thing that gripped you, about the recent fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg was the spirit of reunion back of the great mobilization of veterans. It demonstrated on a bigger, more genuine, scale than ever before that the old bitterness of the civil war had been buried long ago in the grave of forgotten deeds. Men who fifty years ago tried to slaughter one another shook hands and swapped yarns of the war in the good fellowship of old age. These pictures were taken at the big encampment. The top one shows how many a Yank and rebel of half a century ago shook hands with the best of good feeling for each other and for the nation in which they live. The lower picture shows part of the 5,000 tents used by the 40,000 vets.

For the Baby's Bath. There's no sweeter sight in the world than a dear, tiny baby splashing about in its bath, and the giving of that bath gives joy to any mother. It is a task that she cannot always accomplish conveniently, however, for the ordinary wash basin is too small, and "munch splashing maketh the rug wet." The bathtub is as much too big, and it's a back-breaking business to bend down over it. Now there has been invented the dearest little tub for a baby that ever was. It's of rubber and is fastened to a metal frame, which, joy of joys, can be hooked right to the sides of the big tub, and there it swings like a little hammock within the larger tub. It is at a convenient height, and the splashing drop where they can do no damage. The tub is easily emptied, for it is only necessary to pull one of the side rods out of its rubber casing and the little tub immediately empties its contents into the big bathtub. The whole thing comes apart and can be folded up and put away until it is needed again. Isn't this a convenient thing?

Reading For Sick Children. When a sick child wants to read, but is too weak to hold a book, get some pages of brown paper about foolscap size and paste on them short stories, verses or amusing pictures. These are quite light and handy to hold and can be made very interesting with little or no trouble.

ANTAGONISM. Do not be afraid of antagonism, but face it manfully and with intelligence. He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper. This conflict with difficulty makes us acquainted with our object and compels us to consider it in all its relations. It will not suffer us to be superficial. — Edmund Burke.

Kitchen Hint. An old piano stool will be found useful in the kitchen, as it can be adjusted to different heights.

Incentive to Gamble Furnished by Stock Exchange Is Its Greatest Evil

By WILLARD V. KING, President of the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company, New York

THE greatest evil of all which the Stock Exchange furnishes is the INCENTIVE TO GAMBLING. It looks so easy to put up a hundred dollars and to stand a chance of winning several times that amount that great numbers of people are led into this form of gambling who CANNOT AFFORD TO TAKE THE HAZARD. For of course the odds are against the gambler, because he must pay commissions and taxes out of his profits in addition to his losses.

There is no doubt that many men have permitted their attention to be distracted from their proper business because of a "flier on the exchange," and many others have FALLEN INTO CRIME ON ACCOUNT OF VENTURES WHICH RESULTED IN LOSSES WHICH THEIR OWN PURSES COULD NOT MEET.

Countless ways have been proposed for checking this evil, but without success, and it looks as if it were a NECESSARY INCIDENT OF THIS BUSINESS. Of course it largely depends on the attitude of the stockbroker. If he is intent only on making commissions he will encourage every one to speculate. Even with the highest ideals a broker cannot be sure whether a customer can afford the chance of loss.

OBVIOUSLY ONLY THOSE SHOULD SPECULATE WHO CAN AFFORD TO PAY THEIR LOSSES WITHOUT DISTRESS. THIS COMES TO SAYING THAT THE SPECULATOR SHOULD BE ABLE TO PAY IN FULL FOR HIS PURCHASES AND NOT CARRY THEM ON MARGIN. IF HE CAN DO THIS HE CAN BE INDIFFERENT TO THE FLUCTUATIONS OF THE MARKET, BECAUSE THEN NO ONE CAN COMPEL HIM TO SELL AT A LOSS.

The exchange is a LOSING VENTURE to a large majority of the people who indulge in it and is almost certain disaster to those who speculate with inadequate capital.

"THIS IS MY 62ND BIRTHDAY"

Guillermo Billinghurst
Guillermo Billinghurst, president of Peru, was born in Arica, Peru, July 27, 1851. His parents were English. He attended school in Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso. He made his debut in political life in 1874, when he was elected secretary of the province of Iquique. Four years later this province sent him to the Chamber of Deputies, where he represented it until the war broke out between Peru and Chile. He organized the Red Cross service in Peru and took a brilliant part in the campaign, rising to the command of the northern army. The province of Iquique fell to Chile as the spoils of war, but General Billinghurst remained there as Peruvian consul-general. Last September he was elected president of the republic to succeed Agosto Leguia.

Congratulations to:
Ollie M. James, United States senator from Kentucky, 42 years old today.
Prince Oscar of Prussia, fifth son of the German emperor, 25 years old today.
John R. Freeman, a leading authority on hydraulic engineering, 58 years old today.

MANY ENJOY PARTY

Two score members of the younger set of Gladstone were entertained Saturday evening by Miss Frances Cross and Miss Pansy Oswald, at the latter's home at Fern Ridge. The evening was spent with games and music, a duet by Lyle Gault and Mend Oswald being one of the features. Enjoyable refreshments were served before the party broke up.
